"GOOD ART" or "BAD ART"
...what would your judgment be?

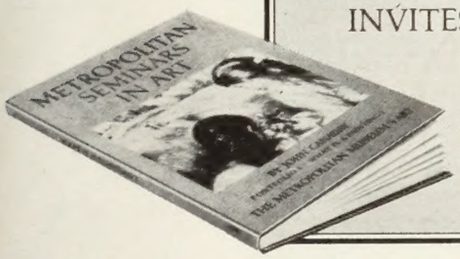
THE STORM by Pierre Auguste Cot

HERE ARE TWO PAINTINGS, both of the same subject, and both discussed in the first portfolio of the Metropolitan Museum's Seminars in Art P[illegible]e at left was held in the highest critical esteem in the 1880s. Today it would be dismissed by most critics as mawkishly sentimental. The other painting was damned as degenerate in the early part of this century. Now it is considered to be one of the finest examples of expressionist art. If you were unexpectedly asked to judge these paintings, would you, like so many people, be tongue-tied, fearful of exposing ignorance by making any comment at all? A surprising number of otherwise cultivated persons have a blind spot as far as painting is concerned. Visiting a museum, they stand before a famous or respected work of art and see nothing beyond what the painting is "about"—and frequently they are unsure even of that.

THE TEMPEST by Oskar Kokoschka

Anyone who suffers from this form of bafflement probably never has had the opportunity to take a good art appreciation course at a university or attend a clarifying series of lectures at a museum. It was to remedy this situation that the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York devised an unusual program of assisted self-education in the understanding and appreciation of art. The invitation below is made to acquaint you with the thorough nature of the program and particularly its unique method of learning by comparison among great paintings.



The Metropolitan Museum of Art

INVITES YOU TO ACCEPT FOR TWO WEEKS' EXAMINATION

THE FIRST PORTFOLIO OF

ART SEMINARS IN THE HOME

Published and administered by Book-of-the-Month Club, Inc.

THE IDEA: A well-rounded and comprehensive course of lectures in the appreciation of art in which the whole family can participate. You learn by comparison among paintings, utilizing no fewer than 144 large full-color [illegible]nts of great works....It is like being conducted over a period of time through all the world's museums by experienced lecturers who make clear the fundamental things to look for in whatever paintings you may see.

EACH LESSON comes in the form of a portfolio, the core of which is the lecture. But in each portfolio is a pocket containing twelve large full-color reproductions. These pictures are provided separately so that they can be compared side by side with one another to clarify whatever points the lecture aims to illuminate. They have a great advantage, however, over reproductions thrown upon a screen in a lecture hall: they can be more faithful to the originals, can be studied for as long as one wants, and can be referred to again and again. Another advantage is that members of a family can "take the course" either separately or simultaneously—husband and wife, parent and teen-age child. Reading each portfolio aloud, and examining the reproductions together, is like visiting a museum together, pointing out to one another something to be appreciated and enjoyed.

HOW THE COURSE OPERATES • One can enroll in this program of twelve portfolios just as one would enroll in a semester course in art at a university—with one important difference: you may, if you wish, drop out of the program at any point without proceeding with the complete course. The portfolios are sent consecutively—one every thirty days—but you may, of course, proceed at whatever rate you choose. The price of each portfolio is $3.75 (plus a small charge for mailing expense). This cost includes the twelve separate full-color reproductions, mat size 9½" by 12½", which come with each portfolio. In most retail stores each set of twelve would sell by itself, in comparable reproductions, for from $6 to $7.50.

CONTENTS OF THE TWELVE PORTFOLIOS

INCORPORATING LIVING FOR YOUNG HOMEMAKERS

TOM LEONARD

On the cover: Small paintings, a collection of Worcester plates, exuberant freehand bouquets of garden marigolds—all add to the summer-morning radiance that fills the Southampton, N. Y., living room of Mr. & Mrs. Hugh Virgil Sherrill. Mrs. Sherrill likes to display her treasures where they can be enjoyed every day, every hour, without ever becoming overpowering or intimidating. Another of her enthusiasms: mother-of-pearl-inlaid Victorian lacquer furniture such as the chair at the left of the corner sofa, the coffee table next to it, and the little round table by the window. Additional examples make bright black accents throughout the house. Interior designer, Betty Sherrill of McMillen, Inc. Hair color so natural only her hairdresser knows for sure!™

A little extra surprise

She says "happy birthday" to her kids in so many ways. To her, birthdays are fun—even her own. Because she makes sure the happiest time—and her loveliest look—is always now! Her hair is always perfection. The color fresh, young—the hair itself in wonderful condition. These are the little extras she counts on from Miss Clairol®...little extras that mount up to perfection.

No other type of haircoloring can perform so dependably...go so much lighter or brighter—cover gray so completely—and still come out soft and lively, so beautifully even time after time. So if you want an exciting change—or even just a fresher, younger version of your own color—for this time in your life, take the little time it takes to get perfection. Get Miss Clairol.

NAPOLEON III MANTEL CLOCK

We would appreciate any comments on our French black marble clock. It weighs approximately 40 pounds. The only markings are on the movement: A.D. Mougin, a printed star beneath, deux Medailles, and the number 411 below. R.J.F.—Pawcatuck, Conn.

Your mantel clock is of the Napoleon III period, 1852–1870. The maker, A.D. Mougin, was a Paris clockmaker; 411 was the design number. Two of his designs won medals at expositions.

SÈVRES PASTORAL GROUP

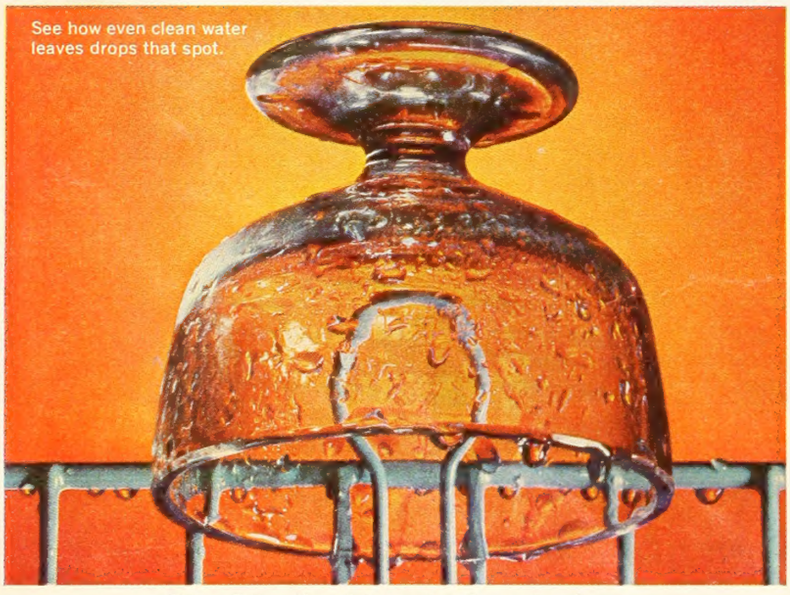
I received this bisque group as a gift. The marks are L G, Sèvres, and in a triangle, S 1910. I am anxious to know more about it. C.B.—Hannibal, Mo.

Your porcelain group is from the famous French porcelain factory of Sèvres. It was made in 1910 and L G must be the initials of the artist, but his name is unrecorded.

These markings appear on my grandmother's set of china. Would it be possible for you to trace the age and origin of the set?
H.B.S., Sr.—Gallatin, Tenn.

The mark on your ironstone is that of Anthony Shaw & Co., who made that ware in Tunstall, Staffordshire, England. He was in business from 1851 to 1882.

IRONSTONE MARK



REGENCY WRITING BOX

The outside cover of my old writing box has an intricate pattern of inlaid wood. The inside is lined in velvet bound in tooled leather. What would be its approximate age?
S.S.—Pasadena, Calif.

It dates between 1820 and 1830, and the elaborate inlay leads me to believe it is an English Regency piece.

Notes for the Hostess

BY DIANA BRYAN

By way of making the most of the outdoor cooking season, I got Don a large French steel oval frying pan that ought to be just the thing for his many potato mixtures, fish dishes, and crazy egg concoctions. It sits firmly on the grill and it has a long handle to keep the cook from being scorched. The steel is heavy enough for slow cooking, and the pan won't buckle over a hotter fire. If Don will ever lend it to me, I'd like to try it for the red flannel hash we love for Sunday brunch. Discovered the skillet among the many cooking utensils at La Cuisinière in New York.

Browsing in a shop in Englewood, N. J., not long ago, I came across a handsome collection of Mexican tôle plates, matching candle lamps, casserole covers, even a cruet set —terrific for casual alfresco dining. The opaque tôle finish in earthy shades of gold, green, or red has the subtle look of a natural patina. And there is a great variety of plate sizes from a 4-inch butter plate to a large 14-inch dinner plate. Although this decorated tinware must be handwashed, it is otherwise impervious to breaking or chipping and looks beautifully at home outdoors. But that doesn't mean that it wouldn't be great for an informal winter table setting. The shop where I found it was La Puerta del Sol.

Lemon juice is one thing, lemon oil another. It's so hard to squeeze enough of the oil from the rind to make it worthwhile. A dozen lemons and no fingernails later, you have no more than a few drops, so I suspect a great many people pass up its unexcelled flavor when they're making drinks or cooking. But now Revord-James & Co., has come up with "Twist-O-Lemon" in an atomizer bottle that makes it easy to give a gourmet whiff of lemon oil to iced tea. Martinis, or gin and tonic in particular—or to add a delicate piquancy to fish, melon, avocado, ice cream. I also love to spray just a bit of it around to scent a room. It's so highly concentrated, a little goes a long way. I wish they would come up with a counterpart in mint.

Soup is usually thought of as winter fare, but not in our house, because we love cold soup. It can be made so easily in advance and is wonderful to have on hand to serve—along with sandwiches—to morning tennis guests. Our soup-and-sandwich combinations range from plain to fancy. Don's favorite is real Valencia Gazpacho, that marvelous cold tomato soup from Spain, and all its trimmings—separate bowls of garlic croutons, finely chopped cucumber, and green pepper to add just before eating. We like this with thin bread and sweet butter sandwiches. Another good combination is cold curried cream of chicken soup accompanied by whole wheat bread and chutney sandwiches. A third soup-and-sandwich go-together is clear watercress soup teamed up with smoked salmon on paper-thin pumpernickel. Sometimes we substitute salad for the sandwiches. Fruit soup has an affinity for spinach and orange salad. Turtle-and-green-pea soup is satisfyingly rounded out with sliced raw mushrooms, raw zucchini, and watercress dressed with oil and lemon juice.

Our daughter just improvised a provocative centerpiece of the semi-edible type—a veritable cabbage of roses. She hollowed out the center of a very curly savoy cabbage, and slipped a jar filled with water inside to serve as a container for short-stemmed full-blown roses. When someone accused her of making a play on words, she agreed to use nasturtiums or zinnias next time instead of the roses. She is also working on the idea of taking a flat, full Boston lettuce, circling it with tiny heads of Bibb lettuce, then filling the center of the big head with small flowers tricked out with sprigs of parsley.

Even with air conditioning, you still need electronic air cleaning

Air conditioning is great for cooling, but it takes an electronic air cleaner to effectively remove airborne dust, dirt and pollen.

Most people believe that once they have installed air conditioning, they have solved their entire home comfort problem. It is a likely assumption because air conditioning makes a tremendous difference. Your family will sleep sound, wake refreshed, and enjoy ideal resort temperatures in an air conditioned home, no matter how hot it gets outside.

But, great as air conditioning is, there is another factor which can cause discomfort. That's airborne dust and pollen.

It's a fact that the mechanical filters found in air conditioning systems trap about 10%* of the airborne dust and pollen, but a Honeywell Electronic Air Cleaner removes up to 95%*, including particles so tiny it would take about 7,000 of them to cover this (·) dot.

Invisible particles can do real damage

They often irritate allergies or cause discomfort, soil furniture and draperies, put a dingy haze on windows and mirrors, and leave ghostly white areas lurking behind pictures.

Work as a team

An air conditioning system doesn't do the job of a Honeywell Electronic Air Cleaner. They work together for a new level of home comfort.

With air conditioning alone, you still have these invisible particles in the air to lessen your enjoyment.

Install together and save

The Honeywell Electronic Air Cleaner installs in the return air duct of any forced air system. The duct work has to be opened to install air conditioning so you save on installation costs if you install both together.

*As measured by the National Bureau of Standards Dust Spot Method.

CAPITOL RECORD CLUB announces its

NEW RECORD CLUB PURCHASE PLAN

This amazing trial membership plan lets you choose seven records you want now for only $1 and order current hit albums as you want them over the coming months. In this way you can obtain the very latest albums on top labels for an average of $2.19 each plus shipping. Then, if you continue as a member, you may even obtain records for an average of $1.99 each plus shipping. Here's how:

First of all, as a trial member, you get 7 records for only $1 if you buy one now and agree to purchase 7 more within the next year. It adds up to 15 records for barely more than the price of 8. Averaged out, it brings the cost of $3.98 records, for example, down to only $2.19 plus shipping.

And now, in addition, a new bonus plan, bringing your average cost per record down even lower! For every record you buy after you have fulfilled your trial membership you receive a valuable bonus certificate. Save six of these and exchange them for another six records free. Averaged out, this brings the cost of records down to as little as $1.99 plus shipping.

Many other benefits too! A new big Club magazine filled with news and pictures of top stars. A wide range of choice—over 300 records a month to choose from. Charge privileges. No dues or enrollment fees; no contests to enter. Read more about these benefits on the stub of the bound-in card. Then indicate your 7 records on the postpaid reply card, detach, and mail.

Notes for July gardeners

Almost nothing you do this month seems very important, yet almost everything you do is

First weekend

Block party. One of the most serviceable of all garden aids—concrete blocks—can be bought for something like 30c each at your local building supply or lumber yard. They are useful as temporary steps, to hold simple grade changes, and as enclosures for compost heaps; you can stack them two or three deep to make walls up to 24 inches high (depending on the use) without mortar or cement. You can place them on end to make fine pedestals for terrace pots of summer flowers, or four of them in a Maltese-cross arrangement to form a sturdy support for a heavy tub or flowerpot up to 18 inches or more in base diameter. Since they are cut out in the middle, several blocks arranged on edge make a fine see-through support for a whole row of flowerpots. Set flat in the ground, either flush with soil surface or raised slightly, they make amiable planters, depending, of course, on the shape and size of their holes.

Standard size of these concrete blocks is 8 by 8 by 16 inches, but there are jumbo sizes, too. Most are made with a trio of cut-out ovals down the center. Or, instead of ovals, the cutouts may be three rectangular holes, two square holes, or several round holes in two or more rows per block. A well-stocked yard should have blocks in a variety of styles.

The block makers seem to have caught on to the idea that their simple, heavy, functional product has great decorative possibilities. At an outdoor sculpture show in Rotterdam, Holland, a few years ago, all the works were displayed on pedestals made of concrete blocks. Each pedestal consisted of from nine to about eighty blocks, no two alike, held together by cement. The holes in the blocks made the designs. In fact, the pedestals looked almost better than the sculpture. So, try a modified backyard do-it-yourself version for your summer terrace.

Second weekend

Step steps. There are rules of thumb that tell a builder—or an architect, for that matter—how high each step in a flight of stairs should rise, and how deep each tread should be from front to back for easy navigation. But somehow when the stairs are outdoors, the usual indoor rules of thumb do not always seem to apply. While the general rule calls for a total combined height of riser and width of tread of somewhere around 22 inches (say 7 inches up and 16 across the tread), that may not always be the most comfortable on a grassy slope or in the rock garden. Outdoor inclines may be more readily negotiated if the tread allows for two steps forward while the risers provide for only one step up. There is no special reason this should be so, except that outdoors is different than indoors. And the general run of people seem to tire less easily if a steep flight has long treads.

Bearing all this in mind, and the law of averages notwithstanding, we suggest you conduct some experiments of your own before you construct a flight of garden steps. The best way we know is to pick, in some public park, a flight of steps that you know is steeper than you would like and walk up it diagonally, at various angles, until you find a tread width that seems most compatible with the riser height. Let us say that the riser height seems satisfactory to begin with, but that the tread width is too short. If the actual rise is 7 inches, and the actual tread width is 15 inches, plot a course that gives you an effective tread width of 17 inches; see if you don't like it better. You do this, of course, by moving up the stairs slightly across the slope. When you find a ratio of tread to riser that seems good to you, note your starting point and finishing point, draw a straight sight between them, and measure the effective tread width along that line. Then you have the magic combination for you.

You may need to sample a dozen or so stair flights to find a riser that you like, before you can fit a tread width to it and come up with an acceptable final result. But if you don't actually run up and down, the experiment should prove healthful as well as practical. The chief thing to remember is that each flight of stairs in your garden is a separate and individual adventure—especially if your building materials are rough stone, or old railroad ties, or logs and earth.

Third weekend

Divisible plants. Some plants must be lifted in whole clumps, broken up or worked apart above ground, and then replanted in separate divisions. Others may be simply cut apart as they grow in the ground, and the outer pieces then pried up and replanted in new locations. While there is bound to be some wear and tear in the latter process, certain plants seem not to require more careful handling. So they may be effectively divided at frequent intervals and with a minimum of thrashing about on your part. Plants that can be handled this way include hosta (plantain-lily), galax, pachysandra, Vinca minor (creeping myrtle), ajuga (bugleweed), and big clumps of hemerocallis (day-lily). It is a waste of effort to dig an established clump of hosta and then try to pry it apart: you might better spare yourself the digging effort and simply slash into it, pie-fashion, with a sharp spade. Then it is fairly easy to pry out the cut sections and set them elsewhere. In a few weeks, the new portions will have rounded out and the old ones have filled in. A few of the tightly interlaced roots and the leaves above will have been somewhat mangled, but that resulting loss will be negligible. Best of all, the remaining part of the clump will suffer almost no check in either root growth or top growth—or, for that matter, in flowering stems. In July and with hostas, that could be important. Day-lilies have a similar tough and tight habit of growth, and the others lend themselves almost as readily to a similar process.

Provided the new earth that is to receive the division is friable and fertile, and provided both the new and old parts of the plant are watered well, July is a perfectly acceptable dividing month. For what it is worth, we suggest that an old bayonet, if you happen to have one handy, may be put to excellent use in this kind of multiplication process. Not for the tough hostas and hemerocallis, though; for them nothing less than a spade or a mattock will do.

Fourth weekend

The must-divides. While the procedures above are optional, for some plants dividing is well nigh compulsory every few seasons. Iris and daffodils come to mind at once. For when an iris rhizome (represented above ground by a single fan of leaves) has produced one flowering stalk, it will never produce another. It will, in fact, not even produce another fan of leaves. The new leaves, and subsequent flowering shoots, are produced by new rhizomes that grow like ears from the side of the old one. In three seasons or so, a ring of young and more or less productive growth will hide the dead and unproductive old crowns, and you may be lulled into a false sense of faith. So every three years, at most, fork up the whole clump (this applies chiefly to the bearded garden iris), cut off the new rhizomes that will have started into growth at the sides of the old by the end of July, and reset them, with their ropey roots widely spread in a descending V, about an inch below the soil surface. Let the new young leaves grow as they will (do not cut back the old leaves at this stage of the game), and you may expect good flowers the following spring.

Daffodils, similarly, become crowded and therefore unproductive after five or six years. Again, lift the whole clump. Place clumps of a single variety in flats or supermarket cartons, then tease the bulbs apart and replant at once in new locations. Space them, roots and all (the tops will have faded to brown wisps by now), at the same intervals you allow for new bulbs—say 5 inches or so—and at the depth they had settled to when you dug them. In another year: a whole renaissance of bloom.

Which costs less? The lamp, the sofa, the table, the silver service, their gowns, or the Inlaid Paneling?

Answer: the Georgia-Pacific Hardwood Inlaid Paneling.

Really! That elegant 12 by 8-foot elm-with-walnut wall cost just $80.85. A couple of years ago, you'd have been lucky to buy a wall like that for $300.

Of course that was before G-P discovered how to put Inlaid Paneling on easy-to-install 4 by 8-foot panels. We now offer a selection of eleven modestly priced Inlaid Hardwood Paneling combinations.

Quite frankly, the new Georgia-Pacific Inlaids are better than the old hand-crafted walls. The reason for this is our exclusive Acryglas® finish.

It looks like a hand-rubbed oil finish. Yet it's so durable you can actually scrub it with fingernail polish remover—without a speck of damage.

The lamp is from Stanley's Antiques, Chicago	$200
Sofa, S. J. Campbell, Chicago	$1514
Table, Stanley's Antiques	$475
Silver Service, Marshall Field & Co., Chicago	$150
The red gown is by Mignon	$125
The beige gown is by Renault	$150

You can get full information about Georgia-Pacific Hardwood Inlaid Paneling from your building materials dealer, builder or architect. Or mail us this coupon and we'll send you a copy of our paneling catalog. Please enclose 10¢.

GOING PLACES, FINDING THINGS IN SAN FRANCISCO

BY JOSÉ WILSON

In a contest for the title of America's best-loved city, San Francisco would undoubtedly win hands down. Visitors from every state in the Union flock there. Europeans gracefully concede that its charms rival those of Paris or Rome. Even Russians have been known to get a yearning look in their eyes when this Mecca on the Pacific is mentioned. Certainly this is a city with everything going for it—spectacular Cinerama views, a climate that keeps its civilized cool even in the middle of summer, and an architectural fantasia of Victorian flourishes and follies, solid mansions, and soaring high-rises, with a hint of Hong Kong thrown in, that is unique in the U.S. To all of this I would add one more outstanding asset, rare in a land where the automobile rules: San Francisco is, par excellence, America's walkingest city. Not only does it furnish a climate and pace conducive to ambling and looking, but the visitor is positively seduced into getting out on foot by fugitive glimpses, down streets and around corners, of some unexpected delight. Within the compass of a morning's stroll it is possible to pass from the stately dignity of Union Square to the gaudy hustle of Chinatown to a quiet sea-gazing park to a street of spruced-up Victorian houses turned into beckoning boutiques and galleries. Despite the switchback contours of this city of forty-odd hills, the most interesting areas can easily be covered on the horizontal and there is always a friendly cable car in the offing if a sharp ascent or descent looms. San Francisco's cable cars, an integral part of its life, were saved from progress and dusty oblivion by aroused San Franciscans and now, enduringly classified as national historical monuments, placidly pursue their up-and-down course from the downtown business district to the Bay, the most rewarding 15-cent ride you could possibly desire. A logical starting point is the hub of downtown, Union Square. (Continued on page 20) a green oasis bordered by street stands brilliant with flowers, top-rank department stores, and specialty shops. On Post Street is legendary Gump's, a treasure house of oriental art and antiquities, jade, silver, and glass, gifts culled from all over the world, and a custom lamp studio with an unparalleled selection of bases and shade materials. The wine and food fancier will find a trip to the basement of the City of Paris, or the emporium of Goldberg Bowen on nearby Sutter Street, a heady experience—both have stocks befitting a city renowned for its gastronomical expertise. Sutter can also claim one of the best establishments for imported cookware in the country, Williams-Sonoma. Regional pottery and white porcelain raviers, tin molds and silver réchauds are interspersed with lighthearted bits of foolery that caught the owners' fancy on their European buying trips. I bought a stack of small wood cutting boards shaped like happy piglets, originally used in Germany for snacks of wurst, to use as plates for a hot dog party.

Before leaving Union Square, two little footways merit a detour. One is Maiden Lane, a two-block mall notable for an early Frank Lloyd Wright building of yellow brick that houses the V. C. Morris glass and silver store; the other, Tillman Place, is an inviting alley with a candle shop, bookshop, and the Hansen Galleries, which specialize in contemporary art, mostly graphics, under $100.

From Union Square, the #60 Powell-Hyde cable car will hoist you over Nob Hill and down to the turntable terminus in the Victorian plaza by Aquatic Park. A block or so west, at 900 North Point, is Ghirardelli Square, one of San Francisco's admirable preservation projects that has deservedly won an A.I.A. award (preservations and restorations are increasing rapidly, for this is one city enlightened enough to hold on to the best of the past). Originally part of the Ghirardelli chocolate factory, the group of nineteenth-century red brick buildings capped by a clock tower (said to be patterned after a Loire château) was bought in 1962 by Mrs. William P. Roth and her son, shipping magnate William Matson Roth, and turned into a fanciful complex of shops and restaurants set around a plaza with terraces, trees, flowers, and fountains. Ghirardelli Square, which is like a Disney fantasy plumped down in a sober commercial setting, is an enticing place. You can easily while away a couple of hours in the bookshop, gallery (Museum West of the American Craftsmen's Council), a branch of Cambridge's Design Research which has contemporary furnishings and Marimekko clothes, and other shops selling clothes, antiques, gifts from Mexico, Japan, West Germany, Norway.

There are three restaurants, a bar, and an espresso café on Ghirardelli Square. Two of the restaurants capture, in food and atmosphere, the flavor of old San Francisco. Giovanni's, run on the lines of the family-style hotels of North Beach's Little Italy, looks like Mama Mia's front parlor with its red-striped and flowered wallpaper, lace curtains, ancient Victrola, palms, and Victorian family portraits. The food comes in big bowls and dishes, and soup and spaghetti are ladled out by whichever diner chooses to play papa. Señor Pico, named for the last Mexican governor of California, Pio Pico, is Spanish-Mexican in decoration, and the food is mainly California-style Mexican with a few lusty Gold Rush dishes like son-of-a-bitch stew. Spicy little appetizers served with cocktails are kept warm on a plate over a pottery candle-warmer shaped like an Aztec head (I made a note to copy this for terrace entertaining).

Conversions galore

The success of Ghirardelli is encouraging further conversions. Ghirardelli itself will be extended by incorporating the remains of the chocolate factory in the west half of the block. An abandoned fruit cannery, also part of this once-rundown section of the waterfront has been gutted to the walls and as The Cannery will become a compound of restaurants, shops, and a Farmer's Market slated to open by Easter 1967. One of the city's most lavish and luxe antique shops, Merryvale, is installed in an old building at 3640 Buchanan Street, west of Ghirardelli Square and near the Marina. Even if you're not in the market for a Chippendale chair or a Waterford mirror, go in just to gaze at the arched windows, magnificent paneled ceiling, and majestic proportions, and reflect that this grandeur was once the metering house of the San Francisco Gas Lighting Company. Adjoining the shop is a greenhouse and garden where you can buy ivy, trained on wire forms to resemble topiary; little baskets of herbs, ivy, and fruit that make perfect hostess gifts; bonsai; and hand-carved redwood garden stakes.

Retrace your steps to the Victorian plaza and head east in the direction of Fisherman's Wharf with its swaying moored boats and big, booming seafood restaurants like Castagnola's, Tarantino's, DiMaggio's. Although Fisherman's Wharf has lost much of its old idle charm since becoming one of San Francisco's foremost tourist attractions, it still harbors some of the best seafood in the world—along the sidewalks you can buy Dungeness crabs, boiled in front of your eyes in big caldrons; paper cups of tiny succulent Bay shrimp, to eat out of your hand.

Almost as big a lure as the Wharf is the Arabian Nights bazaar at 2552 Taylor Street called Cost Plus Imports. Cost Plus, which draws visitors and residents alike, is a nondescript building grab-bag-full of furniture, pottery, decorative accessories, brass hardware, food, liquor, plants, and shoppers who crowd the aisles stuffing their shopping baskets with bargains. Since shipments sell out as fast as they come in, you never know what to expect, which is half the fun, but the pickings are usually good, especially if you are hunting for inexpensive, unusual gifts. One day I found piles of Korean and Indian handmade brass spoons and ladles, which make handsome buffet servers, for under $2 apiece.

From Taylor Street, take Columbus Avenue, an erratic and colorful thoroughfare that cuts diagonally through North Beach to Montgomery Street and the financial district. Columbus—a street of Italian grocery stores, small restaurants, and shops that sell espresso makers, Etruscan chicken cookers shaped like wig stands, and copper polenta pots—intersects Grant Avenue, the main artery of Chinatown, and plunges into the raffish heart of North Beach. North Beach is incorrigible. This was the infamous Barbary Coast area. Later it spawned beatnik poets and night clubs like the "hungry i" and the Purple Onion, and now it is host to the "topless swim" bars and clubs with their semi-nude waitresses and entertainers and similar dubious attractions. Yet, such is the laissez-faire spirit of San Francisco that North Beach, far from being shunned, coexists peacefully with many of the best restaurants (Ernie's, Amelio's, India House, Doros, Blue Fox, and Robert Charles), borders fashionable Telegraph Hill, and rubs shoulders with Golden Gateway, the new luxury apartment project, and the dignified, beautifully restored nineteenth-century brick buildings of Jackson Square, headquarters for the homefurnishings industry.

Jackson Square is not, in fact, a square, but a cluster of showrooms and offices covering five or six blocks from Montgomery and Sansome Streets to Pacific Avenue. The name comes from the Jackson Square Association, which in 1951 took over the fine but dilapidated buildings built in the boom days (and sturdy enough to have withstood earthquake and fire) and converted them into business premises, mainly for furniture, fabric, and rug manufacturers, antique dealers, and interior designers. Although most of the buildings are open only "to the trade" (except for one day a year when the public is admitted for a fee, which goes to charity), the façades alone are well worth looking at, especially such gems as attorney Melvin Belli's offices on Montgomery Street, and the converted firehouse at 449 Pacific Avenue. The Herman Miller showroom.

which admits the public, was once a Pacific Avenue music hall and has retained the flamboyant exterior with its mirrors, swinging doors, and lunette windows, now furbished in contemporary colors.

There are friendly oases in Jackson Square if your energy flags—an Irish pub for sandwiches and drinks, a Victorian-style restaurant called the Brighton Express, and the fascinating gourmet equipment shop of Thomas Cara at 517 Pacific Avenue. Here you find all kinds of molds and pots, a fine collection of Italian copper, and some imaginative local products. I was particularly entranced by hand-carved long-handled wood spoons made by a Greek living in San Francisco (the kind you look for but seldom find now in European country markets), and a different version of the Etruscan chicken cooker—of the same unglazed clay, but shaped like a setting hen and dubbed Henrietta. Thomas Cara told me he had another shop on Union Street, the next nineteenth-century revival I investigated.

Unlike Jackson and Ghirardelli Squares, Union Street's face-lifting is purely the product of the individual enterprise and ingenuity of young decorators and designers who found prevailing rentals in other parts of town too steep. So they moved to the run-down service-station-and-laundry-ridden area west of Van Ness Avenue, which in the nineteenth century was familiarly known as Cow Hollow, an idyllic green valley dotted with dairies, and later had become a solid residential section of clapboard houses, mews, and stables. They painted and primped up the old Victorian residences and turned five blocks of Union into a flourishing neighborhood of book, flower, antique, and gift shops, restaurants, and galleries with the impudent, fresh-as-paint gaiety of London's Chelsea. Flowers spill over on sidewalks and bloom in tiny backyards, imagination fills in for money (a structural column in one boutique was swathed in bright Paisley to act as a display pillar; orange and yellow paper streamers, demurely tied back, replaced curtains in the window of Minerva's Owl Bookshop).

A good time to saunter along Union Street is late in the morning (most shops don't open until ten, some at eleven) when the air is fragrant with fresh flowers. Start at the corner of Gough and Union, pausing to admire the Octagon House and its garden. This is an old Cow Hollow mansion, dating back to 1857, restored and furnished by the National Society of Colonial Dames of America and open three times a month (the first Sunday and second and fourth Thursdays) from 1 to 4 P.M. From here stop where your fancy takes you—and you'll find that is often. Some of my favorite spots are Marion Davidson's Southwest Shop, with first-rate crafts well displayed; Talisman Galleries and the Victorian tonsorial parlor "Jack the Clipper"; Karamanduca Folk Art Gallery; Keith Lamb's backyard nursery with huge hanging wire balls of succulents; Original Prints, a good graphics gallery; Mingei-Ya, a Japanese folk-art restaurant and store; the Clipper Ship with antiques ranging from New England whaling memorabilia to an Empire campaign bed; and 1980 Union, a charming compound of three 1870 clapboard houses, including a pair of "wedding houses" (one-story bungalows with a common center wall), now comprised of shops (Cara-West is one), a restaurant, and an ice cream parlor.

Union Street boasts restaurants galore, but my "find" for lunch was a tiny place a couple

Rheem presents . . .

THE MEDITERRANEAN COLLECTION

An exciting ensemble of fine decorated plumbingware.

Now, Rheem again provides the difference between "just another bathroom" and a bathroom that's distinctive and elegant. Here is the first decorated plumbingware designed to compliment the current Mediterranean trend in home furnishings. The Rheem Mediterranean Collection offers designs and colors never seen before in plumbingware—and matching accessories are available for important finishing touches.

This dramatic Antique Gold design is called Delphi.

It's been lavished on Rheem canary yellow oval wash basins and is baked in to last and last. Matching toilet seats and tank lids, a Rheem Satin Gold faucet set . . . matching ceramic wall tile and luxurious towels in the same vivid pattern . . . plus a splash of your own inspired imagination makes it easy and enjoyable to create a bath or powder room in the fashionable Mediterranean manner.

And that's not all that's new! Now Rheem makes it possible for the bathtub to become a part of your decorating plan. We've come up with a roomy 5' tub that has no "sides." It can be paneled, tiled in, faced with stucco . . . even wallpaper. Never before have you known such decorating freedom. Build it in on one, two or three sides, leave it free standing or sink it into the floor to create an elegant sunken bath. It's so versatile, we named it the Versa/Tub. It's made of durable cast iron and is available in all six Rheem pastel colors plus "whiter white."

The Rheem Mediterranean Collection was inspired by the A.I.D. International Award winning Mediterranean towel collection by Callaway Mills, Inc. Two designs; Delphi and Tangier are available in two background colors with matching accessories that include Rheem toilet tank lid and seats, ceramic wall tile and towels.

If this is your year to do something about that ordinary bath or powder room, be glad. Send 25c for colorful material with pages and pages of new bath excitement.

GENUINE ANTIQUE

SHUTTLE CANDLE SCONCES

Not Reproductions

Genuine Antique Shuttles—all hand made—salvaged from long silent looms—magnificently refinished and given a completely new application. Marks of wear are still evident—metal shafts are actually scored by weft winding—hardwood frames worn smooth from passing through countless warp sheds. Average size is 15", but there are necessarily slight variations. Glowing antique finish—natural wood with sienna, black metal candle cups, concealed hanging ring. Hang singly or in pairs for a thoroughly original, conversation provoking display. You'd pay over $10 ea. for these in antique shops. Our very special anniversary price $4.25 ea. $7.50 pr. Also available, antique shuttles only, original finish. $5.50 pr. All postpaid. Add 35¢ West of Miss.

NEW TRU-DRIVE TEES 5 for $1.98

There is a way to hit long, straight balls AUTOMATICALLY every time

THIS IS IT!

You have to try this to see for yourself! And you can do it on our money-back guarantee. This tee gives you almost unbelievable results. Long straight drives every time!

It's simple—because the tee is based on aero-dynamic principles that prevents the lateral spin which causes hooks or slicing. The tee cups your ball (see illustration). When the club hits the tee all the power behind it goes into getting the ball away—and no matter where the club connects, the power goes behind the ball—gets it away faster, straighter. You may hit a few yards to right or left. BUT YOU WON'T HOOK OR SLICE.

You'll get off drives that will amaze you for distance. You'll hit truer shots—this tee makes golfers out of beginners and club-champs out of week-end golfers.

What's more, it saves you money on balls. You don't mark them up, you don't cut or mar them. You don't lose them so easily—and it speeds up your game.

Of course you have to try them for yourself. Order at our risk. If you are not completely satisfied—if you are not absolutely delighted with what it does for your game—return for a full refund.

Tru-Drive Golf Tees are only $1.98 for pkg. of 5. (They last for years if you don't lose them). But get enough for your partners and friends. Special offer for 3 sets—$5.75 postpaid. Order now—impress your golf partners next week-end!

THE ARTS YOU ENJOY AT HOME —an H&G survey

Op art brought to the egg. Painted by Sybil Edwards in India ink, this stylish clutch is part of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lambert's collection of curiosa.

Which are the arts? Many people would begin their answers with painting. But they would be wrong. For "arts" is not necessarily the plural of "art." You cannot compare a Beethoven sonata with a table setting. The one is art, the other, evidence of a talent for living creatively. What a pity to be intimidated by art (its majesty, its mystery, its cost), when living can be so greatly enriched by the arts you enjoy at home.

Their enjoyment, of course, is two-pronged—exercising your own talents, however rudimentary, and/or relishing the creations of others. To get a line on both prongs of enjoyment and how they might be enhanced and facilitated, we consulted a few hundred good friends of H&G—families for the most part in their thirties and forties, the majority of whom have young children, families scattered about the country from New England to the South to the Northwest. We plied them with questions. You will find their answers scattered through this issue.

We ended with: What would you like to have to add to your enjoyment? Their replies to that were numerous, specific, and imaginative, ranging all the way from "a great collector's advice on how to hang paintings" to "a robot who would be instantly available to play duo piano parts with me."

We took careful note of all these requests, and on the next fifty-two pages we offer the inspiring and most practical of the ideas we garnered during several months of searching—simple ideas you may never have thought of, as well as lavish ideas that would be simple to adapt to a more modest scale. For H&G heartily agrees with the observations that a physician—Dr. Felix Marti-Ibanez—made recently to his fellow physicians: "Art is neither a game nor just a luxury... Art is the most necessary of the unnecessary things in man's life."

Over half our survey panel told us they collected paintings.

HOW THREE COLLECTORS DISPLAY THEIR TREASURES

Sir Winston Churchill, an excellent Sunday painter, once said that we shape our houses, and then they shape our lives. Walt Whitman, who painted with rhyme, defined architecture as what buildings do to you. These are sound observations, pertinent to architecture's sister arts as well, and in them lies a very good layman's yardstick for measuring the rewards of art without getting muddled up in abstruseness. Certainly, art for art's sake is the artist's credo, not John Doe's. But anyone can understand the joy of possessing art for sheer pleasure, for what it does for us, does to us. In H&G's recent survey of the arts you enjoy at home, painting, in particular, turned out to be a fair-haired boy. Most people seemed quite happy to hang any type of painting as long as it held the promise of being an enduring delight. And people who collect paintings, we discovered, are very apt also to collect sculptures, porcelain bibelots, curiosa, or memorabilia as companions for their pictures. Starting here are three examples: three vastly disparate collections displayed, lived with, and savored, at home.

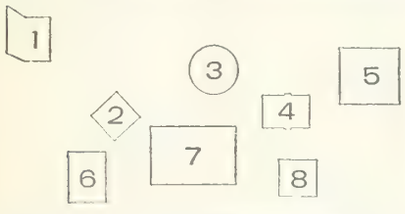
SPACE, LIGHT, AND A GARDEN



When Mrs. Joseph Olliphant Lambert Jr. isn't rushing from one Dallas art or music committee meeting to another, she is apt to be rushing around the world looking at paintings and, as soon as not, buying them. Mr. Lambert, when he isn't busy making Dallas greener (he is one of the most sought-after landscape architects in the Southwest), is close at her heels, looking as intently, buying as eagerly. For the Lamberts are insatiable collectors—principally of paintings, although they don't stop there. Like ravens lured by the glitter of beads, they can spot a treasurable bibelot at 50 yards, and unless it is the Kohinoor, it ends up in one of their pockets. Utterly catholic in their tastes, they get as much pleasure out of an antique toy as a Dufy, of which they own one—a "teensy." They love all painting, but instead of eating their hearts out over the lack of a superb Titian or Rembrandt, console themselves with no trouble at all by discovering and pursuing the contemporaries. They pointed themselves in this direction twenty years ago, when they began collecting the abstractionists, then the geometric schools, and then their current rage—what Mrs. Lambert clairvoyantly described as the hypnotic optics long before op art was known as such. That most of the time the Lamberts like the same things makes collecting—their common denominator, they call it—a happy business, and the nicest possible substitute for "say, twelve children." In any event, the changelings are housed in a penthouse spiked with flowers and greenery arranged as gaily and informally as May baskets. Pictures are everywhere, hung high, hung low, solo or en masse, and lighted from above, museum-fashion, by ceiling fixtures that wash the walls with even blankets of light. Occasionally, as in the morning room, opposite page, the Lamberts flout convention and hang a painting on the ceiling. This one, a vast surge of color by Stanley Hayter, suffers not at all from its unorthodox position, and gives the room the same overhead dazzle that Chagall's great new ceiling gives the Paris Opera House. The dining-garden room next door, lush and verdant as a greenhouse, is a serene catalyst for the two rooms it flanks—one starkly black and white, the other leavened with color. Here, smaller and gentler than the Hayter, hangs a painting by Joan Semmel which was found in Madrid, a Lambert hunting ground. (Continued)

EZRA STOLLE

DRAMA IN BLACK AND WHITE

Ardent travelers, the Lamberts fly anywhere, everywhere—occasionally to India, where they had the white rugs woven that drift through the penthouse like snow. In the drawing room, right, the whiteness is overlaid with more white—painted or upholstered furniture and always white flowers—complemented with black in deference to the paintings, which are lighted by ceiling-hung spotlights, precisely pinpointed to give each picture full illumination. Mrs. Lambert, a woman with her own brand of chic, likes to wear vivid Persian colors that sometimes make her the accent—and a brilliant one—for her own drawing room. This fact she pooh poohs, just as, for all her knowledge, she refuses ever to dissect an arcane picture. The workings of a telephone, to her, are a mystery, an abstraction she doesn't pretend to understand. Yet she enjoys the instrument and feels the same way about painting. If a picture gives her pleasure, she asks nothing more. "Probing," she says, "ruins the spontaneity of delight."

THE BLACK AND WHITE PICTURES

Graphic, textured, the pictures on this wall, with one exception, are not paintings at all, but art forms known as constructions. 1, by Castellani, who will have a room of his own at this year's Biennale in Venice, contains and reflects light. 2, by Mobitz, is a convolution of wood forms on composition board. 3, by Uecker of the West Germany Zero Group, flickers a cloud of nails driven into a wood disk. 4, another Castellani, is a manipulated canvas. 5, another manipulated canvas by Lucio Fontana bears the cryptic title, "Speck." 6, by Savelli, is called "White Rope on White." 7, by Mathieu, is the only oil. 8, a composition by van Hoeydonck, clusters wood beads with Ping-Pong and tennis balls. (Continued)

ANTIQUES AND GREENERY

With the shrubs and flowers of the garden room as a not-too-distant backdr a Hepplewhite sofa and two of Mrs. Lambert's collection of Napoleon III black-stained rosewood fauteuils carry out the black and white theme at ano side of the drawing room. A pair of Brustolon blackamoors, theatrical as Othello, make superb plinths for fern-filled urns. Over the sofa hangs an oil Celantano; the squared-circle painting hung ceiling-high is a Youngerman.

A KALEIDOSCOPE OF BIBELOTS

Parading down a hall, the Lamberts' pet curiosa: a sculptured bronze bull by Heriberto Juarez, an eleventh-century church incense ewer . . .

. . . "Moses," a welded sculpture by Henri Bartsch, a Poulos maquette for a large work, two amusing bronze shoe "portraits" by Charles Williams . . .

. . . Lefevre construction and collage on wall; Egyptian ivory eyes, an Accorsi wire sculpture of Mr. Lambert, found-object sculpture by Jim Love on table.

Hung over a modern Korean chest with almost Steinbergian decorations (bright idea for Sunday painters) is the Lamberts' one "old master," a Jackson Pollock. Up in the corner is a manipulated canvas by Castellani, and down the hall, a carved-wood Japanese goddess and a Sedgley "hypnotic optic."

OPPOSITE PAGE:

1. An old French baker's rack in the morning room makes a marvelous catchall for a phantasmagoria of little treasures—carvings, bronzes, a lyre shaped like a peacock, ceramics—name it, Mrs. Lambert has it. The bibelots are intermingled with books and complemented by three paintings—a Shin Kuno, a Piene, a Picasso. Well down on the wall hangs "Perpetual Design," a mobile sculpture by Pol Bury, which is exactly that: power-driven, its pattern constantly changes. On the music rack—a wonderful accessory for the Lamberts' ever-changing show of paintings—is an oil by Willy Baumiester.
2. In her bedroom, Mrs. Lambert breakfasts at a painted Victorian table partnered with cane-backed French chairs. The room is also her study, and the home of her pet collage—a madly labyrinthine "valentine," the work of Niki de Sainte-Phalle. Tucked away in a closet is a clutch of pictures called "the mistakes—all for sale or up for swaps."
3. In the morning room, the game table is draped in velvet appliquéd in the colors of the chair coverings. Silhouetted against a window: a potted dracaena and Blasco's faun-like metal sculpture, "The Gardener."
4. In Mr. Lambert's bedroom, a Korean chest with a distressed finish stands below a gouache by Calder. Bedcover was made of antique French silk hangings, appliquéd with petit point and bronze braid. A joy to Mr. Lambert's horticultural eye, a dwarf Japanese pine perks up a corner; a bronze garden urn has become a marble-topped table, while a goddess and greenery keep peace on the terrace.

As we suspected, a passion for collecting is rarely confined to one art.

IMAGINATIVE IDEAS FOR DISPLA

The living room, above, is an exhilarating two-storied space with a spiral staircase in one corner leading to the balcony that extends around three sides, as indicated on the plan, right. At both ends of the room, glass walls, rising from floor to ceiling, are curtained in narrow, translucent panels of alternating warm and cool white rigid plastic that give the illusion of graceful ripples and draw back into a minuscule space. Opposite the two-story sweep of rosewood-paneled wall—marvelous in its scale for a large painting—is the fireplace and a rosewood storage wall, and behind them, a broad corridor, specially planned as a showcase for one of the collections.

Hundreds of families collect objects that are not in themselves art, but the way they are arranged and displayed can be very much of an art. In this aspect of the arts, industrial designer Paul R. MacAlister and his wife take so much delight that they recently built, outside Chicago, a new house designed primarily as a testing ground for the host of imaginative ideas they have worked out for displaying their multifaceted collection of antique artifacts, folk art, fascinating curiosa. Theirs is not, in fact, one collection, but a whole series inspired by the numerous and diverse subjects of special interest to them. They acquired an early painting by De Chirico, for instance, not only because they loved it, but because it demonstrates a concept that has been a passion of Mr. MacAlister's since his college days—perspective. Collecting books on perspective led them to tools for measuring space and devices for measuring time, and these in due course inspired them to accumulate a fascinating assemblage of Renaissance building tools. Their interest in architecture prompted them to track down uncommon examples of the major architectural ornament of the American Federal period—the American eagle. And an assignment on a museum-building project in Greece started a collection of Greek icons.

More than perfunctorily aware of these many enthusiasms were the architects of the MacAlisters' new house, Verner and Donald Mahan, who are also their daughter and son-in-law. The house is not large—less than 2,500 square feet, in fact. And in order to create rooms with a feeling of uncluttered space, they dispensed with a guest room and a separate full-time dining room. But every room incorporates ingenious ideas for the mounting, hanging, lighting, or storage of the objects the MacAlisters have assembled over the years with so much satisfaction—ideas readily adaptable to the effective display of personal treasures on a far more modest scale.

A marvelous variety of display and storage spaces, above, is included in the storage wall, a remarkably simple arrangement of adjustable shelves and heavy uprights. Some of the shelves have been left open for books or objets d'art. Others are fitted with protective sliding glass panels to create display cases, and those in the bottom row, with painted hardboard panels to create hideaway storage. Over built-in writing table in largest niche is a Harnett trompe l'oeil that turned up in Mrs. MacAlister's mother's attic.

Antique Dutch planetarium, right, returned to working order, is lighted by spherical lamps that Mr. MacAlister chose because they suggested planets.

Color-keyed cardboard boxes, left, in a closet on the balcony hold objects from various collections awaiting their turn for display. To protect paintings stored on adjoining shelves, Mr. MacAlister discovered a flexible accordion-like storage system of heavy paper.

The collection of Renaissance building tools, below, makes a fascinating series of murals at one end of the balcony above the living room storage wall. Some tools stand on floor, some, right, are mounted on boards suspended by metal straps from a slim metal molding, and some are superimposed on photostatic blowups of engravings depicting seventeenth-century artisans using similar tools. On the chimney breast at left, below, is a composition of decorative architectural details that Mr. MacAlister made, exactly like a mosaic, from thousands of small squares of vinyl floor tiles.

Most of the "space" collection—a mélange of antique space-measuring instruments, ranging from calipers to telescopes—is housed in the study, a small secluded room at one end of the balcony above the kitchen (see plan, page 71). Fixed to the perforated-board backs of the shallow, glass-front display cases are several small photostats of perspective drawings.

A mobile of wire and plastic, right, floats from ceiling of study-space room, lighted by blue and green spots that emphasize its dream-like quality as a space-time symbol.

The 6-foot-wide corridor behind the living room storage wall is ingeniously designed to serve two roles—an exhibition space for the American eagles and a party dining room. Perched on a pedestal at one end, above, is an eagle that once adorned the pilot house of a Great Lakes steamer. At the opposite end is a smaller bird, right, that held a curtain rod in the Blue Room of the White House until it was redecorated in 1904. Pedestals as well as walls are faced with travertine-patterned wallboard. Card tables, left, set with bright linens and hurricane candles, easily seat sixteen for dinner parties.

Even in the kitchen, right, the MacAlisters display some of their discoveries. Looking down from above the window is a trio of têtes de bucherie that once proclaimed to the analphabetic the wares of a French butcher shop. Below window hang antique French cooking utensils, each mounted on a bright-painted wooden board cut out to repeat its contours exactly.

ne of the joys of owning a large collection that you can keep changing the examples n display—and one of the drawbacks, that ou need storage space for the others. The lacAlisters have solved this dilemma with ne rows of cabinets in the dining corridor, pposite page. When cabinet doors are open. ight, glass cases can be removed easily to hange displays. Photomural on the wall be- ond is giant blowup of Johann Jakob Schueb- er's dramatic "Perspective Pes Picturae."

"What about people who live with masterpieces—what advice do they have for novice collectors?"

3. ELEGANT FRAME

FOR MASTERPIECES

There are sundry schools of thought as to how or whether the presence of paintings should influence the furnishings of the rooms they hang in. A great deal, naturally, depends on the paintings, but when they are as impressive as those in the famous collection of the late Albert D. Lasker, it is not surprising to find that everything that surrounds them has been, by intention, subdued. Mrs. Lasker believes that the more dazzling a picture the more serene its surroundings should be, and she has a way with flowers and porcelains that makes them a link between paintings and settings. Throughout her New York town house, walls and furnishings are confined almost entirely to whites and beiges, blues and pinks, as delicately muted as pale seashells. Lamps, as a rule, are white with white shades, unobtrusive against white walls and part of pale ambiance that allows paintings to blaze like jewels with no competition. (Continued)

In the all-white library, LEFT, there is one exception to the [illegible] chairs which, by some legerdemain, seem to intensify the reds of van Gogh's "Zouave" and Renoir's "Young Girl in a Boat." The white-curtained sunroom beyond the column is, because of its glass walls, the only paintingless room in the house. In the sunroom foyer, ABOVE, Matisse's "Blue Blossoms."

Next to paintings, flowers are Mrs. Lasker's passion, and the house is full of them, always of infinite variety, but in specific hues for each room. The colors remain constant: white with touches of red for the library, all white for the drawing room. But in the dining room, where pictures occasionally change, the flower colors change with the pictures. It is not the colors of the flowers, but their sculptural quality that contributes to the over-all composition.

Always, the play is the thing: to look at a Lasker picture is to be in the theatre, as rapt as a child, everything forgotten except the stage. Each painting glows in the beams of its own reflector light. (Continued)

In the drawing room, LEFT, mirror panels between the windows reflect two paintings at the other end of the room. In contrast to the regal hanging of van Gogh's "White Roses" and Renoir's "Flowers and Cats," smaller pictures are casually propped against table lamps. Staircase, BELOW, spirals for five flights past one prismatic delight after another.

On a dressing room console, ABOVE, a pair of plates painted by Vuillard, a crystal grandolo, and two Dutch vases form a visual bridge to their illustrious companion in the hall above: Picasso's "Woman with Mandolin."

Mrs. Lasker is also meticulous about the company her pictures keep. A Mother Carey, she refuses to have a painting "annoyed" by a companion across the room. Only by hanging and rehanging—a process of visual trial and error—has she plotted her housewide entente. Sometimes a new picture poses a problem. A magnificent, recently acquired Chagall was hung for a while in the dining room, then—"because it ate the room up!"—moved to Mrs. Lasker's office. Equally important is what she calls a "bridge" between paintings and furniture—a catalyst role she finds is filled not only by flowers, but by porcelain, in which she delights. Clustered on mantels and tables, in niches and cabinets, are blanc de chine, Sèvres, Lowestoft, Meissen, Coalport, and Coalbrookdale. In contrast, here and there, is a Tanagra figurine or a few Greek and Roman bronzes—tiny, some of them, but distinguished enough to hold up their heads in exalted company. And exalted it is because Mr. Lasker never settled for second-best. "The only reason for buying a painting," says Mrs. Lasker, who, as an erstwhile dealer, guided his collecting, "is because you have fallen in love with it, and know you are going to stay in love. You may have made a good investment, you may not. Fashions change. But you will always have something better—an evergreen patch of euphoria."

Mrs. Lasker's bedroom, LEFT, ABOVE, creamily pale, utterly feminine, is always dotted with pink carnations, nature's complement to her collection of Coalbrookdale, fantastic in the intricacy of its sculptured flowers. Equally delicate is the Picasso drawing on the chest, flanked by two Rose Meissen cups, frail as eggshells.

A damask-draped table in the library, LEFT, is a stage for prizes from two subsidiary collections, quite unrelated in genre, curiously effective in juxtaposition—Lowestoft plates blazoned with heraldic devices, and elegantly primitive Greek and Roman bronze horses.

The dining room, OPPOSITE PAGE, all pastels and glitter with its forget-me-not blue chairs and gleaming crystal candelabra, is the background for Mrs. Lasker's collection of eighteenth-century china which is constantly rotated in her table settings, since nothing bores her more than eating from the same plates, meal after meal. The columned room is diversely lighted by a chandelier, candles, and light that shimmers up through a glass border in the floor. Braque's "Pink Table" hangs on a wall paneled, like the wall opposite it, with smoky mirror, a mask for the protective dehumidification system.

The paintings one lives with BRIGHTEN THE HOUSE

In the days of bandeaux, when the tennis courts of the world were dominated, so far as women were concerned, by Suzanne Lenglen, my mother found herself watching a match on the center court at Wimbledon, sitting beside a certain Mrs. Chester Dale. Between the end of that game and the next there was an interval in which the two ladies fell into conversation. Mrs. Chester Dale was in a happy frame of mind. In the course of the morning she had added a picture that was greatly to her liking to the collection which she and her husband were then making. She told my mother she should have a painting by the same artist: "You have no idea," said Mrs. Dale, "how a Degas brightens up the house."

At the time this remark seemed to me to be a very absurd one. I had then as passionate an admiration for this great painter as I have now, and it seemed to me a denigration of his genius and importance to ascribe such a lowly function to a work from his hands. But since those days—the remark was made nearly forty years ago—I have changed my mind. In the intervening period I have read a great deal about painting, and about esthetics, and have lived, in fact and in imagination, with a considerable number of works of art, and I have come to have a certain admiration and respect for Mrs. Chester Dale's point of view. It has the merit of being honest, and it corresponds to the realities of my experience as most of the more pretentious art criticism that I have read does not.

I have a small collection of paintings that actually belong to me, but inside my head there is a larger and much more distinguished collection of works of art that would be mine if the world had been arranged entirely for my private benefit. This second collection is made up of paintings and sculptures that my imagination has stolen from museums, galleries, and private collections, all over the world. Certain works, among them a number of Mantegnas, El Grecos, Cezannes, and van Goghs, which initially excited me have proved to be less memorable than the others picked up in this way. They have simply vanished from the permanent collection. What remains, the hard core of about a hundred canvases and panels, travels with me wherever I go. I often look at two or three of these stolen paintings to turn the boredom of waiting in an ugly or drearily characterless place, such as a doctor's waiting room, into pleasure. The three Degas portraits among them are referred to with a rather special frequency, just because they so perfectly fulfill the function that Mrs. Dale described so innocently, and so accurately, as brightening the house. These portraits, of men and women who are not usually good looking, in the setting of their ordinary everyday lives, admit me to a world of color richer, more subtly harmonious, and more brilliant than that of my own visual experience. While I look at these paintings I possess the eyes of Degas, and his vision of the familiar brightens my mind. With all due respect to the many thoughtful and wholly sincere writers who have labored to construct more elaborate and more enlightening theories about the nature and significance of the esthetic experience involved in looking at paintings, I believe that the essence of the matter is as simple as that.

It may be thought by some that the idea of an alternative vision of the world to one's own, seen through another person's eyes, is not an especially simple one. I do not find any difficulty with it because I had an accident when I was younger which led to my entry into a world of vision quite unlike that which I normally inhabit. A sliver of metal lodged in my eyeball, and after it had been removed by a magnet, I was for a time given eye drops containing atropine. This is the chemical that is produced naturally by the plant known in England as deadly nightshade and in Italy as bella-donna. Every middle-class English child with a country background is, at any rate, told that it has that name in Italy, while being warned never to touch or to eat the bright red berries that appear in clusters on its soft-stemmed vines. These, one is told, contain a deadly poison that Venetian women used to put into their eyes to make them more lustrous and beautiful. As was only to be expected, from the moment that I learned what was in the drops that were being put into my eye, I was consumed with curiosity about what was going on under the eye patch, which I had been told not to remove on any account. Just what could have induced those Venetian beauties to run the risks of putting a deadly poison in their eyes? By the best of good fortune I decided to take a look one morning when I was alone in the living room of my mother's London apartment. It was a room full of color at all times, at that moment bathed in sunshine which lit up three great bunches of spring flowers in vases. As I gazed into the glass above the fireplace with my good eye, I could see the whole room behind me, and much of the Kensington Square onto which its windows opened, its trees and shrubs brilliant with freshly opened leaves. When I cautiously lifted my black patch to peer at my damaged eye, it took only a fraction of a second to realize that its pupil was enormously enlarged, but after that I was aware of nothing but the effects of that enlargement.

By Anthony West

a dilated pupil admits much more light than one in a normal condition, so that I suddenly saw the familiar objects in the room, and the flowers and leaves in and out of it, transformed into a blaze of intensified color in which everything was as if I had never seen it before. It was a vision of a paradise without definition and without forms. But when I dropped my eye patch back into place and opened my good eye, I returned instantly to the world of photographic realism, and of immediately identifiable and recognizable objects.

For the next ten days, while the treatment with atropine continued, I was like a secret drinker, obsessed, and living only for the next opportunity to slip away and spend a few more precious instants in my new found land of light and color. The flowers in the living room acquired a magnetic fascination, and I went to them time and time again to see the miracle of their transformation, by the change in the character of my vision, from static structures to forces in movement. With my everyday eye I saw them as cut flowers which had grown and which had been cut when they had reached a certain stage in their development; but with my treated eye I saw them as the culminating explosion into color of a dynamic process of growth: their stems became upward thrusts of green from which the reds, yellows, and whites of their blossoming burst and flowed.

It was, then, with a heavy heart that I at length heard the doctor say I had made a perfect recovery and there was no need for the treatment with atropine to continue. I felt that the key to the gateway to a whole world of pleasure and excitement was to be taken from me before I had even begun to explore its possibilities. I had, however, learned my lesson, that there might be valid alternatives to the systematized binocular photographic vision that I had been conditioned to accept as normal and correct.

My father and my mother were writers, I am myself a writer, and my imagination has always had a strongly literary bias. This means that my mind tends in the direction of a literalistic attachment to the common ground of binocular photographic vision, and that my inclination is to like paintings with identifiable subjects, which can be interpreted in terms of literary statements, better than those which cannot be treated in this way. I am, consequently, extremely fond of works by the French Impressionists, and in particular of paintings by Monet. This, I hasten to say, is because they are extremely easy to disregard as paintings, and readily convertible into literature. When I am feeling very lazy, I can have a very good time reading a Monet in terms of my own tastes for certain kinds of physical pleasure. How nice it would be to sit on those green-painted garden chairs, to watch those prettily dressed children playing in that garden, to smell those flowers, to hear the rustle of leaves in that tree, and afterwards to go inside that attractive house to eat one of those interminable and delicious French family lunches.

People who read Monet's paintings in this way, and project their own appetites for France and French life onto his canvases, accuse him of being a laureate of bourgeois life, and say that what he painted was the aspiration towards material well-being of the French middle classes in the heyday of the Third Republic. This idea arises as a consequence of assuming that Monet's vision was identical with one's own, and ignoring the alternative vision that he slowly developed in the course of his career and at last found almost perfect means to express. When his pictures are seen, and not read, it becomes obvious that, from the time when he first found his own identity as a painter, he had one and only one subject, light; and that his interest in the ostensible subjects of his pictures was largely, and almost exclusively, limited to their function as its receptors and reflectors. The famous series of paintings devoted to the Nympheas—of which he produced twenty-five between 1889 and 1900 and forty-eight between 1903 and 1908 in addition to the later decorations in the Orangerie in the Tuileries gardens—are not pictures of water lilies floating on the surface of a pool of water in which the reflections of clouds and trees can be seen, as one would have seen them oneself if one had been standing beside Monet in his garden at Giverny when they were painted. They are studies of light falling on opaque reflectors set on a semi-transparent reflective surface on which light falls with an effect modified by the events it mirrors, light falling on distant clouds, multiple reflective surfaces made up of drops of water, and on light-absorbent leaf masses closer at hand. To say this is not to add complication after the fact of a straightforward piece of painting. Monet was explicit about his intentions: ". . . I'm attempting the impossible. Other painters paint a bridge, a house, a boat. They paint the bridge, the house, or the boat, and they've finished. I want to paint the air surrounding the bridge, the house, and the boat—the beauty of the air where they are, and that's nothing else but impossible."

To read these words and to understand their meaning is one thing; to see what they mean by becoming so familiar with one of Monet's paintings as to learn its visual language is another. During World War II, a London dealer sent a part of his stock in trade into the country to be out of the way of German bombs. For a time my farmhouse dining room was illuminated by the presence of a Monet landscape, and by an enchanting bronze statuette of Madame Renoir suckling her baby son. While the bronze delighted with its references to what one already knew about the pleasantness of a happy young mother and babies, the Monet responded to contemplation by taking one out of the familiar object-oriented world of binocular photographic vision into that world of light translated into color in which Turner was the great pioneer, Monet the explorer, and Bonnard the settler and colonist. For me, at any rate, the privilege of living with this picture, at first sight a mere souvenir of Monet's days of summer happiness boating on the Seine, meant the acquisition (Continued on page 123)

ANTHONY WEST, British-born novelist, literary critic, and erstwhile dairy farmer, first came to this country when he was seventeen, later returned and became an American citizen. He lives with his wife and four children in New York City and Stonington, Conn., where he has about a dozen paintings ("but I'm no collector") and a small flock of sheep ("just to have the smell of a farm"). His father and mother, whom he describes in his article simply as "writers," are H. G. Wells and Rebecca West.

Almost unanimously, our amateur artists made a plea for more space.

Painting in a city study

A folding easel, a stool, and an étagère turn a north-lighted corner in Mrs. William C. Langley's New York apartment sitting room into a pocket-sized but highly efficient atelier. The former Jane Pickens, who turned to painting when she gave up singing, loves to paint flowers (there is always a big bouquet on the table in the corner) as well as landscapes (a constant traveler, she makes notes in the form of sketches and color photographs). The five tiers of the étagère keep her tools and materials well organized, and a daylight lamp clamped to the top lights her canvas after dark. On the perforated board wall hanging some of her numerous awards and citations.

Enameling in a country bedroom

A complete studio for enamel work, including a kiln, is confined to the space of a tabletop in the corner of Mrs. Vanderbilt Webb's bedroom in her house in Harrison, N. Y. Chairman of the board of the American Craftsmen's Council, Mrs. Webb is an excellent craftsman herself, does wood carving, flower drying, and sculpture, but enamel work she finds the most practical to keep close at hand. She designed her table—a rectangle with a circular section at one end—so that she could work with her pieces ranged around her and still have her chair standing out in the middle of the room. The table's height is lower than average desk height so that she can look down at her work.

Found space for studios

Numerous readers who responded to H&G's quizzing told us they longed for space which they could devote to their painting or weaving, découpage or rug making, or to some other art, without giving over a whole room to it. But with proper planning, you can set up a corner in almost any room in the house where you can exercise your creative talents whenever you happen to have time. With a bit of imagination, you can find good-looking racks or containers that will keep your tools and supplies from hatching continual disorder. And to make up for the unaccustomed presence of working paraphernalia in a dining room, say, or a bedroom, is the fact that most artists' materials are decorative in themselves. Baskets of bright yarns, jars of vivid glazes, the painter's palette, the collagist's hoard of scraps—all make delightful splashes of color in addition to being lively reminders that something exciting is going on here. On these and the following two pages you will see how four talented women have set up their often pocket-sized studios in found space in rooms that were designed for other purposes, making the wherewithal of their art a constant motif in their pattern of daily living.

Weaving in a sunny family room

Stocks of many-colored yarns and pots of thriving greenery combine to make a lively background for the varied doings in the Joseph Bohms' family room in Scarsdale, N. Y. In one corner, left, Elaine Bohm, a professional weaver, has set up her loom, her yarn winder, and the stacks of colored plastic vegetable bins in which she stores yarn already wound. Between the windows, below, hang spindles, samples, and sketches, and dispersed around the room are her rya rugs, macramé hangings, and ceramic planters. The space along the glass wall is reserved for pot gardening.

Designing in a Louis XVI dining room

Five mornings a week, the elegant boiserie paneled dining room in the Eric Mulvanys' York apartment is transformed, opposite pa into a hard-working office for Mrs. Mulvany interior designer Audré Fiber. When her secretary and assistant leave for the day, the drawing board and three folding black lacq work tables are whisked away to the file-and-storage room, below center, which the Mulvanys created by walling off the windowless end of the 20-foot-long room. Then the Bessarabian carpet is unrolled, the chandelier unhooked from its higher working-day position, the dining table pushe back to room center, below right. The conversion takes exactly seven minutes.

GR GSBY

The visual delight a dramatic design affords may be determined as much by line and texture, even form, as by flower color.

Q: Of all your possessions, what is your favorite?

A: An impressive number cited their gardens.

ALL SIX SENSES ARE SERVED BY A GARDEN MASTERPIECE

Sometimes it takes a sixth sense to make best use of the other five. A garden that is truly complete always serves sight (color most obviously), hearing (wind among leaves, water meeting water), touch (grass, gravel, stones underfoot), smell (flower fragrance especially), taste (random samplings: mint, shadberry, wild sorrel, the white root of a water flag). But how do you define a sense—instinct may be a better word—that tells you you are in the presence of perfection? Perhaps you shouldn't try. Filoli, the San Mateo, Calif., garden of Mr. and Mrs. William Roth, arouses this sixth sense on impact. Only later and gradually, over a period of hours or days, do the workaday senses get in their licks (see "An Image of True Luxuriance," H&G May, 1965). The basis of this magnificent garden's appeal is, of course, relatively easy to understand, if not to duplicate on every half-acre. The majesty of great trees, the grace of casual water where it catches a glimpse of the sky, the free pattern of a turf panel and the deceptively simple beds that surround it, the special beauty of a marble shaft with a timeless clock on top: all these are elements of a particular and superlative and complete garden. Of them all, pattern is probably of first importance (this means design in its narrowest sense), with color coming in a close second. Mass and texture place third almost indistinguishably. All these values are visual. The fragile clash of water, the escaping fragrance of a flower, the feel of even your own footfalls are all among the tangible enjoyments that follow after.

The aura of perfection is so r... you can almost touch... in the Roths' garden. It ho... excitement for every sen...

The liveliest personal art: Creative table settings

Almost half the families we quizzed devoted thought and time to decorating their tables.

My tables are very different in summer and winter," says Mrs. James G. Gibbons.

In her New Orleans dining room, right, Mrs. Gibbons likes to use stronger colors and denser masses in winter, everything lighter and airier in summer. For a hot-weather luncheon she keeps the components to a minimum, foregoing flowers in favor of flowery colors: the rosy Rockingham and glass, the delicate pink organdy cloth floating over damask. To center stage, for guests to enjoy close up, she brings two pairs of her antique Chinese porcelain birds, part of a treasured collection that roosts permanently in the dining room. Mrs. Gibbons is an inveterate collector of everything for the table. Her silver was presented by Franz Josef of Austria to one of her forebearers.

We never consciously decorate our tables," claims Mrs. Alexander Girard.

"We have a straightforward approach," explains the wife of the Santa Fe architect; "we just use pieces that we like and that are necessary for the occasion." On this little birthday dinner table the only decorations are the fern and the birthday gift, a spray of silver daisies her husband designed for her. The Girards have an aversion for sets, and believe there is nothing more tiresome than having all the plates or glasses match. Instead, they select from their large supply of "things we like" (here, for example, rare English dessert forks, Italian gold coffee spoons, Cartier dessert spoons), and with his designer's eye and hers, amateur but sophisticated, they compose ever-varying settings.

WEBB

A table setting is a three-dimensional still life, whether or not it is intended to be. All the same elements that a painter is concerned with—color, mass, texture, line, and composition—go into the choice and placement of the objects and their background. And like a still-life painting, a table setting reflects its maker. You may establish your own table-setting tradition in a composition that you vary but slightly from time to time, so that your family and guests can look forward with pleasurable certainty to seeing and using favorite things. You may work in a predictable style related to the style of your dining room, within which you play unexpected and delightful changes. You may create excitement with mélanges, fantastic sometimes, never the same. Or you may adopt a leitmotiv—some very special centerpiece or candlesticks—as your only constant. But whatever your style, and whatever the particular palette of cloth, china, glass, silver, flowers, and foods that you have to work with, your table settings can be the medium for a highly personal expression. A still life that is re-created for every meal offers a wonderful opportunity to indulge the universal human urge to design and redesign with abandon. Here is a gathering of imaginative tables, created by six different people, each of whom has a very personal approach to table setting and expresses a unique and thoughtful philosophy.

MILLER

"My table arrangement has to be heavy to be effective," believes Mrs. John Minor Wisdom.

Judge and Mrs. Wisdom live in the garden district of New Orleans where, she says, "a light touch is lost in these opulent early Victorian houses." It is more than a matter of compatible styles: her 15-foot ceiling demands the heroic height of the 27-inch central compotier, and the long table demands a lengthy centerpiece. During the camellia season, she makes lavish use of the blooms from her own garden. Sometimes, to go with the same ruby goblets, she fills the compotiers with pink roses; sometimes she uses her clear stemware, marches three covered Coalport serving dishes down the table, and rings the candelabra with pansies in crystal bobêches.

"I seldom go back to the same composition," declares couturier Arnold Scaasi.

"I love fantasy," says designer Scaasi; "and the dining table where we spend only an hour or two can better afford to be 'far out' than anything else we live with." For a midnight supper in his Manhattan apartment—"the witching hour when nothing has to be real"—Mr. Scaasi assembles as the visual part of the feast some of his pretty possessions: rare white shells from his extensive collection, little brasses, patterned Italian plates on patterned Italian mats, a bell jar of butterflies, carved ivory utensils, antique silver and crystal, jade coffee cups. He loves the richness of these particular details, but his next fantasy will differ: "It's more fun composing another."

"I adore flowers, but my table is too narrow for them," explains Mrs. Munn Baker.

To make up for the absence of real flowers, Mrs. Baker relies on flowered linens in various colors, flower pictures on her wall, and a needlepoint rug covered with giant sunflowers. Constant components in her table setting are the white Meissen tureen that always stands in the center, and the silver boxes which she distributes among the place settings. The table, a round one that seats four, can be expanded by leaves to accommodate as large a party as twelve, and Mrs. Baker varies her candlesticks accordingly: she uses Louis XV crystal for four; vermeil when it is expanded by one leaf; crystal candelabra when fully extended.

"I need an uncomplicated scheme because I set my table after my guests arrive," observes Countess Margaret Willaumez.

The Countess Willaumez' guests dine in her New York City living room at a card table expanded by a round top, and she doesn't want them walking in on the waiting table, so there is no table until after cocktails. "I have to get a strong decorative effect simply, and a dramatic cloth does it," she says. She likes to use this tablecloth of dark printed cotton which she had made with a lining and a finger welt border to give it body. With this kind of cloth very little has to be added for visual impact: bright plates (she has a varied collection) with minimal accessories, colored napkins, a last-minute pyramid of fresh apples. White enamel paint gives bamboo handles of stainless flatware their porcelain look.

The unstudied art of fixing flowers

"I never think of arranging flowers," said one of the readers who answered our questionnaire, "I'm a flower fixer." The word "arrangement," suggesting, as it does, formal lessons, books of diagrams, prescribed containers, and artificial props, chills the ardor of many flower lovers. But the nosegays and bouquets of the "flower fixer" evoke the inspired grace and uncontrived charm that H&G believes is far more expressive of true art. Flower fixers supplement their conventional containers with mugs, jugs, and medicine bottles. They find uses for stubby-ended buds and almost-finished blooms, mix field flowers with hothouse roses. And they improvise freely, not with the nervousness of perfectionists, but relaxed, with fond hearts.

Fresh-from-the-garden bouquets in simple containers

Mrs. Joseph Bartlett of Beverly Farms, Mass., likes her flowers to look "as though they were just gathered," as indeed they often are since she lives in a former gardener's cottage with a working greenhouse attached, and gardens all around. Simple country containers like the tea caddy, left, and the basket, above, are among her favorites.

On a table in Mrs. Munn Baker's living room, a country garden in microcosm, right: a dozen different kinds of blossoms, their stems cut short, stuffed into a tight bouquet, then casually garnished and supported by trailing ivy.

Dozens of roses, from buds to overblown

All summer long, Mrs. Harold Johnson of Southampton, N. Y., fills her house with roses from her garden. Sometimes she masses them, English fashion, in a tôle-lined wicker basket, left, the flowers ranging from buds to blooms past their prime.

"I would rather cut and fix flowers than almost anything else I can think of," says Countess Margaret Willaumez. To her, all flowers are beautiful and all beautiful containers useful (including used perfume bottles). She never throws a living flower away, makes marvelous bouquets of leftovers, and has worked out such therapies for wilting blooms as a night standing up to their necks in a brimful bucket of water or a few hours' soak in the tub. Almost always, she cuts the stems of florists' flowers: a dozen long-stemmed roses look "hotel-lobby-boring" to her, but she will cut them and mix them with unorthodox companions such as daisies, and end up with two charming bouquets. Some of her handiwork: 1. Two ranunculuses in a medicine bottle placed on a low table next to a chair to be viewed and savored from above. 2. A few leggy lilies, dramatic alone in a narrow-necked bottle, fixed so they look well from all sides. 3. A mélange of yellows and oranges chosen from a variety of species, in a loose, casual, but well-balanced bouquet. 4. Several separate tiny nosegays placed on a table as you would arrange any group of choice objects. 5. For a delicate look, a few pale flowers, thrust in a vase, with lacy baby's breath to fill in the spaces. 6. Many colors, many kinds, "poor and fine," in a mixed, fan-shaped bouquet.

25 marvelous ideas for Sunday artists (over half our panel) and collectors (almost everyone)

"What would you like to see invented to help you display your personal treasures?" we asked our reader panel; "or to care for them, or to aid your own creative efforts?" We were inundated by urgent proposals: "a really good place to keep sheet music . . . a better way to light pictures—uncomplicated, inconspicuous . . . good-looking glassed-in cabinets . . . storage space for my painting paraphernalia . . . a magic dust discourager . . . drawers for a collection of drawings and prints . . ." So we combed the marketplace, including such offbeat hideaways as natural science, chemists', and printmakers' suppliers, and came back with a marvelous horde of already invented solutions. Some had been specifically designed to cope with the ubiquitous problems cited; many more were intended for quite different purposes, but proved remarkably adaptable. To this happy catch we added a number of bright ideas inventive people have worked out for themselves.

For a stylish vitrine-like display of small treasures, you can put together a coffee table that comes knocked-down, unpainted, complete with casters. Recessed top can be covered with glass to laugh at dust. Pre-Columbian art, Carlebach Gallery.

TO CAST A WELCOME GLEAM ON A MUSIC RACK OR WORK TABLE, THE CLAMP-ON SWIVEL LIGHT IS BACK WITH A BANG. SHADE COMES IN OPAQUE GREEN GLASS, OR IN METAL IN FIVE COLORS.

To light a painting or a flower arrangement, a wall-hung shelf above it with a fluorescent tube near its front edge will cast light both down and upwards.

Titles in view, safe as Fort Knox, your record albums can go to bed in a walnut cabinet with sliding glass doors. Capacity: 300 12-inch discs. Vivid companion print by Vasarely, the Multiples Gallery.

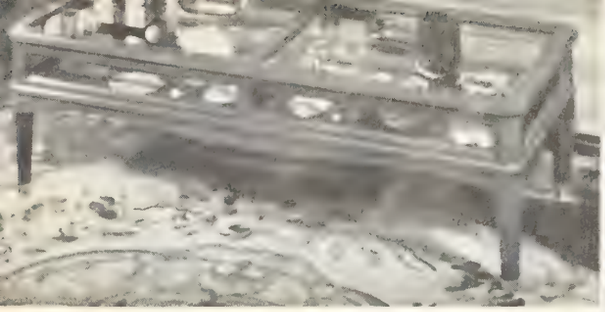
For the Sunday painter, the ceramicist, or any artist-at-home, H&G has designed a dashing new storehouse that packs a mountain of supplies into a few square feet and is good-looking enough to hold its own anywhere in the house. The steel framework that goes together like a child's Erector Set supports ordinary wood-plank shelves that we covered with self-adhesive plastic. We also incorporated outsize compartments for stretched canvases and such, as well as a roller pole for uncut canvas. Much of the holdall's dazzle springs from the containers—things you may never have thought of: tight-lidded pretzel tins painted to the nines, scientists' glass jars with metal tops, tiny-drawered Japanese boxes of paper-covered cardboard, wicker letter trays, and a clutch of hampers. Steel frame by Dexion; jigsaw-puzzle vinyl-painted Masonite floor by Betty Thomson. For shopping information, see page 121.



Hammer-happy print collectors will love a build-it-yourself coffee table with four shallow drawers for crease-free storage. Working plans. Tamarind Lithography Workshop.

Favorite titles in murky bookshelf corners spring to life with a metal strip-lighting fixture, 10 inches long, that takes two incandescent tubes, can be mounted to shine well-up, or—if you like—well-down.

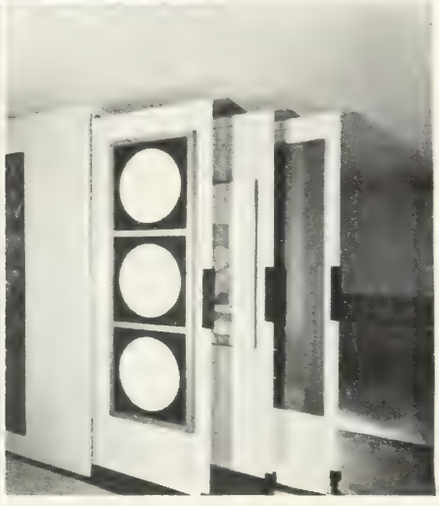
Shells, the connoisseur's fruits de mer, are shown off by the C. Gerald Goldsmiths in the library of their New York apartment in a remodeled vitrine—now a coffee table. Mrs. Goldsmith cut down the legs, lacquered the table red, and lined the case with bold red satin.

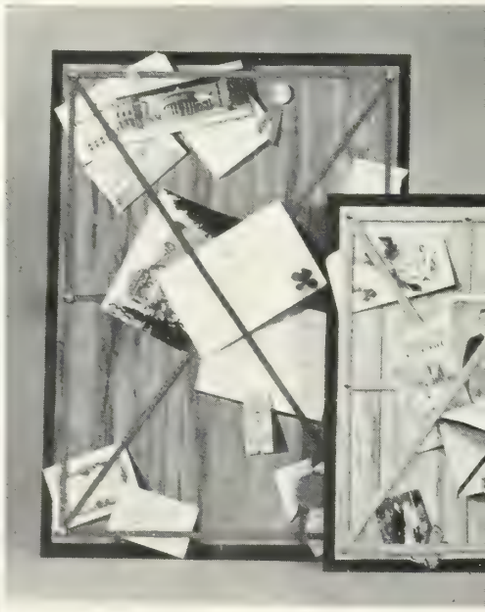
Pretty trifles from the avian and animal worlds—marble egg, butterflies, carvings—are displayed by Santa Fe artist Ford Ruthling in a series of small shadow boxes sealed away with glass cut into a hollow flush-panel door.



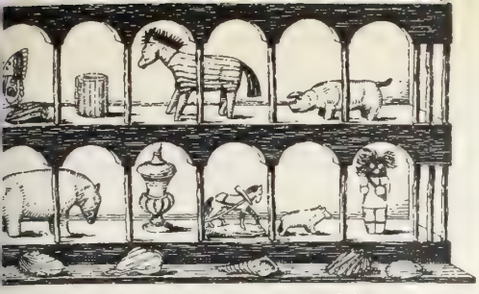
GOOD NEWS FOR THE SPACE-STARVED: YOU CAN STILL GET STACKABLE BOOKCASE SECTIONS WITH WOOD OR GLASS-PANELED DOORS THAT LIFT UP AND SLIDE BACK INTO THE CASE. SECTIONS COME IN TWO HEIGHTS, TWO WIDTHS, IN A CHOICE OF HARDWOODS, OR UNPAINTED. YOU CAN STACK THEM LIKE HOT CAKES RIGHT TO THE CEILING OR LINE THEM UP ON A WALL. FOLK ART FROM AMERICAN INDIAN ARTS CENTER.

For collectors who like to shift the scenes, Mrs. Dene Ulin of New York's Apartment Gallery has designed a special closet for paintings "on vacation." A series of perforated-board panels on rollers slide back into a simple housing of floor-to-ceiling sides linked by a narrow board at top.

SHEET MUSIC, NEATLY INDEXED FROM "ALCESTE" TO "ZAZA," CAN BE LAID AWAY IN AN ORDERLY MANNER IN AN ELEVEN-DRAWER CABINET WITH A BLACK-AS-A-RAVEN EBONY FINISH. 34 BY 16¼ BY 14 INCHES.



Dramatic limelight for paintings, sculpture, or a collection of bibelots streams from a floor-to-ceiling pressure column with a power track and room for seven cylindrical swivel fixtures that take a 100-watt bulb each.



Anything from Fabergé eggs to Meissen pug dogs can be displayed in the cubbyholes of specimen cases in several sizes in a natural wood finish.

Memorabilia—valentines, carnets de bal—mounted in arrangements that suggest tron l'oeil paintings. Designed by Elizabeth D. Lo

A collection of folk art and whimsies parade behind the arches of a wall-hung étagère designed by Ford Ruthling. "Columns" are made of tree twigs.

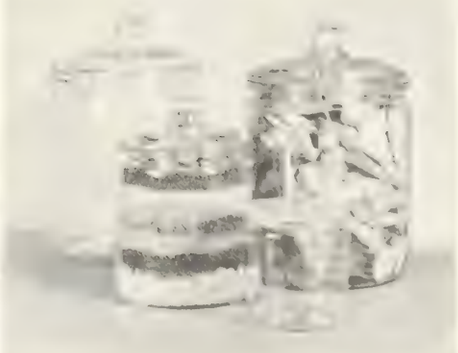
Give star status to your favorite painting with a freestanding, high intensity projector lamp that throws a fine 6-foot, 200-watt beam. Adjustable shutter parts shape the beam to exactly the size of the painting.

HAWAIIAN EXOTICA—HERE, RARE SHELLS, CORAL—ARE FANNED ACROSS THE CABINET'S SHELVES IN JOHN GREGG ALLERTON'S LIVING ROOM IN KAUAI. CABINET EXTERIORS ARE THE SAME YELLOW OF THE WALLS BUT, TO DRAMATIZE THE SHELLS, THE INTERIORS ARE PURE WHITE.

To light a piano score—or perhaps your sewing machine—a small, high-intensity lamp untelescopes to 15 inches high, swivels any way you direct.



A PERFECT ROOST FOR THE TELEVISION (SO OFTEN A LONE BAIRN), ALONG WITH SUCH GOOD COMPANIONS AS BOOKS AND ART OBJECTS, IS AN ÉTAGÈRE. THIS ONE, EXACTLY 2 FEET SQUARE, OPEN ALL AROUND, IS LACQUERED A BRILLIANT PERSIAN PINK. DESIGNER, ERICA LEMLE.

Fanciers of lepidoptera will certainly fancy exhibition cases of sturdy cardboard with glass tops. The elegant creatures—partnered here with a regiment of fancy beetles—are impaled on a soft backing.

Seaside loot—shells and sand dollars—make a pretty swirl in a chemist's jar with a tight-fitting lid. So do striations of multicolored seeds and legumes, built from the bottom like a perfect pousse-café.

For admire-but-don't-touch still lifes, bell jars with wood bases are still available in many sizes. To match the malachite obelisk, base was painted in faux malachite by June Odette of the Isabel O'Neil Workshop.

To highlight a painting in an unobtrusive way, an eyeball spotlight can be tucked away in a corner or on a shelf. A magnet holds the swiveling "eye" intact in its metal frame.

Graffiti a go go: a wall composed of culinary objects, food words, restaurant signs in varying high relief

Do-it-yourself:

FUN WITH WORDS AND OBJECTS

The wild and wonderful wall in the cafeteria of the new Columbia Broadcasting System headquarters in New York City might well be the inspiration for a highly decorative wall panel or door in a family room, a child's room, or a game room. The C.B.S. wall—a mix of wood type faces and droll, glued-on, screwed-on, and nailed-on culinary assemblages—was the creation of Louis Dorfsman, the company's director of design. It was inspired by his own collection of type faces—a passion that began a few years back with his impulsive rescue of a pile of antique wood type being chucked in a junk shop stove—and by his penchant for spotting interesting nothings and arranging them in offbeat compositions. All the objects in his inventive compositions on the cafeteria wall pertain to food—old cooking gear found in antique and junk shops; new cooking utensils he liked the looks of; wax foods designed for restaurant displays; a fake fried egg turned up at a joke shop. Some of his arrangements are as relatively flat as wooden forks; others, such as a hand offering an egg, project several inches from the wall. The rest of the space is filled with wood and plastic letters, 1 to 20 inches high, that spell out food words, restaurant signs, quotations.

There is almost no end to the variations that could be played on Mr. Dorfsman's basic idea. A shell collector might compose a wall panel of shell names punctuated with shell specimens. For a sun porch or a flower room you could design a wall of botanical names studded with flower pictures or small shelves for potted plants. A Civil War buff might mount Civil War artifacts on a panel or a door and surround them with the names of generals and battles.

It would not be difficult to make such a mural yourself, following or adapting the method employed at C.B.S. The first step was to sketch the whole composition to scale on graph paper. Then it was divided into 4-by-8-foot sections and, following the sketch, the components of each section were mounted on standard plywood panels and the whole thing painted white. Each panel was hung from the top of the wall so that it could easily be removed if desired with no damage to the building surface. Stimulated by Mr. Dorfsman's creation, H&G has designed three similar wall displays which you will find on page 122.

Almost two-thirds of our panel staged home performances of music or plays.

The brick-paved terrace directly in front of the Killingsworth house appealed to young Greg as a natural stage for his teen-age troupe of amateur players. Raised 18 inches above the lawn, the terrace provided just enough elevation for the performers, and the stretch of flat lawn beyond afforded space for an audience.

Family terrace: Teen-age

All summer long, from ten in the morning until ten at night, the home of the Edward A. Killingsworths in Long Beach, Calif., resounds with the clamor of a dozen or more teen-agers at work on a multi-arts project—the Virginia Country Theatre. An association of lively, dedicated, dues-paying young people, the Theatre produces one ambitious musical comedy every summer as well as numerous variety and talent shows throughout the year without adult assistance of any kind. And every aspect of their summer project, from the set making and the rehearsals to the three-nights-a-week performances, takes place within the bounds of the Killingsworths' less-than-an-acre grounds.

When Mr. Killingsworth, an architect, planned the house and its surrounding garden, he had no inkling that the latter would one day accommodate an outdoor theatre. But since the whole family have a lively interest in music (Mrs. Killingsworth is an accomplished singer), he designed for the front terrace a peninsula-like extension that might be used as a stage for informal outdoor concerts. To relate this brick-paved rectangle visually to the design of the house, he framed it with a decorative structure of wooden posts, beams, and panel dividers, partly topped by a slat roof.

Soon after the house was finished and the family had moved in, it occurred to the Killingsworths' older son, Greg, then fourteen, that the terrace projection would make a great stage for "Greg's Group," the theatrical company he had organized the summer before—and that the lawn beyond the terrace could seat a sizable audience. To persuade his parents, he drew up to scale a plan of the whole area between the house and the road (an area somewhat larger than the 3,000-square-foot house, and over half the total site), and indicated in detail how it could be converted to an outdoor theatre for three months of the year, then restored to its (Continued on page 126) ring the summer theatre's season the decorative framework r the terrace serves as a support for scenery and lights. The er, along with microphones, are connected to specially in- led outdoor outlets. Screen at left hides dressing rooms, nd-and-light-control panels, other backstage facilities.

The living room's glass wall, indicated at top of plan, below, is only 20 feet away from the back of the stage. Folding chairs set up on the lawn can seat 150 to 175 people, including the V.I.P.'s on "the balcony," a wood deck near the edge of the lot, which the Killingsworths use out of theatre season as an extra terrace.

CHILDREN, ART, AND LEISURE: TOMORROW'S AMATEUR

In a New York museum last year, I saw a group of children, tots in kindergarten and first grade, being guided through an exhibition of contemporary American art. One small child, starched and ruffled, pigtails twined with pink ribbons, knelt in front of a bronze sculpture of a light bulb. She took a tiny notebook out of her pocket and wrote painstakingly: J-a-s-p-e-r J-o-h-n-s b-o-r-n- 1931.

I stared at the child. She was studying—with such reverence—the work of an internationally famous painter who was still a teen-ager when the post-war cultural boom began. She was the age of my own children, and she made me uncomfortable. She made me aware of the fact that her generation will have more leisure time to study, enjoy, criticize, and, most disturbing, to create art than any other generation in history.

The cultural explosion! One reason why my family and I live in the country is that it offers a cowardly but efficient shelter against the reverberations of this current boom. Forty cities in the United States are said to be building multimillion-dollar art centers this year. Educators preach, with increasing fervor, the benefits of art in the development of young minds, its therapeutic value for the overworked businessman, the delinquent, the mentally retarded, and the retired. And all society lionizes the professional artist with unprecedented enthusiasm, after having disdained him for two centuries.

It has become fashionable in recent years to deplore the quantity of individuals participating in the arts. But I doubt if there is any larger percentage of the population engaged in singing, dancing, or writing than there was in the nineteenth century. It is the attitude of the individual that has changed, his aspiration to be recognized as a professional, his uneasiness at participating as an amateur. The art lover has become anxious to exhibit, publish, and show tangible proof of his creativity.

I am nostalgic for the opposite attitude: I am nostalgic for family orchestras, for accomplished watercolorists who feel no urge to exhibit or to sell, for occasional poetry written and read to intimate friends by the fireside. I miss the amateurship which thrives on disinterested, private enjoyment and which creates art as guileless as a gesture or a vase of flowers in the room.

Our children's generation is being promised, by the wonders of automation, the greatest era of leisure known to man, and nothing would give me greater joy than to see my children use this free time excelling, as amateurs, in various arts. But will the American climate permit them? Our tradition of amateurship has been scant. Amateur-ship thrives on a meditative, guiltless attitude towards leisure, and we have traditionally felt guilty about free time. We have taken one broad jump from our previous disdain for art to an indiscriminate cult of the professional artist.

Professionalism and amateurship are points of view dictated by different attitudes towards our ego and towards our use of time. The professional creates with a purpose of revealing his identity, and labors with an aim of exhibiting his work and receiving money for it. The amateur remains anonymous, and uses his time with art for private delectation, with no motive of recognition or of gain. The cult of professionalism is in vogue because in our recent glorification of the "creative," the "artistic," and the "educational" we have stressed productivity; not the private joys of free time, not the meditative aspects of art, but its usefulness. The six-year-old has to take notes at the museum, the adolescent has a bare half-hour of free playtime away from homework, popular professors are dismissed from universities for "not publishing enough." The suburban housewife, liberated from her chores by gadgetry, achieves a "creative" dimension in life by placing her work in a Greenwich Village or Madison Avenue gallery. The society woman who a few decades ago would have remained a happy amateur envies the glamorous new social status of the artist, and pays for her exhibition on the opposite side of the street. Publishers' desks are flooded by the manuscripts of lawyers, doctors, and businessmen who dream of abandoning their careers in mid-life to become "full-time authors." You, too, can be a professional! Shares in the Famous Artists' School of Westport, Conn., which promises to make you a professional artist "at home," have been among the boom stocks on the New York Stock Exchange.

Even my cowardly device of living in the country is no foolproof shelter from the ambition of the new professional. When we raised Aberdeen Angus cattle, our herdsman, who had a master's degree in animal husbandry, took a correspondence course in painting. His awkward portraits of prize-winning bulls were remunerative, and he abandoned husbandry to become a painter. He could have remained a happy amateur; he became a miserable professional.

Our aspirations towards professionalism are symptomatic of the unrelaxed way we look upon leisure. It is as if, having discovered the value of filling our spare time with art, we had dumped on our avocations the same ethic of hard work and profit which governed our vocations. It has been predicted that around the year 2000 we shall be working a fifteen-hour week, a three-hour day. What attitude towards leisure will our children bring to the remainder of this day when they are forty years old? No generation has been worse prepared for the free time threatening its future, and sociologists are writing about this threat with anxiety. Some see it as a Utopia for all, others as a world divided between technological specialists and untrained masses. Still others predict that man, when deprived of his conventional share of work, will lose all self-esteem and will live in "a paradise of degradation."

One is reminded of Aristotle's judgment of the Spartans! They collapsed as soon as they acquired an empire, he claimed, because they did not know how to use the free time which peace brought. Unlike the Spartans, who taught their young no art except that of warfare, we offer our teen-agers an increasing variety of cultural material. One hears that these prosperous new consumers are purchasing cameras, recorders, watercolor sets, and electric guitars in unprecedented amounts. But how few of them try to excel in their hobbies! The tradition of excelling as an amateur was lost in the utilitarianism of the early twentieth century. And unless young people feel endowed with the exceptional gifts that go into the making of professional painters or musicians, few of them see the use of excelling at an art for the love of it. The big-business, marketplace atmosphere of our culture only increases spectatorship. It does not seem to facilitate the adolescent's participation in the arts, nor his enjoyment of leisure. The average teen-ager is left standing in the middle of the cultural explosion saying: "The hardest thing is knowing what to do."

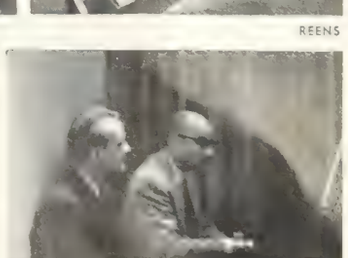
I return to the memory of the pigtailed girl taking notes at the museum. The most precious lesson which she could be taught, as a preparation for the new leisure, is a more contemplative attitude towards free time and towards art than our educational system allows. It might be useful, for her future, to study the Greek sense of leisure: Their word for it was schole, the root for our word school. Leisure, then, was to be used for education, and Greek education consisted, in part, of a distinctive amateurship. After a rigorous training in "gymnastics for the body, (Continued on page 126)

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mrs. Cleve Gray, her husband, and their two small sons live in a rambling eighteenth-century stone house in rural Connecticut. Although she is a professional writer—a contributing editor to Art in America—she hopes that her sons will excel, in their leisure time, as amateurs in many arts.

Practically everyone listened at home to music, and almost half made music themselves.

Planned for music

Dining dais steps, plumply cushioned on recital nights, make a fine listening post for guests. Freestanding closet holds stereo equipment and tape recorder on one side (all outstanding concerts are taped for the Gatos' library), china and chafing dishes on the other.



REENS

Programs vary from solo recitals on the harpsichord and piano to performances by chamber orchestra of ambitious works such as the Brandenburg Concerti, baroque curiosa.

We were hardly surprised to learn from our survey that almost everyone listened at home to music. But we were surprised at the proportion—so much higher than national statistics had led us to expect—who also make music themselves, predominantly on the piano, organ, and guitar. For listening, music equipment was located just about anywhere, anyhow, from a radio in every room in the house to a complete stereo system on each of three stories. A tape recorder was included in almost half these installations, and more than one was the work of do-it-yourself buffs who wouldn't dream of letting a professional "doctor" their music.

We were fascinated by the cleavage, straight down the middle, between those who wanted recorded music piped through their houses ("Music is like air—it should be everywhere") and those who believed it ought to be confined to a room (and time) where they could sit down and listen to it ("Music is personal—it shouldn't follow you around like a stray dog"). But despite the recently professed trend toward bigger and bigger stereo speakers, dozens of families begged for miniature equipment "that would be invisible, but still give great sound." (Mini-size circuits, evidently, cannot come too soon.) Not exactly invisible, but carefully planned for great sound, live and recorded, is the varied equipment in the rooms on these and the next three pages—three rooms specially designed for music and full of wonderfully inventive ideas you can copy or adapt as simply or as elaborately as you like in your own musical sanctum sanctorum.

A ROOM FOR PERFORMING

One of the surprises unearthed by H&G's survey was that in almost half the families we questioned, not only did someone play an instrument, but —in an impressively large number of clans—two members or more liked to play together or in concert with friends. Which brings up the question: where? Music-making, whether by a string trio or a swing combo, requires good lighting, plus, hopefully, comfortable accommodation for listeners. All this can add up to a hefty strain on a living room when these demands have not been anticipated. But it is no strain at all for Professor and Mrs. Harry C. Gatos, whose living-dining-music room in Weston, Mass., was planned for just such exigencies. Music-making, in fact, is so important a part of the Gatos pattern of living that their whole house was built around it. Designed by Earl R. Flansburgh & Associates, the house is so zoned that the living room is sufficiently isolated from the bedroom wing to allow the Gatos' three children—music students all—to sleep undisturbed by evening musicales, of which there are many. Professor Gatos is an accomplished flautist, Mrs. Gatos plays the piano, and between them they know enough musicians to rally weekly ensembles that range from string trios to chamber orchestras. And all are eager to revel in the music room's superb acoustics, the result of astute collaboration between the Gatos' architect and their sound engineer.

Lower section of the peak ceiling forms a "shell" over harpsichord and pian Then room rises abruptly to a 22-foot apex and slants down again to one-story height at dining end. Sound soars up and out (see diagram), hitting both low and high ceilings for rich resonance Fireplace end of room is for piano music and talk. TV is relegated to bedrooms.

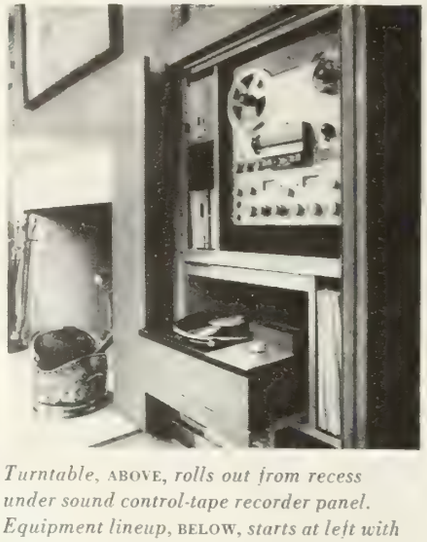
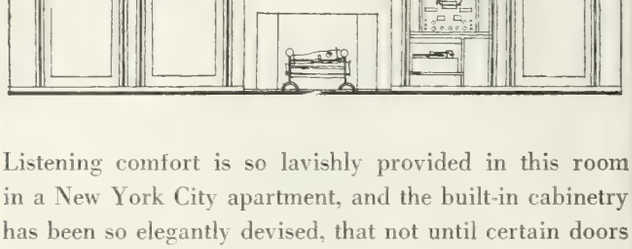
The impressively scaled, 36-foot-long, glass-walled living room of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Genin's house in Scarsdale, N. Y., is impartially arranged for listening to two kinds of music—live and recorded. Half of the deep-seated chairs and sofas face the fireplace end of the room where Mr. Genin plays the piano. The other half are focused on his electronic spectacular—the music wall. When the Genins bought their house, a place for music already existed in the divider between living and dining rooms—a fine location, but the divider as a structure suited Mr. Genin's Mozartian plans not at all. He ripped it out, and to go in its place designed a rosewood music center—10½ feet wide, 38 inches deep, almost 8 feet tall. With its tambour doors closed, it seems merely a handsome storage wall. Doors are opened by flipping a switch on a light panel near the front door, and thereafter an on-the-spot control panel set in the music center's slant-top counter runs the whole wondrous works a 100 per cent push-button operation, all the product of Mr. Genin's manual diligence. Across the top of the cabinet are tambour-doored compartments for tape storage. Below them are mounted two tape decks, one for recording, one for play-back, and in the next tier, the pre-amplifier, tuner, and a box containing a monitor TV and timer circuits. (The amplifier is concealed in the rear of the cabinet.) At left and right of the control panel are a record changer for playing a stack of records, and a turntable with a lathe-type retractable tone arm (the professional kind used for cutting records) for tape recording. Speakers are stacked at each end of the cabinet, and the lowest section houses five push-button-controlled bins for records, all filed between dividers labeled with the recording artists' names—a roster that sweeps from Flagstad to Sinatra.

A RETREAT FOR BUFFS



TOM YEE



Planned for comfort, the room takes quite as good care of the vertebra as it does the ear.

Both husband and wife play the organ; its speaker is across the room at left of fireplace.

Turntable, ABOVE, rolls out from recess under sound control-tape recorder panel. Equipment lineup, BELOW, starts at left with one set of stereo speakers, the organ speaker and, above them, tape storage. At right of fireplace is the compartment for turntable and tape recorder, then the second set of stereo speakers and, above, the tuner, amplifier and pre-amplifier.

Listening comfort is so lavishly provided in this room in a New York City apartment, and the built-in cabinetry has been so elegantly devised, that not until certain doors are open do you realize that what looks like a handsomely paneled library is a designed-exclusively-for-music room—a retreat, actually, for a pair of buffs. A couple who adore not only music, but poetry, they are busy, when not listening to symphonies, recording their favorite poems—rhymes and rhythms they find infinitely more delightful to listen to than to read from a book. To evoke these sounds is a battery of equipment installed under bookcases on each side of the fireplace. Paneled in pale fruitwood, this wall has a mate on the opposite side of the room where, instead of a fireplace, a deep niche houses a Hammond electric organ. In the equipment wall, the folding doors that conceal the speakers, turntable, and tape recorder are so beautifully made that, closed, they look like paneling, and the compartments above them—for tape storage on one side of the fireplace, for tuner and amplifiers on the other—are masked by tambour doors that ripple out from their recesses and could pass for eighteenth-century reeding.

Cook Book for Epicures in the Arts

Chefs are the artists of the kitchen and, like all artists, they are quick to recognize and honor those who truly appreciate the nuances of their craft. As creativity so often keeps company with a perceptive palate, it is hardly surprising that many of the most famous dishes have been inspired by—and called after—epicures in other branches of the arts. Rossini, a great composer and a great gourmet, gave his name to a style of preparation as rich and harmonious as his music, while dishes dubbed for opera stars, whose post-performance appetites are equaled only by their knowledge of good food, are legion. Pêche Melba and Chicken Tetrazzini, both invented by the incomparable Auguste Escoffier, "the chef of kings and the king of chefs," have become household words. The recipes in Escoffier's classic work, Ma Cuisine, read like a roster of the idols of yesterday: Rachel, Réjane, Sarah Bernhardt, Mistinguett, La Belle Otero, Mary Garden, Emma Calvé, Adelina Patti, Caruso, Verdi, Rossini. These namesake dishes were in the grand tradition of haute cuisine, voluptuous as those who consumed them. But as fashions in figures changed, so did fashions in food. Today, the Savoy Hotel in London, where Escoffier once ruled, prepares for Maria Callas a salad that is strictly low-calorie, while the dish favored by Roger Vadim and Jane Fonda, a flambéed steak, would have seemed sadly puny to Patti, who liked her lamb chops stuffed with a mousseline of chicken. In fact, the art and the fun of creating a recipe, a kitchen game anyone can play, lies in suiting it to the personality, as you will see in James Beard's Chicken Warhol, which could only belong to the king of pop. So, if you want to become an artist in the kitchen, assemble your palette of ingredients and put your imagination to work.

SOUP

Few soups appear in the roster of namesake recipes, perhaps because they hardly lend themselves to showy presentation. Two notable exceptions are a nourishing concoction made from calf's foot and turtle soup originated for the Swedish nightingale, Jenny Lind, and an oriental Shark's Fin Soup surprisingly named for Ernest Hemingway —possibly inspired by his famous story The Old Man and the Sea.

Shark's Fin Soup Hemingway

1 package shark's fins (from Chinese markets)
1 stalk celery with leaves
8 black peppercorns
1 leek, sliced
1 tablespoon butter
1 cup chicken broth
1 cup clam broth
Sherry
1 slice cooked Virginia ham, finely cut

Put the fins to soak in tepid water. Soak for 3 days, changing the water each day. On the third day, put the fins in a pot of fresh water with the celery and peppercorns. Bring to a boil, reduce heat, and simmer for about 3½ hours, or until the fins are transparent, slippery, and pliable. Drain off the water. Remove the celery and reserve. Discard peppercorns. Place the fins in another kettle. Sauté the leek in the butter and add to the kettle with the chicken and clam broths and 1 cup water. Simmer for about ½ hour. Add sherry to taste. At the last minute, cut the reserved celery in julienne strips and add to the soup with the ham. Serves 2.

To increase the servings and make the soup more substantial, add:

1 cucumber, sweet sour (Mid
6 water chestnuts, sliced
½ cup bean sprouts
1 or 2 pieces fowl then Mandarin (from pieces
2 leeks, sliced and sautéed in butter
1 small cooked chicken breast, cut in fine julienne

Simmer for about 10 minutes. Serve with rice, which may or may not be added to the soup. Give each person a tiny bowl of soy sauce in which to dip the small tidbits. Serves 4.

Soup Jenny Lind

1 calf's foot
Salt, pepper, nutmeg
½ bay leaf
1 onion stuck with 2 cloves
6 peppercorns
1 [illegible] cooked white [illegible] meat
1 egg white
1 cup (approximately) heavy cream
1 egg, beaten
Truffles
[illegible]
[illegible]

Place the calf's foot in water to cover with ½ teaspoon salt, the bay leaf, onion stuck with 2 cloves, and peppercorns, and simmer 3 hours.

Meanwhile prepare chicken quenelles: grind the chicken, ½ cup at a time, in the blender, adding the egg white and salt, pepper, and nutmeg to taste. Blend to a smooth paste. Rub the paste through a fine sieve and place it in a small bowl over cracked ice. Gradually work in heavy cream until the mixture is of a firm consistency. Form it into 18-20 small button-shaped quenelles. Dip the quenelles in beaten egg and roll in finely minced truffle, pressing the truffle in lightly with the blade of a knife.

When the calf's foot is tender, remove the gelatinous nerve and slice the meat into fine julienne. Add to the turtle soup and bring to a boil. Stir in the tapioca and then drop the chicken quenelles into the hot soup. Remove the soup from the heat and allow the quenelles to poach 1 minute. Do not let soup boil or quenelles will disintegrate. Serve with a slice of truffle in each helping. Serves 8.

Brunch at Brennan's is suggested by a table setting for Oeufs Tennessee Williams. Eggs keep hot in individual covered casseroles, a flowered napkin is tucked insouciantly through the handle of the wicker holder. French Quarter touches: individual café filtre, brioches in an outsize brioche mold, butter in French bistro ceramic dishes, a centerpiece that might have been picked from the flower-planted patio.

EGGS, PASTA

Oeufs Tennessee Williams

From Brennan's French restaurant in New Orleans comes a dish appropriately dedicated to the South's most famous playwright.

4 tablespoons butter
¼ cup thinly sliced white onion
¼ cup chopped shallots
1 teaspoon minced garlic
¼ cup chopped mushrooms
¼ cup chopped ham
½ cup diced potato, deep-fried until lightly browned, and drained on absorbent paper
¼ cup white wine
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
Salt, cayenne pepper to taste
1 ounce cognac
2 eggs, poached and kept warm

Melt 2 tablespoons of the butter in a skillet and sauté the onion, shallots, and garlic until tender. Add the mushrooms, ham, and potato, and cook about 5 minutes more. Add the wine and parsley and heat through. Place in a casserole.

Prepare a cream sauce by melting the remaining 2 tablespoons of butter and blending in the flour. Remove from heat and slowly add the milk, blending it until smooth. Return to heat and cook slowly, stirring constantly, until sauce is thickened and smooth. Season with salt and cayenne pepper and blend in the cognac. Place the poached eggs on top of the potato mixture in the casserole and top with the sauce. Serves 2.

Spaghetti à la Shirley Booth

At New York's famous theatrical restaurant, Sardi's, stage and television star Shirley Booth can often be seen enjoying the pasta dish called after her.

1 pound spaghetti
12 tablespoons butter
4 eggs
28 slices crisp bacon, crumbled
5 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
Salt, pepper to taste

Cook the spaghetti according to package directions, drain and add the butter, eggs, bacon, cheese, salt, and pepper. Toss lightly. Top with more Parmesan cheese if desired. Serves 4.

Omelette Madeleine Renaud

Raymond Oliver of Grand Vefour in Paris created this luscious recipe for the French actress.

5¼-ounce tunnel-shaped can mousse de foie gras
4 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons olive oil
8 eggs
Salt, cayenne pepper to taste
2 tablespoons heavy cream

Remove the mousse de foie gras from the can. Cut into ¼" cubes. Gently heat in half the butter and oil in a skillet until heated through but not hot. Beat the eggs. Add the seasonings. Heat the remaining butter in a large skillet. When very hot, pour in the eggs and reduce the heat. When the eggs are firm on bottom, lift the edges to allow the liquid egg to seep under.

As soon as the omelette is done, slip two or three tiny bits of butter under the omelette to help loosen it from the pan. When slightly browned on bottom, fold in half with a spatula and turn it onto a heated platter. Cut the omelette down the center, but not all the way through. Fill the slit with the heated foie gras cubes. Lightly pour the heavy cream over the omelette. Serve immediately. Serves 4.

SALADS, VEGETABLES

Meredith Willson Salad

An unusual salad created for the composer of The Music Man by Trader Vic's in the Beverly Hilton Hotel.

For each serving, arrange a bed of limestone or Bibb lettuce leaves on a chilled plate. Slice a ½" ring from a green pepper and center on the lettuce. Mix shredded celery root and watercress and put in center of the ring. For an entrée salad, top with julienne strips of barbecued pork. Serve with a dressing made by combining ⅔ cup safflower oil, ⅓ cup red wine vinegar, the juice of half a lemon, and salt and pepper to taste.

La Salade Rafraichie à la Callas

Far removed from the usual diva's diet, this low-calorie salad was originated by Trompetto, the chef at the Savoy Hotel, London, and is the favorite food of the willowy Maria Callas.

2 hearts of Boston lettuce
1 heart of romaine lettuce
1 stalk celery, cut into quarters
12 radishes
2 tomatoes, cut into quarters
2 carrots, shredded
1 bunch watercress
1 yellow pimiento, cut into quarters
1 red pimiento, cut into quarters
Salt, pepper to taste
4 tablespoons olive oil
Juice of 1–2 lemons

Place the salad ingredients in a bowl, making a colorful arrangement. Season with salt and pepper. Serve oil and lemon juice separately, as a dressing. Serves 2.

Salade Alexandre Dumas, Jr.

Dumas preferred to use Château d'Yquem for this salad of his own invention. You may or may not wish to follow his tastes.

2 pounds small potatoes in their jackets
Bouillon
¼ cup white wine
1½–2 cups mussels, freshly cooked, or canned
2 tablespoons each chopped chives, parsley, tarragon
⅓ cup oil
¼ cup wine vinegar
Salt, freshly ground black pepper to taste

Boil the potatoes in their jackets in bouillon to cover. When they are just cool enough to handle, peel off skins and slice. Add the white wine to the still warm potatoes and toss. Allow to cool. Combine with the mussels, the chopped herbs, the oil, and vinegar. Season to taste. Toss carefully. Let stand for an hour or two before serving. Garnish with additional chopped herbs. Serves 6–8.

Potatoes Byron

An Escoffier creation which bears the name of the romantic poet.

6 baking potatoes
3 tablespoons butter
Salt, pepper to taste
¾ cup heavy cream
⅓ cup grated Parmesan cheese

Bake the potatoes in a 325° oven for 1 hour. Scoop out pulp and put in a bowl with the butter, salt, and pepper. Mash with a fork, working in butter thoroughly.

Place an 8" flan ring (or top of a spring form pan) in the center of a shallow baking dish. Fill the ring with the potato mixture, packing firmly. Slowly pour the cream over the potatoes, and allow to stand 10 minutes. Remove flan ring. Sprinkle Parmesan cheese over the top.

Bake 15 minutes in a 375° oven, then brown quickly under a hot broiler. Serves 6.

FISH

Filet of Sole Verdi

Verdi, like Rossini, gave his name to a style of preparation. A la Verdi means with macaroni, Mornay sauce, and a garnish of chopped lobster and truffles.

¼ pound elbow macaroni
6 filets of sole
Court bouillon
½ cup cooked lobster meat, sliced
Truffle slices
Mornay sauce (see recipe on this page)

Prepare the macaroni according to directions on package. Poach the sole filets in court bouillon to cover for 5 minutes. Arrange them in a row on a bed of the cooked macaroni and garnish with alternate slices of cooked lobster and truffles. Mask with Mornay sauce and glaze under the broiler. Serves 6.

Filets de Sole Otero

Escoffier's graceful tribute to La Belle Otero, the nineteenth-century dancer and beauty.

6 large baking potatoes
½ cup Chablis
1 slice onion
1 bay leaf
1 sprig parsley
3 peppercorns
6 small filets of sole
6 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
¾ cup heavy cream
Salt, pepper, white pepper to taste
1 cup small cooked shrimp
Grated Parmesan cheese

Bake the potatoes in a 325° oven for 1 hour. Meanwhile prepare a court bouillon: combine ½ cup water, the Chablis, onion, bay leaf, parsley, and peppercorns in a sauté pan. Simmer 10 minutes. Roll each filet tightly and place rolled edge down in the bouillon. Baste well, cover, and poach gently for 15 minutes. Uncover and baste until fish is white through. Do not overcook. Remove the filets and reduce liquid to ¾ cup by boiling rapidly. Strain and reserve.

Melt 3 tablespoons of the butter in a heavy saucepan, add the flour, and cook, stirring, until bubbling and golden. Remove from heat and add the reserved fish broth and heavy cream. Return to heat and cook, stirring constantly, until thick and smooth. Season with salt and white pepper.

When the potatoes are cooked, remove the pulp carefully, leaving the shells intact. Mash the pulp with the remaining 3 tablespoons of butter, add salt and pepper to taste, and keep warm.

Add ½ cup of the shrimp to ½ cup of the sauce. Place a spoonful of this in each potato case and carefully add a poached filet. Spoon the remaining sauce over the filets, making sure that each case is filled. Place in a shallow baking dish. Sprinkle with grated cheese. Bake in a 350° oven 15 minutes, then glaze the tops quickly under a hot broiler. Garnish with the remaining ½ cup shrimp and the mashed potatoes, formed into small mounds around the dish. Serves 6.

Luncheon table for Coulibiac of Salmon Colette evokes the French countryside she loved: regional pottery; straw corbeille holding an arrangement of artichokes, garlic bulbs, blooming chives; apéritif of kir.

Coulibiac of Salmon Colette

The French writer Colette loved coulibiac. This version was specially created for her by Raymond Oliver, owner of the Grand Vefour in Paris, and often shared with her friend Jean Cocteau.

1 cake or package yeast
Salt, white pepper, paprika
1 tablespoon sugar
⅔ cup warm milk
4 eggs
3 or more cups flour
Butter
½ cup each: sliced onion, sliced carrot
3 shallots, chopped
1 bay leaf
5 peppercorns
¼ cup Chablis
1 tablespoon cognac
1 pound fresh salmon, cut in thin strips 1½" by 5"
½ cup raw rice
½ pound cooked lobster, diced
1 tablespoon each: chopped chives, chopped parsley
1¾ cups Mornay sauce (see recipe, right)
3 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
1 egg yolk, slightly beaten

If using a yeast cake, cream it with 1 teaspoon salt and the sugar in a large bowl until the mixture liquefies. If using a package of yeast, dissolve it in ¼ cup warm water and add 1 teaspoon salt and the sugar, stirring until completely dissolved. Add the warm milk, eggs, and enough flour to make a soft dough. (The packaged yeast mixture will require more flour than the cake yeast mixture.) Knead well, pulling and slapping the dough until it is smooth. Soften 8 tablespoons butter and work it into the dough. Continue kneading until the mixture is smooth and elastic. Add more flour if necessary during this process. Return to bowl, cover, and allow to rise until fully double in bulk.

Meanwhile prepare the filling: melt 1 tablespoon butter in a heavy frying pan and sauté the sliced onion, carrot, and shallots. Add 2½ cups boiling water, the bay leaf and peppercorns and simmer. Add the Chablis and cognac. Poach the salmon in this court bouillon, very gently until fish looks firm, about 5 minutes. Do not overcook. Remove salmon. Strain and measure broth.

Melt 2 tablespoons butter in another frying pan and add the raw rice. Toss or stir to coat it well with the butter and cook until the grains look golden. Add 1½ cups of the reserved fish broth, and season to taste with salt. Cover and cook 20–25 minutes, or until rice is fluffy and dry.

When the brioche dough has risen sufficiently, punch down and knead well. Fold and pull until dough is glossy and elastic. Cut off about ⅓ of the dough and place in the refrigerator. Roll the remaining dough on a floured board into a circle large enough to fit a 2-quart baking dish. Butter the dish well and line with the dough, allowing some of the dough to hang over the top of the dish. Prick the surface with a fork and cover with a piece of foil and dried beans or rice to hold the bottom down during baking. Bake in a 400° oven about 20 minutes, or until the brioche shell is nicely browned and comes away from the edge of the dish. Cool slightly. Carefully remove the foil and discard the beans. Remove shell. If bottom is not well browned, invert shell and place on outside of inverted dish and bake a few minutes longer.

To assemble, re-butter the baking dish and replace brioche shell in it. Mix the lobster, chives, and parsley into the Mornay sauce, season to taste with salt, pepper, and paprika, and spread some of this mixture on each slice of salmon. Roll the filled slices jelly-roll fashion. Arrange a layer of the cooked rice in the bottom of the brioche shell. Place the rolled fish on top and add the remaining rice and the sliced eggs. If the mixture seems dry, pour 3 tablespoons melted butter over it. Roll out the reserved ⅓ brioche dough to fit the top of the dish. Allow crust to rise about 20 minutes. Brush top with the beaten egg and make a small hole in the crust. Insert a funnel made of aluminum foil. Bake in a 400° oven until top is well browned, about 25–30 minutes. Serves 6.

Mornay Sauce

2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
Fish stock
Light cream
¼ cup grated Gruyère cheese
Salt, cayenne pepper to taste

Melt the butter in a heavy saucepan, blend in the flour, and cook until bubbling and golden. Remove from heat and add fish stock—you will need 1½ cups liquid; add light cream if necessary to make up the required amount. Return to heat and cook, stirring constantly, until sauce is thick and smooth. Allow to cool slightly and add the cheese, salt, and pepper. Makes 1¾ cups.

POULTRY

Breast of Chicken Rossini

More dishes have been named for Rossini than for any other composer, and his name has become synonymous, in haute cuisine, with recipes calling for foie gras.

6 small breasts of chicken, boned
3½ tablespoons sweet butter
¼ cup chopped carrots
⅓ cup chopped onion
⅓ cup chopped celery
2 tablespoons flour
2 10½-ounce cans bouillon
½ cup Madeira wine
6 tablespoons pâté de foie gras or chicken liver pâté, lightly salted
6 rounds toast, fried
Parsley

Remove the skin from the chicken breasts and shape them into neat mounds. Sauté gently in 2 tablespoons of the sweet butter, covering the pan during the first 5 minutes of cooking. Set aside and keep warm. Prepare Madeira sauce: melt the remaining 1½ tablespoons butter in a heavy frying pan and add the chopped vegetables, cooking 20 minutes. Sprinkle with the flour and cook 5 minutes more. Add the bouillon and simmer for 30 minutes. Strain and add the Madeira wine just before serving.

Spread 1 tablespoon pâté on each round of toast and place on a hot serving dish. Put the chicken breasts on these prepared toast rounds and pour the hot sauce over them. Garnish with parsley. Serves 6.

Variation: Before cooking, stuff each chicken breast with 1 tablespoon pâté. Omit toast.

Chicken Nordica

An American opera star famed for her Wagnerian roles, Lillian Nordica adored good food and ignored diets, as this namesake recipe indicates.

3 tablespoons chopped onion
6 tablespoons butter
½ pound chicken livers, chopped
½ pound ground veal
½ cup chopped parsley
Salt, pepper to taste
2 egg yolks, beaten
6 squab chickens
6 large thin slices smoked ham
2 ounces brandy
1 cup Madeira wine
½ pound mushroom caps, sautéed in butter
12 small white onions, glazed

Sauté the onion in 3 tablespoons of the butter until the onion is translucent. Add the chicken livers, veal, parsley, salt, and pepper. Stir over heat for 5 minutes. Remove from heat and bind with the beaten egg yolks.

Lightly stuff the squabs with this mixture, truss and wrap each bird in a slice of ham. Heat the remaining 3 tablespoons butter in a large casserole. When it is foaming, place the prepared birds in it and brown lightly on all sides. Pour the brandy over them and set ablaze. When the flame has burned out, pour over the Madeira wine, cover the casserole tightly, and braise 30 minutes, or until the squabs are tender. Serve with the sautéed mushroom caps and onions. Serves 6.

Poularde Fine Champagne, Bergonzi

From Quo Vadis restaurant in New York, a superb dish named for one of their favorite patrons, opera star Carlo Bergonzi.

2–2¾-pound roasting chicken
Salt, pepper to taste
¼ cup melted butter
1 medium onion, sliced
1 carrot, sliced
1 stalk celery, sliced
Pinch thyme
½ bay leaf
1 ounce cognac
½ cup dry white wine
2 cups heavy cream
Juice of ¼ lemon

Place the chicken in a heavy roasting pan and season with salt and pepper. Pour melted butter over the chicken. Roast in a preheated 350° oven for 1 hour, basting often. After ½ hour, add the onion, carrot, celery, thyme, and bay leaf. Five minutes before removing chicken, add the cognac and wine. When ready, remove the chicken and allow the vegetables to simmer in the wine a few minutes longer. Add the heavy cream and let boil for 3 minutes. Add the lemon juice. Season to taste. Strain sauce through a sieve and pour over chicken. Serve with rice pilaff. Serves 4.

Chicken Warhol

H&G's food and beverage consultant, James A. Beard, devised this amusing and appropriate dish for the king of pop art.

2½–3-pound chicken, cut in serving pieces
Melted butter
Corn-flake crumbs
Salt, pepper
10-ounce can condensed cream of chicken soup
½ cup heavy cream
1 pimiento, diced
4-ounce can button mushrooms, drained
¼ cup sherry

Dip the chicken pieces in the butter and roll in the crumbs. Arrange on a shallow baking pan. Salt and pepper to taste. Bake in a 350° oven for 1 hour, or until chicken is thoroughly browned and tender. Arrange on a platter.

Combine the chicken soup, cream, pimiento, and mushrooms and bring to a boil. Stir in the sherry and simmer for 5 minutes. Serve with the chicken. Serves 4.

Two recipes from the Paris bistro Camille Renault, where the walls are hung with paintings by the greatest modern artists, for whom many of the recipes on the menu are named. Picasso was a frequent visitor Chez Camille Renault.

Poulet Picasso

4-pound roasting chicken
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 tablespoon butter
1 green pepper, diced
1 sweet red bell pepper, diced, or ¼ cup diced pimiento
⅓ cup pitted green olives, coarsely chopped
⅓ cup pitted ripe olives, coarsely chopped
¼ cup cubed, baked ham

Pop goes the table setting for a teen-age party with Chicken Warhol as the main dish. Dime store and supermarket supply the makings: place mats of cardboard covered with shiny vinyl, foil broiler pans in place of plates, rolls in a steel-wool box. Paper flowers and flower-patterned napkins nest in empty soup cans, a large economy-size fruit juice can holds the sauce.

4 ripe tomatoes, peeled and quartered
Salt, freshly ground pepper to taste
Pinch of saffron

Roast the chicken in a 350° oven for 1–1¼ hours, or until done. Meanwhile heat the olive oil and butter in a heavy frying pan and add the green and red peppers. Add the chopped olives, ham, tomatoes, salt, pepper, and saffron. Cover and cook gently until the tomatoes are soft and the mixture has reduced some of the liquid. Cut the roasted chicken in quarters and cover with the sauce. Serve very hot. Serves 6.

Poularde Gauguin

Butter
1 large tomato, peeled, seeded, and chopped
1 shallot, chopped
1 cup chicken broth
1 large frying chicken, cleaned and quartered
6 slices fresh or canned pineapple, cut into small cubes
4 bananas, peeled
2 ounces Madeira wine

Melt 1 tablespoon butter in a small saucepan and add the tomato and shallot. Cook down over a very low flame. Add the broth, a little at a time. Let it reduce and blend with the tomato.

Either broil the chicken, starting skin side down, turning after 12 minutes and basting frequently with plenty of butter, or butter the chicken well and roast it in a 400° oven, basting frequently, for 1–1¼ hours, or until tender.

Melt 2 tablespoons butter in a skillet and sauté the pineapple cubes until delicately browned on all sides. Strain the reduced broth and tomato mixture and rub through a sieve. Add to the pineapple and cook 2 minutes. Sauté the bananas in 3 tablespoons butter until delicately browned on all sides.

Transfer the cooked chicken to a platter. Rinse the broiling or baking pan with the Madeira and add to the pineapple mixture. Pour the pineapple sauce over the chicken and arrange the fried bananas around it. Serve with rice. Serves 4–6.

MEAT

Lamb Chops Patti

Many chefs were inspired to create recipes for the Italian coloratura soprano Adelina Patti which included her favorite ingredients—foie gras and artichokes.

2 cups diced chicken breasts
2 egg whites
Salt, pepper, nutmeg to taste
2 cups heavy cream
1 cup cooked, mashed artichoke bottoms
6 double lamb chops
7 tablespoons butter
½ cup chopped truffles
1 teaspoon brandy
1 cup Béchamel sauce
6 slices foie gras

Grind the diced chicken in a blender using ½ cup chicken at a time. Add the egg whites, salt, pepper, and nutmeg to the ground chicken and blend until the mixture is a smooth paste. Place the paste in a small bowl over cracked ice and gradually work in 1 cup of the heavy cream and the mashed artichokes. Stuff the lamb chops with this chicken-artichoke purée. Heat 3 tablespoons of the butter in a casserole and quickly brown the lamb chops on both sides. Cover the casserole tightly and braise the chops 25 minutes, until tender.

Cook the chopped truffles in 2 tablespoons of the butter for 2–3 minutes. Season with salt and pepper. Add the brandy and ignite. Combine the remaining 1 cup heavy cream with the Béchamel sauce. Add the truffles and the remaining 2 tablespoons butter.

Serve each lamb chop on a slice of foie gras and cover with the truffle sauce. Serves 6.

Scaloppine of Veal à la Arlene Francis

From Sardi's, a favorite New York haunt of stage, screen, and television celebrities, a recipe named for a charming and talented actress.

16 pieces scaloppine of veal
Flour seasoned with salt and pepper
¼ pound butter
4 ounces Marsala wine
1 cup beef or chicken broth
1 cup sliced mushrooms, fresh or canned
14-ounce can artichoke hearts, drained

Dredge the veal in seasoned flour. Sauté in the butter until brown, about 4 minutes on each side. Add the Marsala and cook 2 minutes more. Add the broth, mushrooms, and artichoke hearts. Simmer for 5 minutes. Serves 4–8.

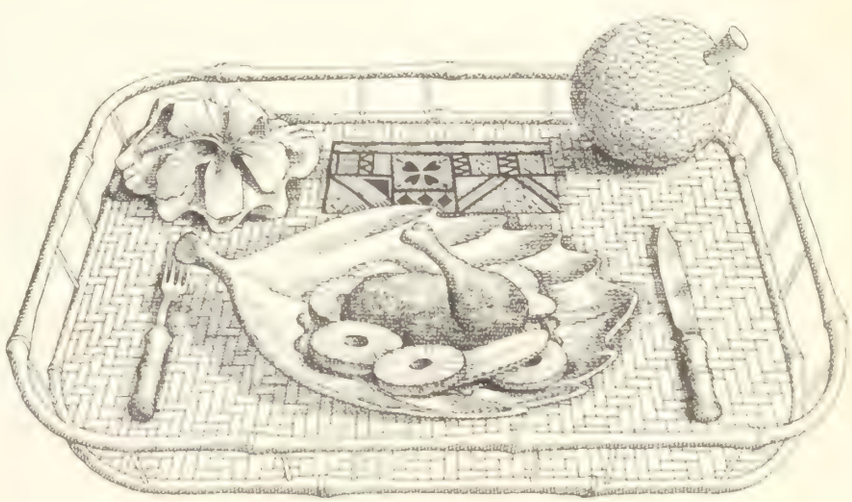
Tournedos Mistinguett

An Escoffier tribute to the French music-hall queen whose legs were her fortune.

4 tablespoons sweet butter
½ cup finely chopped carrots
½ cup finely chopped onion
⅓ cup finely chopped celery
2 tablespoons flour
½ cup Chablis
2 10½-ounce cans beef broth
2 tablespoons liver pâté
2 tablespoons cognac
6 tournedos
Chopped parsley

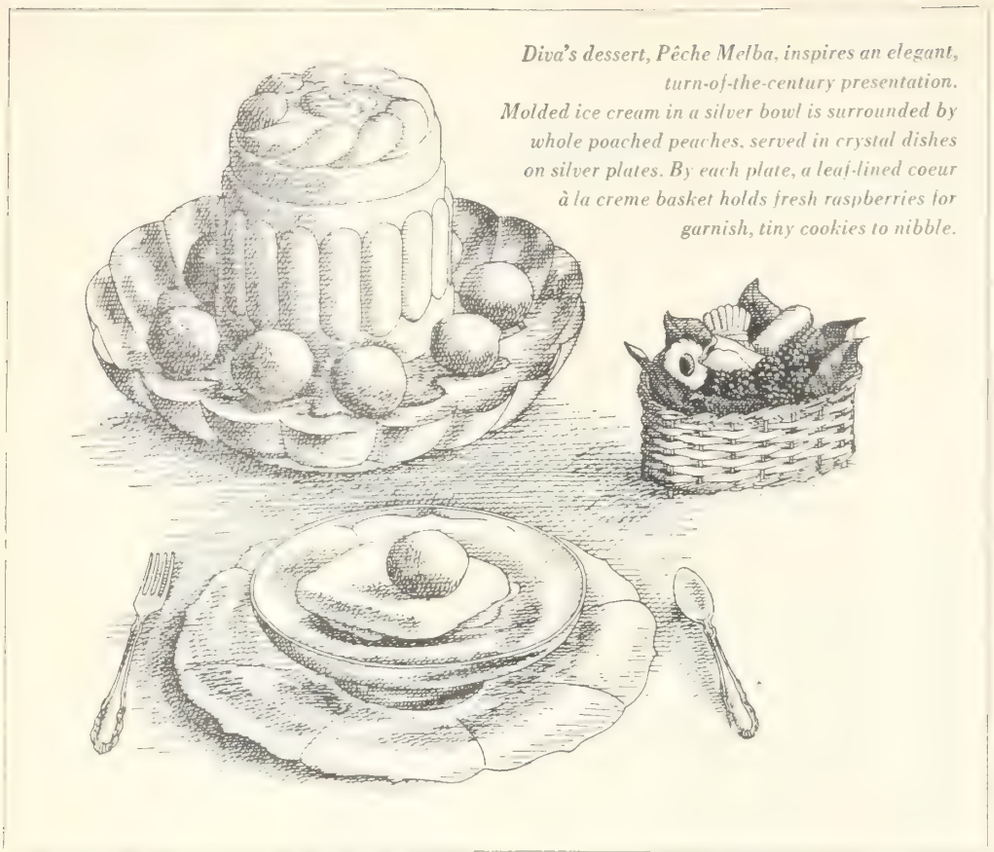
Melt 2 tablespoons of the sweet butter in a heavy frying pan and add the chopped vegetables. Cook gently for 20 minutes. Sprinkle with the flour and cook 5 minutes. Remove from heat and pour in the wine, scraping up all particles of butter that adhere to the pan. Add the beef broth. Return to low heat and simmer for 30 minutes, stirring occasionally. Strain the sauce, pressing the vegetables gently to extract all flavor. Carefully stir in the pâté and cognac, being careful to stir out lumps. Keep warm.

Sauté the tournedos in the remaining 2 tablespoons sweet butter, searing both sides very quickly. Place on a hot serving dish, mask with the sauce, and garnish with chopped parsley. Serves 6.



Steak Provençal Flambé Vadim

One of London's chic new restaurants is the Artiste Affamée in Chelsea, among whose patrons are Roger Vadim, the French movie director, and his actress wife, Jane Fonda.



½ cup white wine
Butter
1 clove garlic, finely chopped
½ cup rich beef stock or canned bouillon
Salt, freshly cracked black pepper to taste
Tabasco (optional)
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
Fennel and thyme twigs
3 or 4 bay leaves
Filet steak, or porterhouse without the bone, 2" thick

Simmer the wine with 3 tablespoons butter until the butter is melted and the alcohol in the wine has evaporated. Add the garlic and beef stock and simmer for 4–5 minutes. Correct the seasonings. (For a richer, spicier sauce, stir in 3–4 more tablespoons butter and a dash of Tabasco.) Add the parsley and keep the sauce warm.

Put a good handful of fennel and thyme twigs and the bay leaves on a metal tray and place tray in a 400° oven. Remove when twigs are crisp and brown. Broil the steak on a ribbed metal grill until the surface is sealed and browned on both sides. Bring the tray of herbs to the table and set on several thick mats. Light the browned herbs with a match—the flame should be about 18" high. Hold the steak with tongs in the highest point of the flame for about 1 minute, until it is sizzling and has absorbed the flavor of the smoke. Serve the steak on a hot plate with a little of the sauce poured over.

Tahitian textures and patterns create a South Pacific mood for an informal terrace dinner with exotic Poularde Gauguin. Instead of a place setting, each diner has a basket tray and a green leaf shaped plate, batik-patterned napkin, bamboo-handled flatware, and a coconut salad bowl resembling a breadfruit. Diva's dessert, Pêche Melba, inspires an elegant, turn-of-the-century presentation. Molded ice cream in a silver bowl is surrounded by whole poached peaches, served in crystal dishes on silver plates. By each plate, a leaf-lined coeur à la creme basket holds fresh raspberries for garnish, tiny cookies to nibble.

Serve with a plain salad with oil and red wine vinegar dressing. Serves 2.

DESSERTS

Pêche Melba

This is the original recipe created by Auguste Escoffier for Dame Nellie Melba. We have adapted the procedure slightly to suit modern methods.

Prepare a vanilla syrup with 1 cup sugar, 2 cups water, and a small piece of vanilla bean. Peel fresh peaches and poach in the syrup until just tender. Meanwhile, prepare a raspberry purée by forcing frozen raspberries through a fine sieve, or puréeing them in a blender and then straining them. To serve, arrange 1 peach, whole or cut in halves, on a serving dish and top with vanilla ice cream. Spoon the raspberry purée over it.

Costa d'Oro

San Francisco has always been an opera-loving city. This is the St. Francis Hotel's compliment to the glamourous soprano Mary Costa.

2 cups fresh sliced peaches
1 cup fresh raspberries
3 ounces Cointreau or Triple Sec
2 ounces kirsch

Heat fruit in a chafing dish with the Cointreau or Triple Sec and kirsch.

When raspberries start to color the liqueurs, ignite and allow to flame. When flame dies, serve hot in a crystal compote. Serves 2.

Coupe Sutherland

Many famous opera stars frequented the Longchamps restaurant across the street from the old Metropolitan Opera House in New York. This recipe was named for the Australian diva Joan Sutherland by executive chef Ernest Imhof.

12 egg yolks
⅓ cup Marsala wine
⅓ cup sherry
3 tablespoons sugar
Grated rind of 1 lemon
Grated rind of 1 orange
6 meringue shells
1 pint raspberry sherbet
Chopped pistachio nuts

Place the egg yolks, Marsala wine, sherry, sugar, lemon and orange rinds in the top of a double boiler over hot, not boiling, water. Beat steadily with a wire whisk until the zabaglione mixture thickens. You must be watchful, because zabaglione will curdle if overcooked. The minute the zabaglione turns custardlike, immediately cool over ice or in the refrigerator. To serve, place the meringue shells on serving plates, fill each with a big scoop of raspberry sherbet, spoon a generous serving of zabaglione over the sherbet, and sprinkle with chopped pistachio nuts. Serves 6

Apricot Beignets Rodgers

The Four Seasons, one of New York's best-known restaurants, is a favorite dining place of Richard Rodgers and his wife, Dorothy.

Flour
1 teaspoon salt
10 eggs, slightly beaten
12-ounce bottle Irish lager
18 apricot halves, poached or canned
Fat for deep frying
Apricot glaze flavored with cognac

Sift 2 cups flour and the salt together and combine with the eggs. Stir in the beer.

Drain the apricot halves and dredge them lightly with flour. Dip them into the batter. Lower them gently into hot 360° fat and fry until golden brown, approximately 4–5 minutes. Serve with apricot glaze flavored with cognac. Serves 6.

Fondant Colette Renard

An ethereal dessert appropriately named for the popular present-day French music-hall star, from Manoir de Vaumadeuc in Brittany.

1 square bitter chocolate
3 tablespoons milk
1½ cups confectioners' sugar
1 teaspoon instant coffee
5 tablespoons butter
4 eggs, separated

Melt the chocolate in the milk over low heat. Add the sugar with the instant coffee while stirring. Add the butter and stir until glossy and smooth. Remove from heat and cool until slightly thickened. Add the egg yolks, one at a time, beating well. Beat the egg whites until stiff and fold into the chocolate mixture. Pour into a well-buttered 8" ring mold. Set mold in a pan of boiling water and bake in a 375° oven for 25–30 minutes.

Allow to cool in the mold (as this is a type of soufflé, it will shrink and fall as it cools). To unmold, run a spatula around the edges and invert on a serving dish. Serve with custard sauce flavored with 1 teaspoon instant coffee or with partly melted vanilla ice cream, and sprinkle top with halved almonds or other nuts. Serves 4–6.

Soufflé Sarah Bernhardt

Many Escoffier recipes are named for the famous actress. This is one of the most delightful.

½ cup Curaçao
12 almond macaroons
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
⅓ cup sugar
5 egg yolks
1½ teaspoons vanilla
7 egg whites
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ cups crushed strawberries, fresh or frozen, flavored with Curaçao

Pour the Curaçao over the macaroons and allow them to soak up the liqueur. Melt the butter in a saucepan, add the flour, and cook until bubbling. Remove from heat and add the milk and sugar. Return to heat and cook, stirring constantly, until thick and smooth. Set aside to cool.

Beat the egg yolks and add to the cooled mixture with the vanilla. The mixture should be the consistency of mayonnaise. If it is too thin, return to heat and cook over low heat, stirring vigorously until thickened.

Beat the egg whites with the salt until stiff but not dry. Mix about one third of the whites into the yolk mixture. Then fold in remaining egg whites very lightly. Pour half the mixture into a buttered 1½-quart soufflé dish sprinkled with sugar. Add half of the macaroons, then add the remaining soufflé mixture. Place the remaining macaroons around edge of dish.

Bake the soufflé in a 375° oven for about 25 minutes, or until well-risen and delicately brown on top. Do not overcook. It should be moist in the center. Serve with the crushed strawberries flavored with Curaçao. Serves 4–6.

FUN WITH WORDS AND OBJECTS

DOOR FOR A CHILD'S ROOM

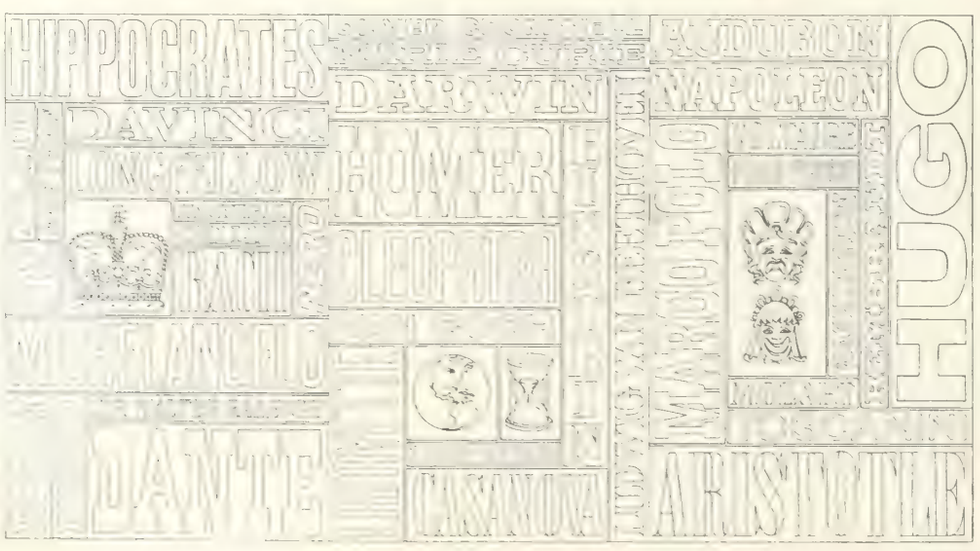
Words children love have insets for a movable clock face and a hooked-on changeable treasure, this time a teddy bear.



The witty mixture of type faces and objects on the wall of the new C.B.S. cafeteria prompted H&G to design a few variations scaled to likely areas in an average room—a wall, double doors, a single door. To adapt the idea to your home you could pick a suitable area to bring to life with a theme that suits your own family interests. The most convenient backing for these word-and-object compositions is clamp-on plywood panels that can be attached (or removed in case of change of mind or address) without doing drastic damage to the permanent surface. Perforated board also makes a good backing and keeps useful objects usable, growing collections flexible.

For your letters and numbers you might try a local sign-making shop or hardware shop (ready-made plastic or composition letters would be less expensive than wood letters cut to order). Also query mail-order houses that make street-address signs and ornamental initials, or consult the catalogues of firms that supply businesses with glue-on and screw-on indoor and outdoor letters. If you are truly adventurous, you could try your luck at beating the wrecking crew to any stores in your vicinity that are scheduled for demolition. Two firms that carry letters in a variety of materials and colors are: Mitten's Display Letters, 39 West 60 St., New York, N. Y., 10023; and Scott Plastics Co., Box 2840, Sarasota, Fla.

iew visual territory in which the ntification of colors and the rec- ition of relationships between ors was more important than the ached literary content. The mes- e, that a small gaff-rigged, half- ked sloop was tacking upstream he late afternoon of a summer's in 1898 with a Monsieur Quel- que in white shirt at the tiller, an irrelevance: what mattered that the color of the sail, as ked in sunlight as ripe apricot, the bridge relating the colors he sky and the river bank to se of the water. To live with the ture was to be liberated from its ject matter, and to be set free enjoy color relationships for ir own sake.

There are those who, always ing read Monet's pictures rath- han seen them, will not feel that s entitled to be thought of as a dern painter. It was, after all, 871, almost a century ago, that was in London looking at paint- s by Turner and disliking their e. His title to modernity rests ly, however, on his accomplish- nt as the liberator who set paint- free from the motif. The mod- movement was, truly, born n Monet's cavalier treatment of stacks, Gothic cathedrals, wom- water lilies, poplar trees, and ts as equivalent sources of re- ted light—that is to say as col- and not as things. He invented t new language, perhaps it uld be better to say music, ch one learns by living with dern paintings.

The first modern painting that vned was, I confess, bought un- a misapprehension. It was a ge canvas by Dufy which had a ject that appealed to me. It was iew of Chartres Cathedral seen oss the corn fields of the plain LeBeauce at harvest time. I had oyed just such a view of the ca- dral from the east a few months ore I saw Dufy's picture, while ing a picnic in a wheat field in ich a reaper binder was at work. ere it all was on the wall of the Fevre Gallery in London, the un- wheat nodding in the wind, the opies, the binder, the sweep of plain, the distant mass of the rious church, just as I remem- ed it. I had to have it.

The simplicity of Dufy's at- k makes him an easy painter to derrate, and I was underrating n. When I had his painting nging on the wall of my Wilt- re farmhouse, I discovered that only mentioned Chartres, wheat ds, and the warmth and promise harvest in passing. What I had s a lyric about the colors of sum- r, written in washes of transpar- color ornamented with a pat- n of calligraphic brush strokes floating over their surface. Dufy was extremely poor at the begin- ning of his career, and unsuccess- ful in selling his work. To eat, he worked as a textile designer, and his later works, of which my land- scape was a fine example, bore traces of that experience in its technique. While living with the canvas, I came to see that the lyric about the colors of summer was not itself the final subject of the pic- ture, and that what it was really "about" was Dufy's own technique, his pleasure in putting paint on canvas, and the manual dexterity with which he could handle it.

At first hearing there is some- thing repellent in the idea of a painting that is a mirror held up to a mirror, so that its message is reduced to the apparent tautology: "this painting is a painting." But when one becomes accustomed to the idea that a painting may be an end in itself, one discovers that this is a misreading. The statement made by the painting, which is its own subject, is an autobiographi- cal and personal one. My land- scape was not a view of Chartres across the fields of LeBeauce, but a view of Dufy at work. In effect it was a disclosure of his feelings about the medium in which he was working. I am not sure what my further reactions to this piece of work would have been, because I ran out of money about a year after I bought it and had to sell it back to the gallery. They sold it not long afterwards to a collector called Eumorphopulos and I have not heard of it since.

A painting that has given me particular pleasure over the years is a work by the English painter John Piper. This was my second picture, its purchase was in part a celebration of my recovery from the financial confusions that had forced me to part with my Dufy, in part the celebration of a mo- ment of understanding. I knew Piper, and liked going to see him in his flint and brick farmhouse near Henley in Oxfordshire. He was experimenting and searching for his own individual voice at the time, resisting the temptation to accept a ready-made language from among the many that were then being invented by Picasso and poured into the public domain to the confusion of the young and the uncertain. He was learning some- thing from Ivon Hitchens, but not finding in that lyrical colorist's work the method for expressing structural conceptions that he was looking for. He was learning some- thing else, too, from Ben Nichol- son, the most refined of English ab- stractionists, but was not finding in his exquisitely tinted reliefs a clue to the handling of the strong colors of night, and of emotional tension that he wished to use. He was finding more profit in the in- fluence of the constructivists, in particular in the work of Naum Gabo and Maholy Nagy, who were then arriving in England as refu- gees from Germany. Under their inspiration Piper had made, and was making, a large number of constructions of his own, objects midway between painting and sculpture, some colored, some white and textured. They inter- ested me, and I enjoyed photo- graphing them, and talking to Piper about them. But at the same time I felt inwardly that his de- parture from the plane surfaces of canvases and Masonite boards was a detour from his own main line.

I went away to spend four months in France in the summer of 1934, leaving Piper deep in these constructivist experiments. When I came back, I found him back on flat surfaces, incorporat- ing what he had learned by work- ing in three dimensions into a se- ries of hard-edged abstractions. It was only necessary to spend a few moments looking at these to realize that he had found his own voice at last, and that his days of the un- certain use of other men's voices, of promising impersonations, were over. Among them was a composi- tion of blue, blue-gray, black, white, and red that I instantly fell in love with and have lived with happily ever since. It is not by any means Piper's best picture, but it was the first of his pictures that I had seen that could not possibly have been painted by anyone else, and living with it has given me an understanding of all his later work.

Soon after I had bought the Piper, my mother came to visit me. She was somewhat hostile to it, and after looking at it thoughtfully, said: "I can't see why, if he feels like that, he doesn't do stage de- signs." He was, in fact, to do a great deal of stage designing later, and the instinct for the dramatic is an important element in his im- agination. He has always been torn between abstraction and certain romantic literary interests, archi- tectural, and atmospheric. Living with this painting of his, which so clearly expresses, in terms of tex- ture, color, and design, the nature of this internal conflict, has made me a participant in his struggle to resolve it.

The Piper hangs on my wall across the room from a painting by Hedda Sterne, the abstract expres- sionist of a decade ago who has re- cently had a show of portraits. Her painting is all texture and color, blue and black, but it is also essen- tially a summer night in New York. It is the color of what one sees when one looks across the back- yards at the houses on the far side of the block at two or three in the morning when all the lights are out. The forms are there, too, or at least Hedda Sterne's feeling about them. I fell in love with this paint- ing, too, as soon as I saw it, and wished to live with it, not so much because I valued the feeling about New York that it expressed, but be- cause I recognized an individual voice that belonged to Hedda Sterne, and to her alone, and an imagination that was developing and in whose expansion and ex- plorations I wished to share.

In the end it all comes down to Mrs. Chester Dale's simplicity. The paintings one lives with brighten the house. They do it by appealing to the senses and the im- agination, by giving pleasure, by extending one's knowledge of other minds, and by making one aware of the growth and development of vision that is a manifestation of the spirit of the age. Without paint- ing in one's house, as without mu- sic, without awareness of others, of other languages, of differences, one is not quite fully alive. Living with paintings is a part of that full use of one's mental and physical capacities which makes life, and which is often called happiness.

By midsummer, when the chromatic glories of spring flowers are largely spent, green comes into its own. In July, the light yellow greens have sobered and proliferated into a rich tapestry of deeper tones. The monochromatic pageant reaches its height and depth this month, before the too-persistent heat of late summer takes all the lightness out and leaves only the somber green of mature foliage. Thus July is not only a time when foliage is at its peak, but a time when foliage beauty is best planned for—despite the persistence of the hot-eyed zinnias and marigolds and their annual garden bedfellows. On fences, over the ground, up into the trees, against wood and masonry walls, across trellises and arbors go the summer greens. English ivies, the vincas (V. minor the year-round; V. major in seasonal planters and as evergreens in the South), pachysandra, bugleweed, and sarcococca are but some of the prostrate runners and creepers and trailers. original green serenity for the other nine. His ploy worked, and the Killingsworths' terrace and lawn became the official headquarters of the newly named Virginia Country Theatre.

Every year, as soon as school is out, the 150 members of the repertory group plunge into a frenzy of activity, beginning with auditions for the parts. But it is made quite clear to aspirants that singing, dancing, and acting represent only a few of the talents that are needed. Every member is expected to pitch in when called upon to help construct and paint sets, make costumes, cope with the technical complexities of sound and lights (an activity at which Greg's younger brother, Kim, now sixteen, excels), and cheerfully perform mundane chores.

At the beginning, the troupe made ingenious and complex use of commercial tape recordings of Broadway hits (having paid for production rights). And one of their first major investments was a play-back sound system with an elaborated series of controls. Using the tape in lieu of an orchestra, the performers, after assiduous rehearsals, were able to time their own singing and speeches to those of the original Broadway cast. Then the amateur technicians with their sound controls learned how to reduce the tape playback to a whisper while the live performers were singing or speaking, bringing it up to full volume for the orchestral parts. But faithful as the teen-age producers were to the timing of the original music, they did not hesitate to toss out great chunks of the original script and add witticisms of their own.

This summer, however, marks the beginning of a new era of expanded creativity. Having realized a long-standing ambition—a live orchestra composed of its own members—the company is now rehearsing its first original production: "The Late Marty Washington Might As Well Be Dead," a three-act musical dealing with the trials and traumas of an airlines pilot who is always late. John Harding, a nineteen-year-old club member, wrote the book and lyrics; sixteen-year-old Bruce Polay composed the music and will conduct the orchestra. And July 24 will see the curtain rise on what is very likely to be the Virginia Country Theatre's greatest hit.

music for the soul" the educated man, Plato said, was one who could take his place beside the professionals in the chorus. Education consisted, in even greater part, in cultivating a capacity for speculative thought, for meditation, as the only activities that are ends-in-themselves.

Our cult of professionalism is so ardent that we tend to overlook those cultures which have been more nourished by amateurs than by professionals. I admire no civilization more than that of China, where, from the tenth to the nineteenth century, the finest painting was produced by scholarly government officials, amateurs who turned to art in their spare time as a spiritual exercise and a means of meditation. Describing the culture of the Chinese gentleman-artist, Lin Yutang writes: "Professional painters fell into disrepute as the scholar-painter, the wenjen, the man of letters began to dominate the field. Through their writing they secured the triumph of their theory that painting should be exclusively the spiritual refuge of the non-professional. For them painting and calligraphy must remain the other-worldly pursuits of men of culture, pure expressions of the spirit untouched by taint of financial considerations."

One forgets the extensive amateurship in the arts which European education and custom required of children until a few centuries ago. In seventeenth-century England, which still had a powerful folk-tradition of song and dance, Samuel Pepys turned down a girl applying for the position of underparlor maid because she could not sing a difficult part in the family chorus! The word "amateur" (the unprofessional lover of the arts) came into our language in the eighteenth century, when a large and leisurely new middle class began to emulate the artistic tastes of the country gentry. And the eighteenth century, particularly in England, saw the peak of amateurships. Drawing and music masters prospered, no gentleman took the grand tour of Europe without a sketchbook under his arm, eighteenth- and nineteenth-century literature is replete with heroines and heroes who excelled as amateurs: Dickens' Edwin Drood, Tolstoy's Natasha, Pushkin's Eugen Onegin, Jane Austen's Elinor Dashwood. Great amateurs like Horace Walpole and the first Earl of Halifax, both of them Parliamentarians, were their generation's greatest connoisseurs, collectors, and patrons. They owned their own printing presses, wrote novels or verses, and excelled at draughtsmanship and architectural rendering.

I often take delight in visiting an aging and serene neighbor of mine, a man of letters brought up in a tradition of amateurship rare of blocks below Union, at 3221 Fillmore Street, The Magic Pan. It specializes in Hungarian palachintas (feather-light crêpes stuffed with most delicious savory and sweet mixtures imaginable), and is another proof of what miracles energy and ingenuity can work. The owners, a young Hungarian couple called Paulette and Leslie Fono, did everything themselves, from making curtains and furniture to inventing the "magic pan," a Rube Goldberg type of device that produces ten crêpes at one time on a sort of turntable that rotates over a gas flame. (The pans rest inverted on the turntable, their bottoms coated with batter, not the insides—thus enabling the finished crêpes to be easily peeled off.)

Eating in San Francisco is an exercise in selective gastronomy. You could sample a different cuisine every night of the week. To me the true taste of San Francisco is the seafood—Dungeness crab, tiny Bay shrimp, abalone, sand dabs, rex sole—plucked fresh and sweet from the cold Pacific waters, simply prepared and served with a bottle of white wine from the Livermore Valley. There is, literally, nothing like it in the world.

For San Francisco, don't forget, is felicitously poised in the very midst of California's finest wine country, and you can drink here certain wines that never reach other parts of the U. S. During your visit, you should certainly add to your itinerary two or three day-long trips to the great wine-growing regions—the Napa and Sonoma Valleys to the north, Livermore and Santa Clara to the south. After seeing how wine is made, aged, and stored, you can sample and buy on the spot the products of such wineries as Paul Masson, Almadén, Wente, Concannon, Louis Martini, Charles Krug, Beaulieu, Samuele Sebastiani, to name only a few. This is a unique opportunity to learn the nuances between wines made from the same varietal grape by different vintners, or wines of different years from one vineyard. Although there is a widespread misconception that there are no "vintage years" in California, certain wineries do believe in vintaging their wines. You have only to check, say, a Pinot Chardonnay 1963 against a 1964 to dismiss forever the notion that California wines never vary. To aid you in planning your trips, the Wine Institute, 717 Market Street, provides a guide booklet, "California's Wine Wonderland," with information about wineries open to the public, visiting hours, and maps.

A trip in either direction can be handily combined with sightseeing. The road south on El Camino Real (State Route 82) to Paul Masson and Almadén will take you by way of Palo Alto and the Spanish-style campus of Stanford University. While you are there, take a look at Edward Durell Stone's hospital in the new Medical Center with its grilles, fountains, and hanging baskets. Heading north to Napa and Sonoma, you can detour, after crossing the Golden Gate Bridge, to two delightful little Marin County communities on the Bay—Sausalito, dubbed the Portofino of the West for its pretty cliff-hanging houses and fishing-village ambiance (now with a Greenwich Village overlay), and Tiburon, where you can sit on the outdoor decks of Sam's Anchor Café or The Dock and watch the sailboats skimming over the Bay. North on 101 you encounter Frank Lloyd Wright's Marin Civic Center in San Rafael, a winged, domed structure that looks like a space-age skyport. Missions, parks, historic houses (like General Vallejo's home in Sonoma) dot the countryside, and there are plenty of places to picnic. You can often buy local cheese to go with your wine purchases—the Standard Cheese factory in Pleasanton, near Wente and Concannon, makes excellent Monterey Jack, Teleme, and Greek feta and kasseri, and the Marin French Cheese Company in Petaluma near Sonoma, produces wonderful Brie and Camembert, under their Rouge et Noir brand.

This is but a sampling of the delights to be discovered in and around San Francisco—it would take a book to tell them all. For, as William Saroyan once remarked, "If you're alive, you can't be bored in San Francisco."

in this country. One afternoon, after showing me his watercolors, his superb photographs of Near Eastern architecture, and early editions of the many books he had written, he sat down at the piano and played a difficult Beethoven sonata. He went on to mimic, word for word, a debate he had heard in 1908 between the philosophers William James and Josiah Royce. We ended our visit on his porch. A bird sang behind him. He said, without turning his head: "Look at the female purple finch in the pine tree behind me." "How do you know it is a female?" I asked. "Of course I can tell," he said peevishly, "by its song." I would model my children's education, if I, myself, had the leisure time to do so, precisely on that of this great amateur.

My friend's own curiosity, in the eighteen eighties, explored the arts as well as the sciences and humanities. I was brought up in the nineteen thirties with that total lack of art which characterized education between the two wars, and I am poignantly aware of why children should be led to art at an early age. It is the only activity which engages, harmoniously and simultaneously, the full potential of their senses and their rational control. It is only by letting children participate in art at an early age that they can engage their senses on the basis of play—play in its more leisurely, creative, and imaginative sense.

What fascinates me the most about watching small children painting, modeling clay, dancing, singing, is that, to them, these activities are quite undifferentiated from polishing silver, cooking a mess of fudge, working puppets, using glue and scissors, hammering nails, all those new skills which engage their adroitness and which they delight in mastering. And in a sense this is the way amateurs tackle art: Whereas the professional involves his ego on the assumption that his identity is of interest to the world, the amateur receives from art the same occupational pleasure as he would receive from weaving, embroidering, gardening, or any other hobby. Children are the purest of amateurs. The professional artist's activity is a synthesis of work and play. The amateur, like the child, remains on the level of play. But the disinterestedness of play, when undertaken by such intellects as the Chinese amateur-painters, can attain a high level of meditation, and can produce some of the greatest art made by man.

In my Utopia of resurrected amateurship the world would be replete with men and women who consider art as recreation—play—rather than creation. That is a more comfortable prospect than a society of mediocre professionals exhibiting their egos. I can think of no greater happiness for children, in their future leisure, than to look upon art as a tool of meditation, even as a secret vice, as a means of private research and self-enlightenment; to consider it, as amateurs did in the greatest period of Chinese art, the spiritual refuge of the non-professional.

polish stops, texture often begins—as in the puckered leaves (rugose is the $10 technical term) of the West Coast's ceanothus species. Leaf pattern as expressed in crenellated or toothed edges, palmate and incised outlines, amounts to a kind of texture when foliage is seen in the aggregate.

Artists have a fancy word—chiaroscuro—for the play of lights and darks that is so much a part of the charm and garden value of summer greens. Where only a single color is fundamentally concerned, all the contributory variants may well be employed: light tones and dark, highlighted surfaces and shadows, smooth textures and rough, simple outlines and complicated ones, flat masses and three-dimensional forms.

At a time when restfulness is much prized, the green garden is the most restful. White and blue are supposed to be restful colors, but blue is merely cool, and white is no color at all. Certainly the exciting shades—reds, oranges, purples, most of the yellows—have no rest in them. That leaves the greens, the coolest and the most serene of all.

It is reassuring to know that many of the warm-climate evergreens may be adapted to summer use in colder climates—even survive the year-round as "die-back" plants (meaning that their roots survive perennially, but produce new tops annually). This is less often true of running vines than of woody or shrubby plants—such as the firethorn, mahonia, some of the privets, for example. The maintenance requirements of a green garden are greater, perhaps, if you depend on plants that are good only for a season. And their use must necessarily be confined to areas where seasonal growth is acceptable, such as plant beds rather than walls or fences. But so wide are the choices (almost all flowering plants bear leaves ten to twenty times longer than they do flowers) that the green garden becomes another branch of gardening and landscaping that deserves attention on its merits.

NAPOLEONIC-STYLE SECRETARY

Can you tell me anything about this piece of furniture which I inherited? It has a marble top and looks old.
M.N.B.—Nyack, N. Y.

You have an American drop-front secretary that reflects the Directoire years of the Sheraton period, c. 1810–1820. The design is like that of a French secrétaire à abattant of the Napoleonic period.

GERMAN STEIN

My father gave this stein to my mother about sixty-five years ago. It is very beautiful, and we would like to know its age. J.E.F.—Brooklyn, N. Y.

I believe your stein was made by Villeroy & Boch, Mettlach, Germany, c. 1885–1900. You might learn more by having the German inscription, illegible in the picture, translated.

We would appreciate knowing the approximate date for this chair we recently purchased. L.J.S.—Charlotte, N. C.

The elaborate carving of your Victorian side chair dates it about 1860–1870. It was probably made in Europe—in France, England, or in Germany's Black Forest.

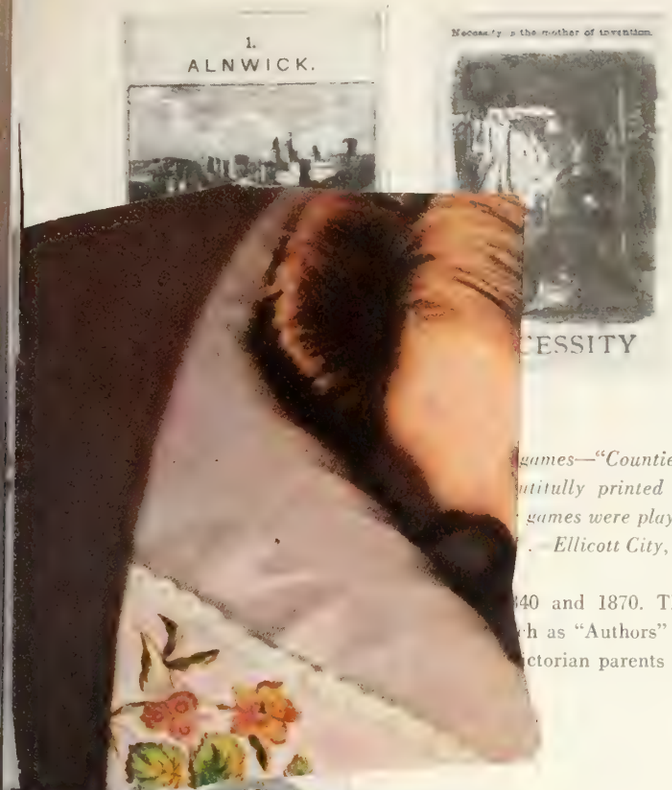
Lucky Boy! That's PPG Safety Glass, so strong you don't have to worry about its breaking

That's the beauty of PPG Herculite® K Tempered Safety Glass. It takes bumps that shatter regular glass.

How's this for strength? A "bridge" of 3/16" PPG Safety Glass supports the weight of two boys and their trike (over 150 pounds). They're safe because Herculite K is specially treated—heat tempered—to make it many times stronger than regular glass.

And, if they somehow managed to break the glass, chances are no one would get hurt. When Herculite K breaks, it crumbles into small, rounded pieces that can't cause serious injury.



Look for this PPG Safety Shield on quality patio doors. The difference is a few dollars in the price, and a lot more safety in the home. PPG makes the glass that makes the difference.

AMERICAN SPINNING WHEEL

Could you possibly tell me where, when, and by whom this old spinning wheel was made?

H.E.K.—Fresno, Calif.

Your flax spinning wheel is American and was made between 1780 and 1830. Few makers of such spinning wheels put their name on their handiwork.

I purchased this small stove from a western New York State dealer who said it was a French antique. The damper is missing. Is it French and do you suppose I will be able to use this stove?

M.K.—North Hollywood, Calif.

You have a coal-burning stove designed for a fireplace opening. Its ornate style could be French of the Napoleon III period. An auto body repairman might be able to make you a new damper for the stove.

COLOR-CHANGING FABRIC. A new kind of cloth comes with a packet of powder that will turn it a different color via a simple rinse. You dissolve the powder in hot water, immerse the fabric, and in a few minutes it will turn a new color. The powder pack comes with a fabric swatch attached so you know exactly what color you are getting. You can buy Chameleon Cloth by the yard in solid colors, or in stripes, polka dots, plaids, or patterns. By Riegel Textile Corporation, 260 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y., 10016.

A GUIDE TO COLORADO DINING. Eating places in Colorado accompanied by favorite recipes from their chefs have been compiled in a new book, Colorado à la Carte. Authors Beverly Anderson Nemiro and Donna Miller Hamilton traveled some 3,000 miles in the state rating restaurants and collecting at least one special recipe from each chef. They tested recipes in their home kitchens before including them. Specialties range from such gourmet dishes as Swiss fondue to ways of preparing prized native trout. Organized in a Baedeker fashion according to towns, the book is handy for travelers and adventurous cooks alike. Cloth edition, $3.50; paperback, $1.85. Published by Sage Books, 2679 South York, Denver, Colo., 80210.

PERFORMING ARTS AT SARATOGA. The town that flourished as a spa and racing mecca for the chic set at the turn of the century now boasts a new Performing Arts Center. The first eight-week festival of ballet and music opened July 9 with the New York City Ballet, continues August 3 with concerts by the Philadelphia Orchestra and an impressive roster of soloists. Another new attraction for tourists in New York State this summer (parents and Wild West fans take note): Fentier Village at Salamanca.

FROZEN ICED TEA. A new tea concentrate, already sweetened and lemon-flavored, is now in the frozen foods department of supermarkets. This version of the time-honored thirst-quencher comes two cans for 35c; you simply add water to make a batch. Dell Sales Company, Hillside, N. J., 07205.

THE ELECTRIC GLUE GUN. A gadget that squirts liquid adhesive somewhat the way a water pistol shoots water is no doubt destined to become the pet of many a home repairman and hobbyist—so much so that it may inspire one to make a glue "painting" on the side, left. The gun can apparently be used to tackle any gluing job—with greater accuracy, less mess, and more fun. A plug-in tool that measures 4 by 7 inches, the Thermogrip has a 70-watt cartridge heater and takes 3 minutes to heat up. It discharges, at the rate of a quarter-ounce per minute, a strong adhesive that sets in about 60 seconds. $7.95 by B. B. Notes for the Hostess

The Cookmans held a garden party last week—more accurately, a party in honor of their garden, which is at a glorious midsummer peak. They decided that an early Sunday supper was the thing, when the shadows are cool, but the slanting sun's rays set the flower colors ablaze. Chief gardener George Cookman had thoughtfully placed small identifying markers throughout the garden to assist the less botanically informed and to call attention to some of his rare specimens.

We were seated for supper at small round tables in the midst of this flowery splendor. Helen Cookman wanted no competition with the garden, so, instead of bouquets, each table was centered with a deep meringue shell piled high with strawberries sprigged with mint. The tablecloths were circles of pale blue organdy, pretty foil for Helen's mulberry-and-white English earthenware—the Dover Mulberry pattern by Johnson, which looked suitably sentimental. The amethyst-colored glassware with it couldn't have been more serene or pretty. Even the food was in keeping. The first course was a cold soup concocted of equal parts of tomato juice and fresh, strained orange juice, seasoned with lemon juice and celery salt, and dressed with chopped parsley and a slice of orange. This was followed by sweetbreads with spinach, a delicious combination: the sweetbreads, sautéed in butter and sherry, were served on a bed of chopped spinach laced with sour cream and blanketed with a mushroom sauce. Nothing else was needed with this rich dish but miniature brioches. Dessert was the centerpieces, of course, accompanied by ice-cold bowls of vanilla ice cream sauce (a mixture of soft ice cream, heavy cream, and Cointreau).

Fancy drinks do not, on the whole, go down well in our neighborhood, but new versions of two old favorites have become surprisingly popular among us. Well worth noting when a change of pace is wanted, these heretical switches on the martini and the daiquiri:

To the usual very dry martini, add a dash of orange bitters, five drops of Pernod, and a twist of burnt lemon peel—most astringent! As for the daiquiri, the difference is in using unsweetened grapefruit juice as well as lime juice and a dash of maraschino liqueur. Frappée in a blender with añejo rum and cracked ice—a cooler par excellence.

Cold drinks bring to mind the handsome Royal Holland pewter pitcher that was given to my niece as a wedding present. Slim and shapely, it has a hinged contrivance in the throat to keep back the ice when pouring, but which flicks open to let in more cubes. I'm sure Mary will serve many a martini, iced tea, or lemonade in it over the years.

My sister-in-law has a handsome collection of seashells which, besides enjoying for their innate beauty, she likes to put to use from time to time. Naturally, she has used some of them as centerpieces, alone or filled with flowers. Now I have a new idea for her. At a party we went to a few days ago, the hostess served chunks of lobster in a giant clam shell as a

by Philip S. Brown

Down where the trade winds blow, in the islands of the West Indies, it does get warm—despite what the travel companies say. Cooling drinks are in order, and as rum is the staple spirit of the islands, it is the basis for such drinks—and a very good one. Coolers are long, cold drinks designed to lower the internal temperature of the imbiber while relaxing him at the same time. They are diluted with fruit juices, charged water, and other ingredients that substantially reduce their alcoholic potency. Cocktails, while usually served very cold, are not true coolers as they consist largely of spirits and the proof remains high. For a quick reviver or apéritif, a cocktail is unsurpassed, but it won't cool you off. (Only the hand that holds it becomes cold.) For slow, lazy, contemplative drinking, a cooler is the thing, and rum the ingredient which gives it a hidden punch.

Rum, the distilled spirit of molasses, has been called many things during its long career, from "a hot, hellish, and terrible liquor" to "comfortable waters." Since sugar cane was first grown in the Far East and brought to Europe by Marco Polo, some believe that rum also was made there centuries ago, but there is no way to prove the assumption. The cane was introduced to the West Indies by Columbus on one of his later voyages, and by 1520 numerous plantations were flourishing, producing most of the sugar for the European market. Some time later it was discovered that molasses, a by-product of the sugar refining process, could be distilled into high-grade firewater, and the history of rum as we know it began. In the early days of its production in the West Indies, in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, rum was distilled carelessly and drunk at once, mostly by slaves on the plantations. Their masters sipped French wines and cognacs. Later on, as stills improved and the rum was aged in casks, it became the smooth, suave drink it is today, full of comfort and warmth. The English colonists in New England found that rum made the rigors of winter (and summer) more bearable and, in order to avoid the excise taxes on spirits, imported raw molasses and set up their own stills. In the far north, the Hudson's Bay traders found that ordinary rum would freeze in the bitter cold, so they ordered it bottled at very high proof. Today 151-proof rum is still produced in Jamaica and Demerara, and also in Puerto Rico.

For many years the term "Demon Rum" stood for all alcoholic beverages, from whiskey to champagne, and was used by those narrow-minded moralists who had never tried any of them.

There are two main types of rum made in the West Indies today: the very light Puerto Rican and Virgin Islands rums, and the heavy, dark varieties from Jamaica, Guyana, and also Puerto Rico. In between the two there are medium rums from Barbados, Haiti, and other islands. The light rums, being nearly tasteless and odorless, are suitable for simple mixed drinks like highballs or Collinses. The dark aromatic rums are better for drinks containing lots of fruit juice or flavorings, as they have enough character to counteract other assertive tastes. With the in-between varieties you can go either way; many people (including me) prefer some of that good rum flavor in a drink.

Certain rum drinks contain lemon or lime juice and sugar. As sugar is very difficult to dissolve in spirits, it is a good idea to blend it with the fruit juice first. Better yet, have some simple syrup on hand. Put 3 cups of sugar in a saucepan with 1 cup of cold water, heat, and allow to boil vigorously for a few minutes, then cool and bottle. Simple syrup will keep almost indefinitely and will save you a great deal of time in making any drink calling for sugar. Other sweetening ingredients include orgeat and falernum, both of which have a delicate almond flavor that goes well with rum drinks. Orgeat is non-alcoholic; falernum contains from 6 to 10 per cent alcohol. Grenadine, a non-alcoholic syrup made from pomegranates, is also frequently used, especially if a pink or red-colored drink is desired. Often a rum drink recipe will call for charged water from a soda siphon; if you don't have one, hold your thumb over a bottle of charged water and shake it several times, then squirt it into the glass. Now, on to the coolers:

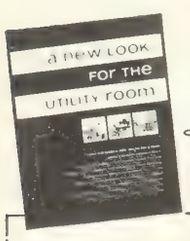
Rum Highball

This is the simplest of drinks to make and one of the best. It contains only rum, ice, and club soda or ginger ale. If a small (6-to-8-ounce) highball glass is used, mix

NEW TYPE LAUNDRY TUB

SERVASINK®

SMART/OFF-THE-FLOOR



Now, turn your laundry or utility room into an attractive part of the home. SERVASINK is molded of remarkable new MOLDED-STONE which retains all the strength and permanence of dingy, old-fashioned laundry tubs, yet is virtually stain-proof, sanitary and easy to clean. Like a modern bathroom fixture, SERVASINK is wall hung to eliminate ugly legs, add rigidity and preserve unobstructed floor area.

Developed in cooperation with leading plumbing engineers and home economists, SERVASINK has thick walls and heavy bottom sections. It is tested to support more than 600 lbs. loaded on its outside edge, yet SERVASINK is 80% lighter than concrete tubs, is handled and installed easily by one man.

See SERVASINK at leading local plumbers—find out how economical both product and installation are—or mail coupon now.

the drink in a ratio of 1 part of rum to 4 parts of ice and soda. For a larger glass, use a proportion of 1 to 3, remembering that the drink will be diluted as the ice melts. Use plenty of ice and have the club soda well chilled—there are few things worse than a warm and watery highball. Any kind of rum may be used for a highball.

Horse's Neck

An old-fashioned drink, this is almost, but not quite, a highball. Peel a medium-sized lemon in one continuous spiral, and dangle the rind in a 10-ounce glass, with enough hanging over the rim to keep it in place. Put 3 or 4 ice cubes in the glass, add 3 ounces of the rum of your choice, and fill up with chilled ginger ale.

Rum Buck

A true Buck is always made with ginger ale and no sugar. Squeeze a quarter of a lemon into a 10-ounce glass and drop in the shell. Add 3 or 4 ice cubes, 3 ounces of your favorite rum, fill with chilled ginger ale, and stir. For an interesting flavor, add a few dashes of falernum or orgeat—not enough to sweeten the drink, but just for the faint taste of almonds. This is sometimes called a "Susie Taylor," sister of "Mamie Taylor," which is made with Scotch whisky.

Rum Rickey

A Rickey should be made with lime juice and should be quite dry. Into an 8-ounce glass put the juice of 1 small lime, or half a large one. Add a couple of ice cubes, 2 ounces of light rum (white or gold label), and ½ teaspoon of simple syrup, orgeat, or falernum. Stir well, fill the glasses with chilled charged water, and stir again before serving.

Rum Collins

This is also called a "Pedro Collins," or, if dressed up with sprigs of mint, a "Mojito." Use a large Collins glass (12 to 14 ounces), and into it put a tablespoon (or less, to taste) of simple syrup, the juice of a medium-sized lemon, and 4 ounces of light rum. Stir well together, add 4 large ice cubes, and fill with chilled charged water. Stir very briefly and serve. If the final stirring is too vigorous or prolonged, the carbon dioxide will be released and the drink will go flat before it is finished.

Rum and Tonic

This is becoming increasingly popular as a hot weather libation. Put 3 ounces of your favorite rum into a 12-ounce glass, add a couple of thin slices of lime or lemon and 3 or 4 ice cubes. Fill with quinine water, stir lightly, and serve.

Rum Fizz

Into a shaker put a tablespoon of simple syrup, the juice of a medium-sized lemon, and 3 ounces of light rum (white or gold label). Add a cup of crushed ice and shake vigorously for several minutes, then strain into a pre-chilled 8-ounce glass. Add charged water from a siphon, stirring to "fizz up" the drink. Lime juice may be used, or a combination of lime and lemon juice. To make a Pineapple Fizz, substitute pineapple juice for the lemon juice.

Rum Daisy

The distinguishing flavor of any Daisy is its pretty pink color. Fill a large highball glass, goblet, or silver mug with cracked ice, but don't pack it down. Into a shaker put ½ ounce of grenadine, 1 ounce of lemon or lime juice, 4 ounces of gold label light rum, and a cup of cracked ice. Shake well until very cold, and strain into the prepared glass. Muddle with a long spoon until the outside of the glass is frosted, and serve with straws. If you substitute pineapple juice for the grenadine, you will have a Rum Fix, and very good it is. Often a teaspoonful of green or yellow Chartreuse is floated on top just before serving, and very good that is, too.

Rum Julep

Such a drink may seem like rank heresy to Kentucky colonels, but it is eminently satisfactory on a hot summer day. Chill very thin tall glasses or silver mugs in the freezer for half an hour. Have them on a tray so that, when chilled, they will be handled as little as possible. For each drink, put in a bar glass 2 teaspoons of simple syrup, 10 or 13 tender young mint leaves, and a couple of dashes of Angostura bitters. Bruise the mint lightly with a muddler, and blend the three ingredients for several minutes by stirring gently. Add 2 or 3 ounces of dark rum for each drink and stir thoroughly together. Remove the glasses from the refrigerator and pack them with shaved or very finely crushed ice. If you must handle them, wear woolen gloves or use a clean dry towel. Strain the contents of the bar glass into the glasses and churn the contents up and down for a few minutes. Add more ice and fill each glass to within ¼ inch of the top with more rum, then repeat the churning process until the glasses have a good coating of frost. Float a teaspoon of Jamaica rum on top of each drink. Insert the what-is-it nut

People who have never seen the Royal Hawaiian Macadamia nut invariably ask this question. At times people also have to ask, "Where is it?" For this rare, sweet, mellow-crisp nut from Hawaii is as elusive as it is delicious. You may find it in the nut section, over the freezer or on the gourmet shelf. But what a find, once you have tracked it down. No other nut in the world tastes or looks (or crunches) exactly like it.

GOING PLACES, FINDING THINGS IN Hawaii

BY DENISE OTIS

A notebook of places to stay, places to shop, and things to see, collected on four of the Hawaiian Islands—Oahu, Maui, Hawaii, and Kauai

Hawaii is so full of a number of things that an island-hopping tour unreels one eye-opening delight after another. Each island has its own atmosphere, and its own uniqueness in accommodations, shopping, and sight-seeing. The dilemma is always whether to relax and enjoy the place where you are, or explore to see what you might find around the next corner. If you are stouthearted, you will try to do both.

Oahu, the Gathering Place

Oahu, where any Hawaiian visit begins, is only the third largest island; but it has Honolulu, and many visitors never manage to go any further. The long curve of Waikiki Beach is lined with an impressive diversity of places to stay. You can have cosmopolitan bustle at the Ilikai, dignified quiet at the Royal Hawaiian, or, out beyond Diamond Head, elegant country-club informality at the Kahala Hilton, to name only three of the many choices. In fact, a great attraction of Hawaiian hotels, all over the island, is the way they genuinely differ from one another in ambiance.

Honolulu shopping is equally varied. A must on any list is the Ala Moana Shopping Center. Among its inducements: Sears Roebuck for a marvelous selection of Hawaiian prints; S. M. Iida for Japanese cooking equipment, china, lacquer; The Bamboo Window for baskets and, of all things, irresistibly decorative fences; Carol and Mary for clothes from Hawaiian designers; and the beautiful brand-new Liberty House, also for Hawaiian clothes and for attractive accessories for the house. C. S. Wo, just across Kapiolani Boulevard from the Ala Moana Center, has both made-in-Hawaii and mainland furniture, as well as table accessories and gifts much appreciated by Hawaiian hostesses. Another area to prospect, in Waikiki: Grossman-Moody for precious jewelry and oriental antiques; Ansteth, Limited for oriental antiques and specially designed modern oriental accessories; Woods of Hawaii for interestingly grained koa or monkeypod plates (marvelous as serving plates); the Lacquer Shop and Gallery Asien, also for antiques.

Skyscraper-studded Honolulu seems far from the simple Polynesian paradise of the Hawaii legend, but cross the Koolau Mountains to the windward side of Oahu, drive toward Laie, and you catch glimpses of the legendary world. Tiny, sleepy villages huddle at the foot of lush, green, and towering mountains; banana and palm trees shade deserted beaches (not really deserted, just not built upon); and, to climax the drive, just past Laie you arrive at a cluster of carefully reconstructed South Seas villages, the Polynesian Cultural Center. Simple dwellings and chiefs' houses from Samoa, New Zealand (Maori), Fiji, Tahiti, Tonga, and old Hawaii, reproduced by craftsmen from each island, simulate a capsule tour of Polynesia, complete with craft demonstrations shops, and restaurants serving both snacks and Polynesian food. Visit it after you've seen the exhibits of Pacificana at the Bernice Pauahi Bishop Museum in Honolulu for a particularly vivid sensation of history brought to life.

Nature—aquatic division—is the magnet at Sea Life Park near Koko Head (at the other end of Oahu). Newly developed and still expanding, its attractions include performing dolphins, a glass tank containing a living coral reef with its denizens, and fascinating glimpses into the scientific research in progress at the Oceanic Institute that shares its site.

Kauai, the Garden Island

One coast of Kauai is gentle, peaceful, and green. The other, the Na Pali Coast, is also green but awesome: huge precipices interlaced with deep valleys. The Na Pali Coast can only be visited by

OLD PUEBLO TRADERS

NEW TRU-DRIVE TEES
5 for $1.98

There is a way to hit long, straight balls AUTOMATICALLY every time

THIS IS IT!

You have to try this to see for yourself! And you can do it on our money-back guarantee. This tee gives you almost unbelievable results. Long straight drives every time!

It's simple—because the tee is based on aero-dynamic principles that prevents the lateral spin which causes hooks or slicing. The tee cups your ball (see illustration). When the club hits the tee all the power behind it goes into getting the ball away—and no matter where the club connects, the power goes behind the ball—gets it away faster, straighter. You may hit a few yards to right or left. BUT YOU WON'T HOOK OR SLICE.

You'll get off drives that will amaze you for distance. You'll hit truer shots—this tee makes golfers out of beginners and club-champs out of week-end golfers.

What's more, it saves you money on balls. You don't mark them up, you don't cut or mar them. You don't lose them so easily—and it speeds up your game.

Of course you have to try them for yourself. Order at our risk. If you are not completely satisfied—if you are not absolutely delighted with what it does for your game—return for a full refund.

Tru-Drive Golf Tees are only $1.98 for pkg. of 5. (They last for years if you don't lose them). But get enough for your partners and friends. Special offer for 3 sets—$5.75 postpaid. Order now—impress your golf partners next week-end!

She Sells YOUTH!

Perhaps you have read this fascinating story in the Chicago AMERICAN . . . Louisville COURIER . . . Sioux City JURNAL—or dozens of other top newspapers:

GERTRUDE ENELOW

re is a strange and beautiful woman in Chicago who has, for the last twenty been selling youth to men and women who were growing old before their Who has been selling sleep to people who had thought they had lost a full sleep forever. Who has been selling strength and blessed relief from pain, ple who have been racked with backache for years.
price is exactly one weekend of your time. Her method is a return to Nature, h simple gentle motions that free your body's locked-up vigor. Her full story here:

me of the startling facts is woman will teach you:

A new way to sleep—that auto- lly turns off the left-over ten- n your body . . . lets you drift off nutes . . . strengthens your spine u sleep . . . and gives a virtual r treatment, every night, to those one muscles of your chin and

Where most premature facial les really come from — and why, u wish to prevent them, you l concentrate, not on your face, ur feet.

A new kind of energy food— loesn't cost a penny because it's y a new way for your body to lain ordinary air. And how that air that surrounds you every day e used to improve your appear- ance, your health and your vitality in a dozen different ways: including how to breathe yourself calm . . . how to swim in air as gracefully and as exhil- aratingly as you now swim in water . . . how to float the upper part of your body in air, and thus make it feel weightless—so you can work all day with half the energy and half the tiredness that you feel right now.

4) A new kind of exercise that is not really exercise at all. Because if you want to strengthen or streamline any one part of your body, you don't really move it at all. For example, if you want to suck in your stomach, you forget all about it, and concen- trate on one simple blowing action. Or, to build new power into your back, you move your ankle an ingenious way every morning in bed.

Twenty Years of Proof, International Fame, Recommendations by Doctor After Doctor—All Back Up These Claims:

Every one of these claims — every one of these methods—may sound im- possible to you right now. We do not blame you if they do. But you must realize this:

Every single one of these methods have been proven, on thousands of men and women of all ages, for over twenty years. They have been used, not only in the United States, but in Sweden, Norway, Germany and Rus- sia—and praised in the national press of these countries.

For almost twenty years, doctors have been sending people to this woman: to help strengthen torturous backs . . . to gain desperately-needed sleep without tranquilizers or drugs . . . to bring back the natural energy, drive, vigor that these patients may have thought they had lost forever.

Over TWENTY daily classes in Chicago alone now teach these meth- ods to the few people who are for- tunate enough to be able to take them in person. Now, however, they are available in book form to every man and woman who is willing to gamble a five-cent stamp, and a single week- end of their time to learn them.

Here is what this first weekend alone will give you. It starts with the most vital energy-restorer of all—sleep.

You Don't Know How to Sleep Today. No One Has Ever Taught You. This Book Does, In a Single Evening, as Easily as This:

This book starts by reminding you of an inescapable fact:

That sleep—deep, relaxed, complete- ly-natural sleep—is the greatest source of energy your body will ever have

But once you lose this gift of sleep and most adults have completely lost it then you are draining energy and youth out of your body, exactly the same way that air drains out of a tire when it has a leak.

This book says that sleep is an art. It must be learned. It is an active ritual that takes about three minutes every evening, and accomplishes these two ends:

1) Turns off your mind, and lets your body float effortlessly into a deep sleep.

2) Arranges the parts of your body in bed—so that sleep will not be dis- turbed by tossing and turning, and so you will not wake up the next morn- ing with a sore spine, or "pins and needles" in your arms or legs, or a stiff neck and shoulders.

No one has ever taught you this simple ritual before. No one has ever taught you before how to convert your body into a limp mass—without a worry, without a thought, without a single thread of tension remaining from the day that has just passed.

No one has ever taught you before how to sink into a mattress so deeply, that sleep must come. Without a single pressure on any nerve center of your body. With the small of the back com- pletely unburdened at last. With the head perfectly aligned . . . the neck muscles relaxed and yet strengthened . . . the chin uplifted . . . even the muscles of your face glowing and toned.

This is a way of sleeping where not one single joint rests on another. Even the ankles and wrists are completely free. You will learn it in five minutes, the very first evening you pick up this book. You will wake up the next morning, more refreshed than you have known in years.

But this is only the first gift you receive from this amazing book. Here are just a few of the others:

Your Body's Built-In Relaxers, Strengtheners, Streamliners— Now Put to Work for You for the First Time.

For example—

On page 33 you discover a six-sec- ond motion with your mouth, that in- stantly relaxes the over-tense muscles of your chest, heart and solar plexus and drains hyper-tension out of your body like water running from a sieve.

On page 69 you discover how to turn the everyday movements of life into complete exercises by themselves. So that every time you sit, or stand, or reach out to pick up an object, you are effortlessly exercising and stream- lining your body, keeping yourself in top condition without even realizing it.

On page 87 you are shown the built-in apparatus, in your left foot, that automatically corrects your worst posture faults . . . that relaxes and soothes the lower back muscles at will . . . and—most surprising of all—that irons out those ridgy, "washboard" inner thighs, that no other exercises you've tried could ever reach

On page 113 you use, for the first time, your body's own built-in vibra- that bursts with energy every morning in seconds . . . that calms you down after a full day's work —in two or three thrilling minutes— and gives you a new spurt of vitality for the evening's fun.

And much, much more. How to relax weary eyes — by looking at How to restore the natural forces that most people rob them- selves of daily. A new way to sit that lifts your upper body right out of your hips . . . coaxes your spinal column into its most healthful posture . . . makes hours at a desk pass like minutes.

Plus five astonishing energy-multi- pliers that you've always had at your fingertips, but never known how to use until today. Plus half a dozen fatigue- minimizers that focus effort, eliminate waste motion, develop startling new grace and rhythm in every motion you make.

A Final Word of Warning:

All these, and much more, are con- tained in Gertrude Enelow's revolu- tionary new Body Dynamics—yours to read from cover to cover without risking a penny.

Two words of caution must be added, however:

1) It is a short book. It has only 128 pages in all. If you are a fast reader, you can finish it in a single weekend. Do not, therefore, expect a huge weight, tome, full of useless theory. Every page of this book is packed with practical, step-by-step direction, that you can use immediately, to give you the strength and health and beauty that are locked up inside your body today.

2) And most important of all—do not be misled by the ease and sim- plicity of the movements given you in this book. Since most of them can be performed sitting down or lying in bed . . . since most of them have been mastered by men and women as much as ninety years of age . . . since none of them even cause you to "work up a sweat"—you may think for the first day or two that they cannot really be doing you that much good.

It is only after the first week that you realize the incredible efficiency of these incredibly gentle movements . . . the fantastic way in which they release pent-up fatigue each morning . . . in the relief from pain to which you have been a martyr for years . . . in the startled reaction of your friends, as they stop you on the street and beg you to tell them the secret!

Twenty years of proof . . . thousands of case histories . . . all tell the same story. Try this thrilling book, entirely at our risk, TODAY!

CHICAGO AMERICAN

"This is not a woman—this is a ecracker shooting off sparks of enevolence in all directions. She's ke an earth mother with the looks a fullblown Carol Channing ho feels her mission in life is to elp.

She wants to help women into a ore healthful and supple middle ge. She wants to bring camara- erie and sunshine into the lives f the grandparent generation. She ants to make rugged ramrods of very living soul with an aching ack.

There are others who solemnly ill swear she is the reincarnation f Ponce de Leon.

All her young adult life she had ffered from a bad back, went to ountless doctors, osteopaths and xercise teachers, finally developed er own theories, and in time was onducting classes in the ballroom f the Shoreland hotel.

One of Gertrude's pupils, Mrs. ohn Alden Carpenter, a great randmother with the straightest ack and most twinkling blue eyes ou ever saw, thinks nothing of emonstrating body dynamics at a arty. She'll lie down on the floor oing leg kicks with the grace and hythm of a ballet dancer, springs her feet with the agility of a oung woman.

She seemed to be using her body ith such released joy. Who was he? A pupil of Gertrude's for the ast 15 years. A woman of 60 who ooks 45, is married to a younger an and admitted "If it weren't or Gertrude, today I'd be an rthritic old woman."

THE SIOUX CITY SUNDAY JOURNAL

"A merry-eyed, tousle-headed, ffervescent dynamo took the stage n the Mayfair hotel ballroom Sat- urday afternoon and turned the November meeting of the Sioux City Woman's Club into a delight- ful audience participation show. With the effortless ease of a charm- ing rag doll, Mrs. Gertrude Enelow illustrated how body dynamics can bring power into everything you do.

She proceeded to prove that by coordinating your breathing and your emotions, by coaxing your body back to its natural functions, you can almost swim in air."

Women of all ages, many of them grandmothers, are astonished at what their bodies can do with- out effort. Body Dynamics is not simply a matter of feeling good for hours; it gives them strength to withstand emotional pressures day by day."

THE COURIER JOURNAL LOUISVILLE, KY.

"She wants everybody to feel as good as she does all the time. She stoutly believes that almost every- one can feel that good."

A chat with her charges you up faster than a pep pill.

"We lose our spring and bounce and buoyancy and thus we lose our youthful grace . . . it can be re- tained until our last day on earth; it doesn't belong only to youth . . . we don't need to lose it."

Body Dynamics, she says, differ from the isometric exercises hav- ing a vogue today.

"Our method brings people into a position of balance, which gives release of movement. It is abso- lutely effortless, and integrated with breathing, which is, in turn, related to the universal rhythm.

"Isometric, on the other hand, means off-balance.

"Exercise is something you should enjoy . . .

"Anyone can do my work with ease and joy and relate it to their spiritual development."

THE "THING"

A fascinating animated replica of this famous living "hand-in-the-box" featured prominently every week on the highly rated "The Addams Family" network T.V. show. Place a coin in the little slot . . . immediately you hear a grinding of gears . . . the box starts shaking . . . slowly, the lid rises and slowly, a pale green hand reaches out, grabs the coin and quickly pulls it inside. "Bang," the lid slams shut. All is as it was—except that your coin is gone! Loads of fun!

Amazing Paint Applicator Covers 468 Sq. Inches in 3 Seconds

In Actual Tests Painted Twice As Fast As Conventional Brushes, Saved 1/4 Cost Of Paint and Cost 1/3 The Price of Conventional Brushes It Competed Against.

- Faster Than Brush, Far Less Messy Than Roller
- Paints Walls, Furniture, Roofs, Bookcases, Any Job With "Professional" Looking Finishes For First Time Beginners
- Saves Many Dollars on Each Room —Up to $500 On Average 7-Room House

FROM ROCHESTER, NEW YORK COMES NEWS of a revolutionary new indoor-outdoor applicator that does painting jobs easier, better and in half the time!

There's no more hard work brushing back and forth with an old-fashioned paint brush. No more splatter and bubble finish with a roller. Now a revolutionary paint applicator spreads paint so fast, so smoothly, so easily, everything else seems out of date.

Called IMMIE, this amazing new lightweight applicator is already being used by professional painting contractors and thousands of home painters. You "dip" it about one-third as many times. It stores up vast quantities of paint. spreads it so smoothly, so evenly, so expertly it makes paint spread way farther. Doesn't hold back paint in bristles as a regular brush does. Releases ALL of it. Most amazing is the incredible speed it makes possible. It spreads a strip 6½ inches wide and 6 feet long in 3 seconds.

IMMIE is fantastic on any surface including rough shingles and curved mouldings! Covers completely like lightning. With Immie there's virtually no dripping, no spatter, no mess!

Capillary action of up to 700,000 tiny fibers from the soft underbelly of the Angora Goat "wipe" paint on... reach into microscopic indentations, pock-marked concrete, deep grooved shingles, contour to curved surfaces, wrap around radiators and fence posts!

ONLY 99¢ EACH IN OFFER BELOW

All that [illegible] new IMMIE in the offer below [illegible] is 99¢ apiece. Yet just one of the IMMIE applicators included outperformed and outpainted a nationally known brush costing $13.95. But because of [illegible] design through this magazine's coupon below you receive SIX different IMMIE applicators for almost every type of painting job you'll ever have for just 99¢ each.

A giant coverage applicator 6½ inches wide with over 700,000 tiny fibers "wipes" paint on, whips through house, roof, floor, even shingle painting as fast as half usual time.

A pure angora 4½-inch applicator with almost 400,000 tiny fibers glides through indoor wall, ceiling painting. A 3½-inch applicator with almost 250,000 tiny, soft angora fibers gives "professional" finishes to stairs, furniture, coffee tables.

A revolutionary window sash painter with 50,000 tiny fibers and patented metal "Paint Guard" to prevent smear on adjoining surfaces . . . edges an entire room in minutes. Finally, with 30,000 tiny angora fibers, Long handle with foam cushion and painting fibers on side lets you touch up spots rollers and brushes can't reach.

USED BY N.Y. CITY HOUSING AUTHORITY GIANT FIRMS, PUBLIC SCHOOLS, GOV'T CONTRACTORS.

ALREADY 2,000,000 IN USE SAVING TIME, PAINT, MONEY.

AMAZING TRIAL OFFER

Stop being a slave to dirty, messy home painting, forget unnecessary wrist fatigue, splash, splatter, hours of tiresome extra work, skip high professional prices. Try amazing IMMIE without risking a penny through no risk amazing trial coupon below. When IMMIE'S are delivered. Use for full month without risk.

See how beautifully constructed they are . . . how easy to use . . . how smooth the finish.

See how IMMIE paints window sashes in seconds, a picnic table in the time you have a cigarette, paints deep grooved shingles, pock-marked concrete with amazing ease . . . paints, varnishes, shellacs, stains, virtually any surface, any job . . . does 1001 painting jobs for you, NEVER SEEMS TO TIRE YOU OUT.

Use IMMIE on lawn furniture, boat finishes, furniture, panelled doors, coffee tables. Let your children paint pictures without getting the paint on themselves. Put IMMIE to every test. If IMMIE does not save you endless painting time, effort, money you have used it at not a penny's cost.

Pink Mist

Smoke Tree

In June, when most other trees have quit blooming, the beautiful "Pink Mist" Smoke Trees (Cotinus coggygria) burst forth with big clusters of light pink panicles resembling big clouds of smoke so dense you can't see through them. The tree resembles one large cloud of smoke—like a pink cloud resting on a tree trunk. And then in the fall the tree is ablaze in a beautiful array of red, scarlet and orange foliage. Grows to about 15 feet. Especially lovely when three are planted together. You receive sturdy plants already growing in a 2¼" pot which holds earth firmly around the roots for safe planting. SEND NO MONEY. On delivery pay $1.00 for 1, $1.75 for 2, $2.50 for 3 or $4.50 for 6 trees, plus COD charges. We pay postage on prepaid orders. If not 100% satisfied, just return shipping label for refund of purchase price . . . you keep the trees. Free planting guide included with every order.

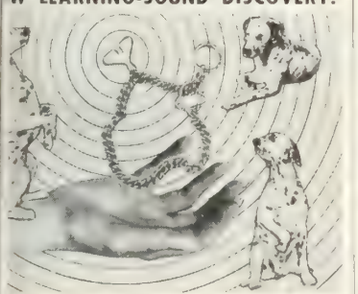
Test Proves Wrinkles Go

Marvelous Results in Just 2 Weeks or Test Costs Nothing

Through the amazing benefits of a substance new to cosmetics, named Genava, aging skin can now look younger and younger. It's true! Genava acts in an entirely different way to correct aging dry-skin wrinkles, crow's-feet, thin papery texture. Small wrinkles disappear—even deepest wrinkles show great improvement. Skin becomes smoother in appearance. Now you can prove these amazing results to yourself.



MAKE THE HALF-FACE TEST

Apply Genava twice daily—under make-up and overnight—to only one side of your face. In just two weeks skin takes on the appearance of youthful firmness, with dry-skin wrinkles vanishing—crow's-feet diminishing. Many small wrinkles completely gone. If you are not thrilled with the remarkable improvement in your complexion return unused portion of Genava for immediate cash refund.

SEND NO MONEY. Simply send name and address. Say, "I want to test Genava." When your mailman delivers Genava, deposit only $3.50 plus C.O.D. fee for 30-day supply. Or, remit $3.50 and we ship postpaid. Either way, we refund $3.50 if you return Genava after 2-week test. Order now. See this dramatic improvement yourself!

REMODELING'S REWARDS

Until not so very long ago, houses were built to last for generations, solid and unchangeable. The families living in them had little choice but to shape their living patterns to fit the architecture. Fortunately, this is no longer the case. Today it is the house, not the people inside it, that undergoes a change when a change is called for.

Remodeling appeals to both the practical and adventurous sides of our nature. A house is the one place where we can take direct action to correct flaws in the way we live, to remove everyday irritants and frustrations. Even the simplest improvements can brighten a family's disposition: a cedar closet for storing winter clothing, bins for the jumble of children's toys, or perhaps another bathroom to expedite the morning tooth-brushing ritual.

But such corrective projects are the lesser part of remodeling's rewards. At its creative best, remodeling can transform a house so dramatically that a magical fourth dimension may seem to have been added. When the walls are pushed out, the rooms redesigned, and the surfaces refinished, a house sometimes gains a fresh character beyond all past recognition.

The beauty of remodeling can be more than skin deep. Many families today are buying old houses because they were handsome to begin with; a turn-of-the-century house with high-ceilinged and well-proportioned rooms and wood-burning fireplaces in the bedrooms can be a great prize. But how livable it becomes often depends on beneath-the-surface remodeling—of the heating system, the plumbing, and wiring. Redoing the mechanics of living lacks the glamour of installing matched walnut paneling or a new reflecting pool; yet some of the most successful remodeling is invisible.

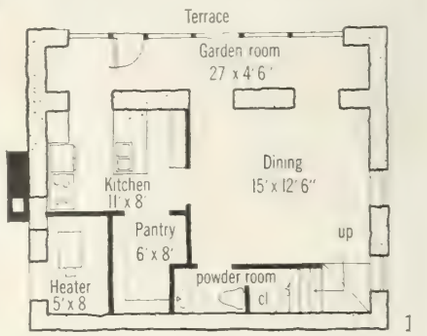
Remodeling is an adventure, but it should not be a frivolous one. Hard questions should be answered before launching a major project: Is the house basically good enough, structurally and functionally, to warrant a large expenditure? Will such an expenditure increase your investment so sharply that the house becomes priced out of the market? Will the remodeling give you a better house than you could build or buy if you combined your present equity and the remodeling costs? You may have dollars-and-cents doubts. Most experienced remodelers would counsel you to let the pocketbook have its say (as well as a qualified architect or engineer, who can assess the possibilities). But then be guided by your heart's desire. For the full rewards of the remodeling adventure are found, not in bricks and mortar, but in the countless ways it can enrich the way you live.

From a tumbledown barn, A SPIRITED HOUSE

Bitten by the bug to remodel, almost anyone can assess the potentialities of a nice sound old house with nothing much the matter with it except out-at-the-elbowness and a need of new plumbing. But it takes something akin to a dowser's divining rod to sense the possibilities inherent in what most remodelers would scorn as a probable fiasco. For example: the protagonist of this story is—or was—a Bucks County, Pa., barn, almost 200 years old and scorned for heavens knows how long, which was transformed largely through the perspicacity, imagination, and sheer sweat of its remodeler. This determined and skillful man acquired his bucolic relic only because it came with a parcel of land. He soon fell in love with it and turned it into an enormously attractive house.

The conversion began by stripping the barn, quite literally, to the bones of its original post-and-beam framework, a sturdy skeleton doweled together like fine cabinetry. The structure was then replanned and resheathed. Of the three stories, the first (a hillside excavation, once the home of horses and cows) became a dining-kitchen area flanked by a garden room made by glassing in a recess that led to the animals' stone-walled, Dutch-doored stalls. At ground level, the second story (former chicken territory) is now the bedroom floor, and the top level, the old hay-and-storage loft, below, took on new life as a splendidly vaulted living room, opposite page. Brand new, a tri-level brick terrace at the back of the house sports a pool and the tinkle of jet fountains—nice change from the whinny and slurp of the old horse trough.

Only a prescient eye for hidden values could have seen in the gaunt, chink-ridden old loft the makings of the distinguished room it was to become in just four months



SPACIOUS BY NATURE, THE BARN GAINED PERFECT LIVABILITY

Rising to a dramatic 16 feet at the ridge of its peaked ceiling, the living room is king-sized—29 by 25 feet—with fresh new walls of white-painted wallboard, a new oak floor that stain, wax, and no end of elbow grease make look old, and rough-hewn beams that are old. (For another view, see our cover.) They are part of the preserved sinewy old framework-skeleton. The only change in the barn's roof line took place in this scissor-trussed room where a gable was added to make room for a huge floor-to-ceiling window—a lookout commanding a panoramic view of the countryside. Manually skilled to an impressive degree, our energetic remodeler sublet all of the contracts for carpentry, masonry, painting, and plumbing, then not only oversaw the work himself, but was responsible for all of the design concepts that made a barn a home.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY WILLIAM MARIS

The three-storied plan, below, starts (1) at the hillside level—the old byre, now given to dining room, kitchen, garden room, and storage. Up one flight (2) at ground level is the former chicken "roost," now divided into bedrooms, a dressing room-bath, the entrance-gallery. Up top in the old loft (3) is the new living room, new fireplace, and wonderful new view.

TEXTURED EXTERIOR KEEPS FAITH WITH RURAL TRADITION

Barn front, picturesque, not quite a ruin

The rear, almost a Wyeth painting

Replacing the barn's old vertical board sheathing (heavily windowed at the front to step up the hens' productivity) is a handsome new exterior of cedar board and batten, darkened with a mixture of stain and black paint to a rich charcoal. Three accents delight the eye: the lemon yellow front door, so bright it grins its welcome; the little yellow weathervaned cupola atop the house, and a pair of plinth-borne terra-cotta children, affectionate and plump, framed in a window of the entrance-gallery.

The hillside posture of the house, opposite page, enjoys a subtle switch from the Pennsylvania traditionalism of the roadside façade. Without loss of character, the "look" is different—mainly because of the new top-story window—huge, atelier-like—and the openness of the glassed-in garden room, a far, contemporary cry from cattle stalls. There is urbanity, too, in the pool and its girdling brick terrace—a slick textural contrast to the barn's old fieldstone foundation.

EW AIRINESS RAMED BY NCIENT TIMBERS

e foyer-gallery, opposite page, nds across the front of the house, ing up about a third of this, the room, level. A simple, riser-less rway of black-painted iron with d teak treads leads down to the ing room, up to the living room. re, and everywhere, new walls l old beams and posts are painted ite softened with a touch of um-. the dining room, right, the orig-ıl fieldstone walls were carefully eserved, and only the partitioning lls are new. Here, particularly, old beams show their impressive awn: each was hewn from a single e. Aglow with white paint, they em not at all incongruous with glish and French furniture and crystal chandelier. The new floor of brick (the old one was simply mped-down earth) laid over a diant heating system—copper ils snugly blanketed in concrete.

he garden room, right, is a assed-in gallery occupying what ıd been a kind of recessed porch front of the cattle stalls. The rick floor of the dining room is ontinued here, and then, in a dif-erent pattern, extended to the ter-ace. Window panels are insulating lass with hot water baseboard heat-ıg installed beneath them. Kitchen, ır right, is sleekly workmanlike, ith custom-built cabinets painted ıustard yellow. The bright and oolly hanging at right of door, ntitled "Spring Flowers," was esigned by Robert Brownstone.

New wing+new landscaping= A PERFECT ABOUT-FACE

One of the best remodeling agents in the world is a green thumb—particularly when it belongs to a landscape architect such as Henry Lambert of Dallas, Tex. Having done much to beautify his community, Mr. Lambert was to make it even greener when he bought for his family a forty-year-old clapboard house 40 feet from a major traffic artery in the heart of the city—to most people, a pretty hopeless proposition. But not to Mr. Lambert. By adding a new living room—a wing projecting into a quiet side yard—he very neatly reversed the orientation of the house. A terrace and pool transformed the yard into a garden oasis, and the dated, street-side exterior was invigorated with a redesigned columned porch rising above profusely planted new greenery—a leafy barrier between house and street. Final ingredients in Mr. Lambert's rejuvenating elixir: new shutters and a new paint job in yellow and apricot inspired by a Joseph Albers painting.

Badly proportioned columns, popular in the twenties, supported the porch roof, only part of which was actually covered

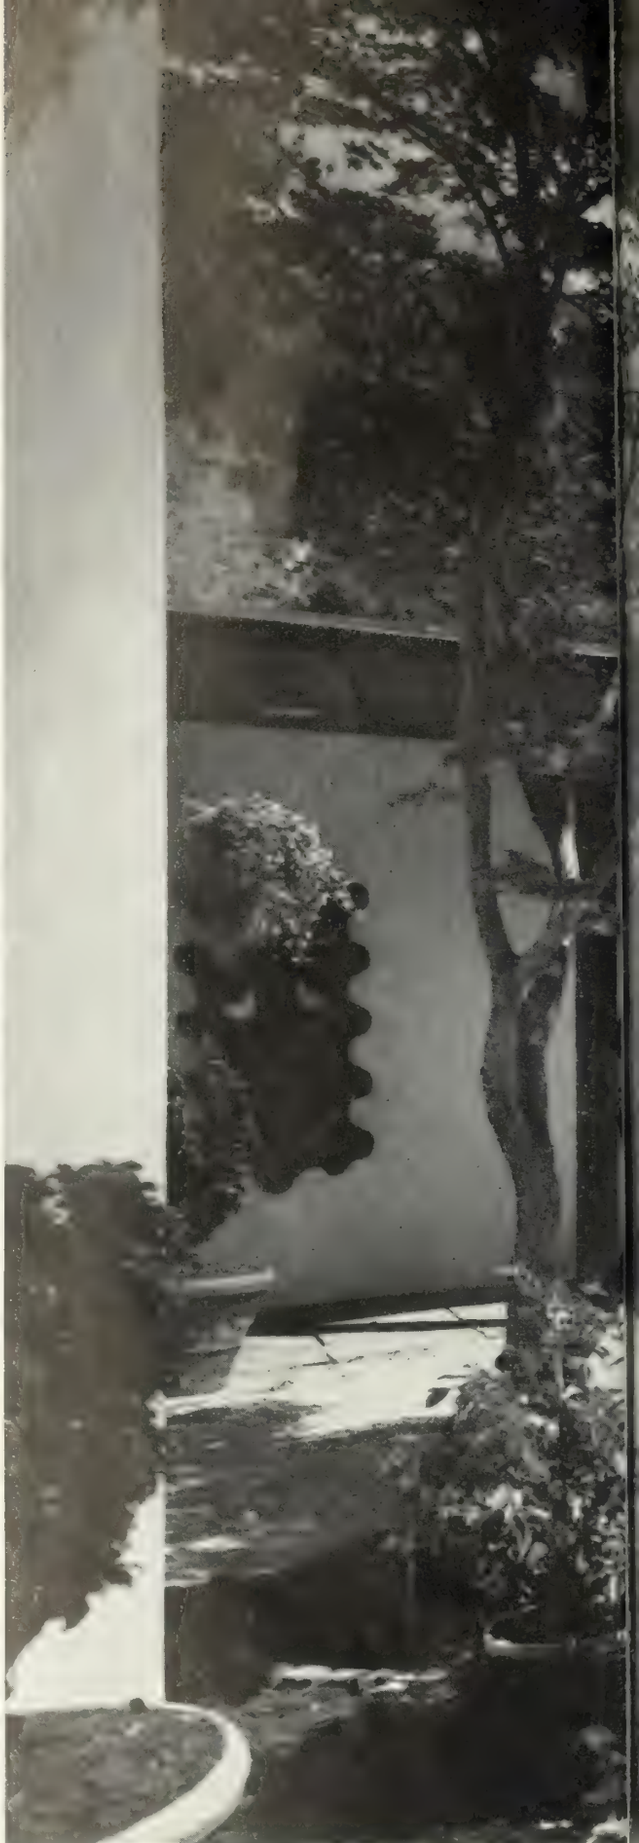
Major objective of new plan, above—a secluded outdoor living area was realized by sheltering entire side yard with fences, planting. A new living room wing opens to a circular terrace, an oval swimming pool, and a gazebo. Only other important change: a restyled front porch.

OWNERS: Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lambert
DESIGNERS: Lambert Landscape Co.
LOCATION: Dallas, Tex.

Charming Colonial façade, opposite page, top, altered by replacing old pillars with slim white metal columns which support a fully covered porch roof, proves a simple remodeling point: the best change is sometimes the least. New paint scheme of apricot shutters, yellow clapboard creates a fresh personality. Live oaks, hackberry, and boxwood hedge visually enrich setting.

The magic of remodeling knows no boundaries. The Lamberts' new white brick terrace, swimming pool and lovely garden, opposite page, bottom, are all logically delightful outdoor extensions of the family's new single-story living room, left. Pool's revolving fountain whirls sparkling pattern of water.

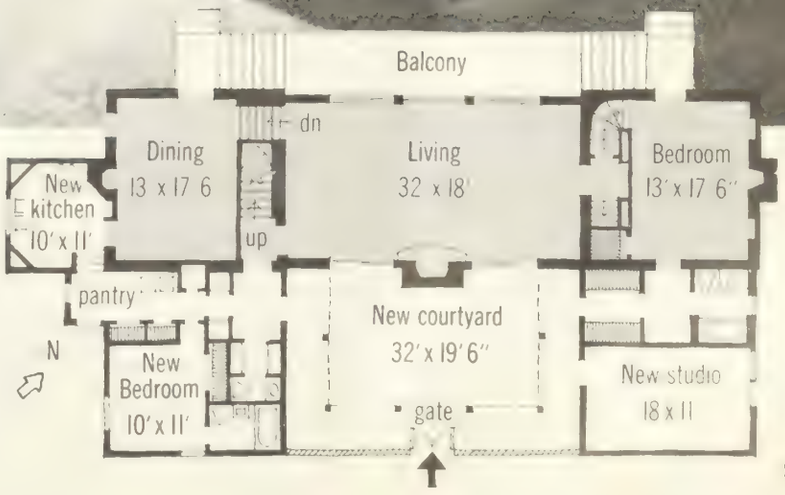
The new living room's floor-to-ceiling glass walls, left, frame an idyllic picture of terrace, trees, and pool. A suitable wet-foot room for three daughters and their swimming guests, the checkerboard floor is vinyl. Garden room mood is keyed by a pleasant mélange of rattan, a Franklin stove, and an old French Moroccan grandfather clock.



A tennis court was the "front yard" in old days

Today the tennis court is gone, replaced by two one-story front wings and a new entrance courtyard created between them. Out of respect for original design, new stucco-faced wall is topped with the same fluted Spanish tiles that roof the onetime pavilion.

From a bygone pool pavilion to NEWBORN ELEGANCE



Here and there on New York's Long Island, still secure on an acre or two, are splendid architectural "toys" that have outlived by years their parent houses and now wait for nothing but the reviving touch of remodeling hands. Here was such a toy, a poolside pavilion as big as a house—even in the days when it served only as a cabana and picnic spot. A handsome building in the Mediterranean style, it consisted very simply of a huge oblong loggia with a set of dressing rooms at either end. Today, having been made elegantly livable by the late architectural designer George Hickey III, it is a round-the-clock working house with all the traditional amenities. A lead-pipe remodeling cinch, the pavilion lent itself to considerable refinement and expansion with no loss at all of Old World ambiance. The loggia became a living room by glazing in five of its vaulted arches and replacing the sixth with a chimney and fireplace. The two dressing room areas were revised to become, respectively, a bedroom wing and a dining-kitchen-service wing. And to screen the house from the road, a tile-topped garden wall went up to enclose a new entrance-courtyard as romantic as any on the Costa Brava.

The new courtyard has the quietude of a cloister (which, with its covered walk on three sides, it rather resembles) and just enough greenery—a big Japanese maple, ivy in hanging baskets, geraniums and shrubs in stone urns—to soften the stark whiteness of the stucco walls. The old tennis court's clay is paved with gravel bordered by a promenade laid in flagstone—re-used stone economically salvaged from the old loggia floor.

aded section of plan represents the original structure. The dressing room bays proved high enough to be split into levels, a room to a level. In addition, three small one-y wings were built: one is now the kitchen; another is a plex of maid's room, utilities, bar, and powder room (these off the dining room); and, attached to the master bedroom, hird pairs a dressing room-bath and a workshop-studio.

HITECTURAL DESIGNER: George Hickey III

UTE MODELING: TING THE OLD DE THE NEW

pavilion's old loggia proved the kind of architectural mine that sends remodelers euphoria. These days, to du- te the vaulted structure with six barrel-vaulted arches d cost a shocking sum. As it a living room of enormous and character was had by ly glassing in all the arches one, and blocking out the with a new chimney and lace. The original flagstone ing was taken up, relaid in ourtyard, and replaced with parquet—an unbeatable un- corer of a room's elegance.

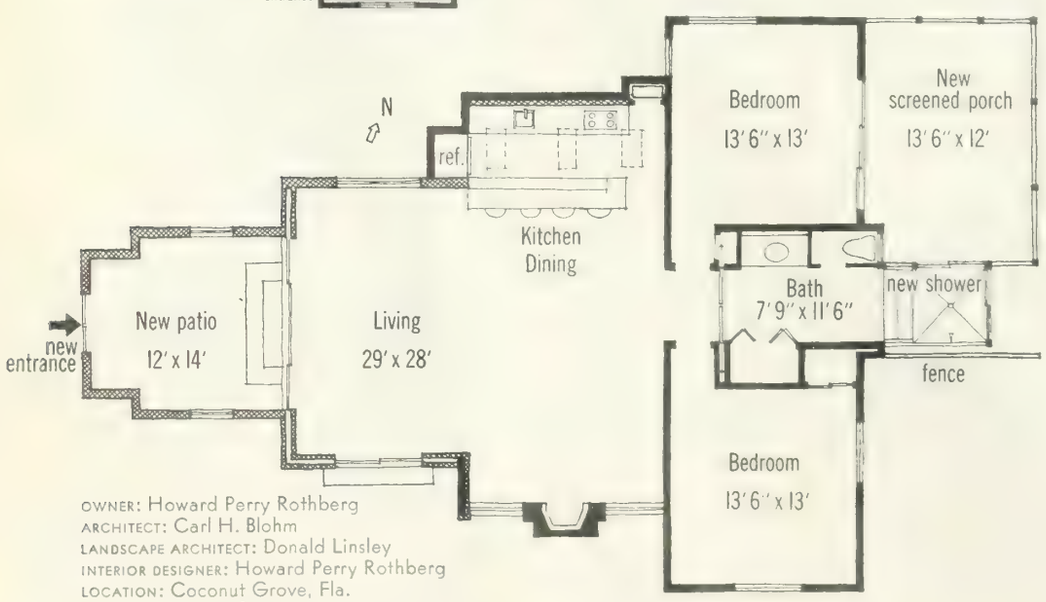
One delightful plum of the estate—the swimming pool—required no face-lifting at all. Almost as big as a small lake, fed by a spouting triton's head set into the base of the porch, it lies shimmering at the rear of the house like a lagoon in a water garden.

Another "found" asset was the porch-like balcony that has overlooked the pool and gardens since the day the pavilion was built. Shaded by the living room awnings—great white canopies shaped like scalloped scoops—it is an airy perch for dining and games.

The new dining room was built into the lower half of one of the old dressing room bays. (There is a bedroom upstairs.) Parquet-floored, hung with a Chinese wallpaper, and warmed on chilly days by an antique iron-and-brass fireplace, it is inviting enough to double as a library, which—well-fortified with books—it does.

Kitchen, although new, has the look of an old cuisine in a Basque farmhouse—a masquerade compounded of a tile-patterned wallpaper, a quarry-tile floor, cabinets with a distressed finish, an iron lunette.

How a cut-up cottage yielded SPACE UNLIMITED



PHOTOGRAPHS BY GRIGSBY

Brick exterior replaced wood siding of old house, and four coats of white paint add ageless patina

Original plan, left, has house chopped into five small rooms (including screened porch). In the remodeled plan, below, living room, kitchen and porch become one very large room with an open kitchen-dining counter along one wall. New entrance patio was added, along with a screened porch adjacent to the master bedroom. Bath-dressing area opens to a glassed-walled shower.

OWNER: Howard Perry Rothberg
ARCHITECT: Carl H. Blohm
LANDSCAPE ARCHITECT: Donald Linsley
INTERIOR DESIGNER: Howard Perry Rothberg
LOCATION: Coconut Grove, Fla.
SIZE: 1,475 square feet
Building materials and equipment, page 140

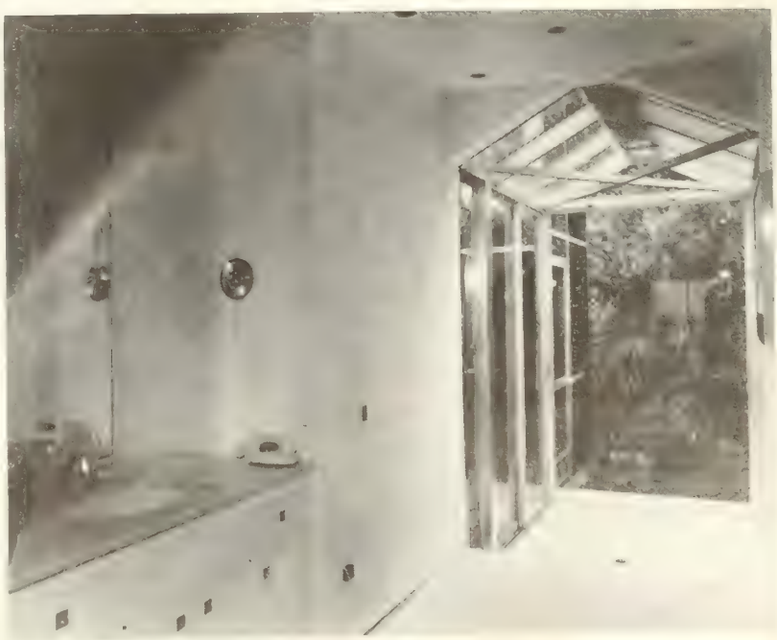
Space—bountiful and uninterrupted living space—ranks among the most coveted of commodities today. To find it in a small, typically unpretentious Florida cottage is little short of miraculous. More precisely, interior designer Howard Perry Rothberg found the house, then made the space. He accomplished this feat in two ways: where once existed three small rooms —a kitchen, living room, and screened porch— all walls were removed to create a room of near-ballroom dimensions. Surprisingly, the kitchen-dining counter, the living and formal dining areas within the room are all clearly delineated, as if invisible walls separated them.

To make the room even more dramatic, the old dropped ceiling was removed and the arched beams and rafters exposed. But luxurious, unbroken space is not the whole story. Mr. Rothberg achieved a theatrical impact by adding a walled, open-roofed patio as a visual extension of the room; by sheathing all perimeter walls with either brick or glass; and by installing a rheostat-controlled lighting system which creates, indoors and out, pure drama.

Emphatic white is everywhere—in the painted brick, the ceramic tile floor, the ceilings, even the rugs and upholstered furniture.

Marble-topped counter, above, 12 feet long, seats up to six on upholstered corduroy chairs with tall chrome legs. Guests face sleek kitchen-work center and painted brick wall accented by soft light from fixtures between the rafters.

A brilliant study in sheer whiteness, the large all-purpose room, opposite page, gains illusion of almost limitless expanse as the eye is carried to entrance patio (sliding glass doors close to keep out weather) and arched doorway with Spanish gate of iron tracery. The clean-lined furniture and white tile floor play up openness.



THE WALLS TUMBLED, THE CEILING OPENED UP

Serene seating area, opposite page, centers on the new brick fireplace flanked by floor-to-ceiling glass panels. Although clearly a part of the single large remodeled area, this living "room" gains definite boundaries through placement of sofa and tri-pedestaled hi-fi, a white area rug, and recessed fireplace wall. Lavish garden lighting avoids nighttime sensation of gazing out into a black pit of darkness.

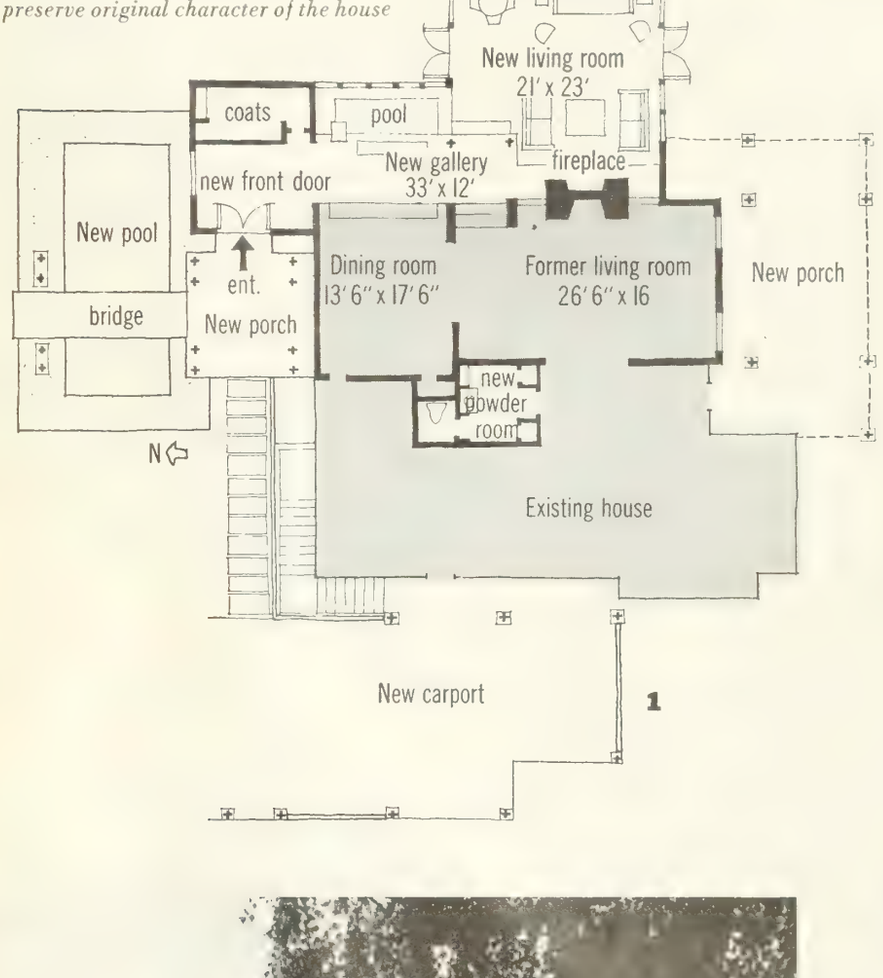
The kitchen counter, above, also serves as a bar, is pivotal to both the living area and the small dining table (which is most often laden with hors d'oeuvres during the cocktail hour). The counter is high enough to provide storage for food preparation on the kitchen side. Heat and cooking odors are vented directly outside.

Nature-lover's shower, right, all glass and set amidst a profusion of palms and camellias, was made a novel extension of—and down two steps from—the remodeled bath-dressing room. Garden fence and a dense screen of foliage secure its privacy. Concealed above bath's dropped ceiling is a heat pump that both heats and cools the whole house. Room has no towel racks; used towels are dropped into a hamper and whisked from here directly to the washer.

How to ring an old style-setter with UP-TO-DATE DELIGHTS

Certain houses, by virtue of their trail-blazing design, impose a stern responsibility on the sensitive, would-be remodeler. Mr. and Mrs. Raleigh Chinn of Seattle, Wash., owned such a trail-blazer—a stately two-story wood and stucco house built in 1905 from the plans of architect Ellsworth Storey, famous as a pioneer modernist. Properly respectful but far from intimidated, the Chinns and their architect, Roland Terry, plunged into a major remodeling that yielded an exhilarating new environment—and they scarcely ruffled the old house's dignity in the doing. To expand and open the dark interior to its magnificent surroundings, Mr. Terry literally ringed the house with a new gallery, living room, reflecting pools, porches, and a carport. The plan was reversed: what had been the front entrance area became a broad porch; and the new entrance, now at the rear, boasts a delightful footbridge. Doubtless, Ellsworth Storey would recognize the house today despite wholesale changes surrounding it—and thoroughly approve of its yeasty new life.

The new living room, really an ease-taking garden room-lanai in spirit, was an inspired addition to admit an unrealized world of light, sun, and a sparkling view of Lake Washington. Walls of glass, white terrazzo floors are stellar brighteners. White silk covers folding window panels.



Marble-topped buffet is a room divider between dining room and new glass-walled gallery, has prodigious storage capacity, works as a serving counter from both sides.

A playful new terrace laid out in a pattern of black and white squares, complete with Brobdingnagian chessmen, disturbs not one whit the serenely dignified mien of the old house. Terrace is a key link between the new living room at right and broad-roofed porch whose protruding rafters and sturdy posts are pleasantly compatible with the architectural details of the sixty-year-old house.

New entrance, living room wing are sympathetic outriggers designed to preserve original character of the house

NEW ADDITIONS ENHANCE LIVING, EMBRACE A NEGLECTED VIEW

1 The old house, shaded area of plan, has become virtually an island surrounded by a sea of remodeling amenities: a new pool and bridge, left on plan, lead to a hospitable entrance porch, thence through double front doors to a gallery with a large coat closet at one end, a decorative pool at the other. Down two steps from gallery is new glass-walled living room. New porch, right on plan, overlooks rear lawn, chessboard terrace. Carport was added, wisely, at the farthest point from the outdoor living areas. A new powder room was created in an old butler's pantry.

2 Entrance portico with open rafters and footbridge spans a pool replete with lily pads, tall jet of water. Across bridge is the porch entirely under cover. Front doors are at left.

3 The great bonanza of the remodeling is a colorful new living room with a profligate sense of openness that would have been inconceivable in the days when the house was built. Room borrows visual delight of adjoining gallery, three glass walls. Only solid wall has as center of interest a fireplace faced with travertine; decorative bronze bolts secure it to wall. Ceiling is paneled in herringbone pattern of cedar boards stained natural color.

4 Sleek new powder room sports gold carpet, luminous ceiling (plus four small spotlights over mirror for effective close-up light). Foot pedal control on floor governs hot and cold water faucets housed in brass Buddha figure that sits on a marble block atop the counter.

5 Perfect spot for contemplating view of Lake Washington is bench in gallery that parallels pool framed by black slate. Gilded Thailand figure is fountainhead, plashes water on rock in the pool. Beyond entrance coat closet at right, the eye can savor still another sparkling water jet—that in the entrance pool.

In a New York town house

An elegant sequence of color moods

In the drawing room, a striéed aquamarine silk, hunted down in Paris and brought back by the bolt, is put to prodigal use as wallcovering, sofa upholstery, and braid-bordered overcurtains. Faithful to the one-dominating-color credo, a matching aquamarine turns up in velvet on the card chairs, and again in the miniature-pattern silks—some floral, some geometric—that cover cushions and a collection of Louis XVI chairs. Although quiescent, the room is flecked with elegant glitter: gilt and white moldings, a trumeau over the mantel, Coromandel screens, lacquer and mother-of-pearl accessories. And for sheer zing, sharp as a needle, an unexpected touch: citron silk on a sofa, above, a bench.

Recently remodeled to stretch space and step up its sparkle, the New York town house of Mr. and Mrs. Iva S. V.-Patcévitch has a quality perhaps unique in its neighborhood: the moment the threshold is crossed, you are about as close to Paris as one can get without recourse to ship or plane. In an urbane architectural sense, the house is French only by virtue of beautifully proportioned, high-ceilinged rooms linked, floor to floor, by a slim and graceful staircase. But in the use of color and motif, the decoration is as Parisian as anything in the Place des Vosges. Her own interior designer, Mrs. Patcévitch believes that an important room should be dominated by one color extravagantly used in either a subtle monotone (kept from monotony by a variety of patterns in the fabrics and a shock-accent or two) or in a statement so swackingly bold that the room can tolerate no other hue. She loves flowers, and uses them consistently—woven, painted, or printed—as a motif. She loves French furniture, and has collected a potpourri of periods—all Gallic kissing cousins—flexibly arranged for big parties, small parties, and just plain, comfortable, family use. As fond of the dramatic as she is of understatement, she alternates moods from room to room, then ties them all together with a ribbon of scarlet carpet that begins at the front door and climbs the stairs to the eaves.

The color gamut:
aquamarine spiked with flowers,
Venetian red countered with white

Dining room, once old kitchen, is low of ceiling, so its clatter (and chatter) is muted by an acoustical ceiling.

Marble-floored foyer has painted, paneled walls of gray and white faux marbre. Newel-post finial is a crystal pineapple.

Elevator operates on house current in a shaft built on the outside of the house. Former windows are used as doors. Walls are lacquered Venetian red, then over-painted in grisaille with musical monkeys. Telephone is an outside connection.

Chinese flowers on a clear aquamarine chintz sprig the dining room walls, chairs, screen, and windows. Almost always, the table linen, all by Porthault, is floral-patterned for a flower-on-flower look. Beyond the dining terrace, a walled garden paneled in treillage yields pretty wherewithal for centerpieces.

TOM LEONARD

In the library, Venetian red velvet cuts a marvelous swath—heady, but countered by white paint, crystal, gilt, a Venetian mirror. The red-bordered Aubusson was a fortuitous find—"sheer luck."

Library bay, left, curls around a plaid-silk-draped table holding two favorite possessions—a vermeil Haseltine boar, a blanc-de-chine temple urn. Wall brackets are gold-earringed, blackamoor sphinxes.

Spiraled through the house like a scarlet helix, the staircase carpet, floor to floor, is not only a catalytic path from one color scheme to another, but a lovely—if mute—way to say welcome.

Two sanctums–

one bravura, one subtle

The son of the household comes home from school to a bedroom half Napoleonic with its wallpapered tent-ceiling, half just easygoing wicker-chaired study. The Portuguese rug, lively as a crazy quilt, holds its own with the paper and fabric stripes—good example of pitting one pattern against another in a room designed to epitomize pure pzazz.

The loftiest flowers in the house are the pink geraniums in Mrs. Patcévitch's top-floor bath, a bower made so by a matching floral fabric and wallpaper hung everywhere. To light its geraniums, the ceiling is buttonholed with a pink and green Venetian glass chandelier—an overhead twinkle augmented by gilt sconces and a little opaline lamp for the vinyl-topped dressing counter.

SBY

The master bedroom, because of its northern exposure, is full of twenty-four-hour, man-made sunshine—pale yellow walls, goldfinch yellow velvet chairs. The rug, a draped table, and the silk brocade bedcover are antique white, and except for a valentine-like screen covered in aquamarine and sepia wallpaper, the accents—papier mâché and lacquer pieces inlaid with mother of pearl—are black as jet.

REMODELING WITH A PRICE TAG

Making your house a more delightful place to live is quite often a matter of a one-project, or at any rate a one-project-at-a-time, change. Although the rewards are priceless (there are no dollar signs for the uplift of your heart as you watch the constantly changing outdoor mural a new window wall gives you, or for the wonderful ease that truly efficient storage brings), still there is a price tag on the work and materials required. Here is a six-page scrapbook of spot remodeling jobs done in all parts of the country, and while you may not be able to duplicate for exactly the same money (costs vary regionally and even locally), the figures we quote will be close enough for you to decide which jobs you might do right now. Doing your own labor can be your biggest single saving, providing that you do not undertake projects beyond your skills and experience.

EXTERIOR FACE-LIFTING of an old shingle cottage started with removal of tumbledown porch. Old shingles were covered with panel-scored plywood and a neo-Regency look achieved with the addition of a pediment under the roof line and pilasters made of 1- by 10-inch pine boards plus simple applied moldings. New bull's-eye windows for kitchen and bathroom are stock items. Crooked upstairs window shutters were straightened. Architectural designer, Charles Lamar.

WALL-SIZE VIEW for an eight-year-old kitchen was a matter of nine hours of work by a carpenter assisted by the skillful man of the house. From nine to noon, old wall came out; by two o'clock, header and side frames were in place; 8-foot by 6-foot-8-inch insulating glass sliding window wall unit was assembled and installed. An electrical outlet and a heating duct had to be relocated and a bit of housewifely painting done. Window by Andersen.

SEWING CENTER in an 8-foot-wide study alcove was a very special do-it-yourself project: special because the doer is a cabinetmaker by trade. Esthetic aim was to build a woman's working area that would blend with masculine study. Practical aim was a pinning-cutting-sewing surface plus storage for fabrics, patterns, trimmings, ironing board. Machine nests under cutting surface, far right, above, and bonus storage space is used for household necessities such as cleaning supplies, far right, below. Upper shelves are new, but lift-up glass-doored cabinets and walnut file drawers were old dry goods store fixtures bought at auction. "FOUND" SPACE FOR BREAKFAST BAR AND STORAGE in a corner where a window and a bare radiator stood: the radiator, at right angles to the window, was given a slatted enclosure, and a well-insulated closet for liquor, glassware built above it. New vertical shutters echo the radiator slatting and beneath them a maple chopping block makes a some-time-eating, sometime-planning counter handy to wall telephone. The leftover bit of space in the corner seemed ideal spot for a tier of memento shelves. Shutters by Pinecrest.

BIG DIVIDENDS FROM SMALL VENTURES

REDWOOD-LINED MASTER BATHROOM exemplifies skillful use of one material to unify a small space. Paneling, cabinet doors, storage drawers, sink-top counter are all California redwood, a handsome and durable wood that is notable for resisting water spots. The many small drawers below lavatory permit systemized storage of cosmetics, towels, cleansing tissues, medicines.

CLEVER PLUMBING INSTALLATION made possible a children's bathroom where pipes were nonexistent. By raising the floor up one step (you step up from bath entrance) and running pipes beneath that, then continuing pipes to meet convenient vertical plumbing lines, expensive alterations were avoided. The room, although windowless, was on the top floor, so a large plastic skylight was installed to admit natural light. Walls are covered with exterior grade plywood—made to be painted. The enamel bathtub with a copper lining and wood rim is antique. Amtico vinyl flooring.

UNDER-EAVES STORAGE, seldom put to good use, was planned in a top-floor girl's room for drawer storage and little wall recesses for a child's games, collections of small objects. Neatly fashioned enclosure for the dark-stained chest of drawers has a recessed mirror framed on wall. New storage wall is sheathed with plywood panels in vertical planking pattern.

Hawaii is such a place. We found the Hawaiian lent for living as stimulating on this visit as we did two years ago (see H&G, July, 964). And we brought back dozens of new examples of the happy results produced by e creative attitudes, unchanged but expressed in new ways, with which the people of awaii approach their life and environment. We found fresh ways to create ease, com-rt, and beauty in gardens and houses by working in partnership with nature; expres-ons of hospitality to emulate, both in thoughtful planning and spontaneous decorative llips; adventurous adaptations and audacious mixtures of ideas and objects to trans-te; and delights for the eye to suggest how you can apply the Hawaiian point of view to our own surroundings. For H&G's notebook of travel tips on the Islands, see page 25.

Hospitality seems as instinctive as breathing in Hawaii and Hawaiian life offers a profusion of imitable ways to make guests feel relaxed and wanted. Hospitality is expressed in the design and furnishing of houses; in a covered entrance path or a garden at the door; in comfortable furniture, comfortably arranged, or an imaginative collection of table appointments. And the hospitable spirit prompts myriad small touches that say welcome: a lei casually tossed on a statue, an orchid served on your drink. Hotels, too, have distinctive ways of making you feel at home. Particularly rich in ideas is the new Mauna Kea Beach Hotel on the island of Hawaii, where the rooms, like country-house guest rooms, are thoughtfully equipped; and the food is not only delicious, but pretty enough to paint.

freewheeling adaptation of ideas, materials, and traditions, local or imported, to of-the-moment needs is a typically American, not just a Hawaiian custom; but in Hawaii the results, drawn from sources all over the world, are especially provocative. Familiar European ornaments, like treillage and classic garden sculpture, gain freshness from an untraditional tropical setting. Borrowings from Japan produce a series of serendipities: now-you-see-them-now-you-don't walls of shojis, a party table with a built-in grill adapted from the Ghengis Khan barbecue, kimono-silk blanket bindings. And traditional local materials turn out to have unexpected decorative uses; for example, quilts as tapestries, brilliant Hawaiian prints as tablecloths as well as muumuus.

to emulate or just to enjoy, range, in Hawaii, from humble door stops and trash cans to minor triumphs of garden and house design. Enchanting arrangements of accessories and collections inspire fresh groupings for your own possessions, and an exciting series of instant green-leaf containers (vases, baskets, and package wrappings) opens a whole new field of experiment. The ti-leaf wrappings are traditional; Hawaiians take anything they want to wrap, place it in the center of a ti-leaf (or two crossed), bring the leaf ends together and tie with the stem end. Ti leaves, both green and red, are available at many florists. To make the vases and basket, try iris leaves or green rushes instead of coconut fronds.

A new form of night lighting for a Party in the Dark

While one of summer's great joys is a party in the garden, possibly the least exploited joy is a nighttime garden party. Yet, with the aid of a new kit of lights that can be strung in trees or shrubbery to simulate the romantic characteristics of moonlight (but without the blanching effect true moonlight has on colors), a dusk-to-dawn fête champêtre is simplicity itself. To illustrate the point, H&G staged a June-night dinner and dance in a Long Island, N. Y., garden that, while verdant, could on no account be considered huge (the lawn, from end to end, measured just 150 feet).

The party began at dusk and, although black tie, it followed a pleasantly informal and impromptu pattern. Guests, greeted with cocktails and empanadas at a halfway-house bar midway along the lawn, were given their choice of wandering, sitting, or joining in a game of wildcat croquet that rambled over the length of the winding lawn. This turned out to be a marvelous ice-breaker and an easy activity for the long-skirted.

Tables, chairs, and a dance floor were all rented. (Rental companies will assume all the responsibility for setting up the floor and seeing that it is level.) We covered small round tables with cloths of black-and-white polka-dot cotton, swathed the buffet and bar with black-and-white striped cotton, added flowered napkins in brilliant tones of red, green, and blue. (Continued) transformation for a garden: enchanting effects with man-made moonlight, flickering candles

Pre-dinner cocktails and croquet get guests moving, mingling, and in a party mood.

To light our party, we used two Kimlite kits, each with six lights, eight colored filters, 100 feet of wire, and a transformer, which reduced 110-volt house current to a manageable, safe 12 volts. Threading the flexible wires high in the trees, we beamed the lights on foliage, rather than on the dining and dancing areas, so that the light, blue-filtered, was softly diffused over a large area. To supplement this gentle, over-all illumination, we used the direct, sparkling light of candles in Mexican tin lanterns on and around the dining tables. As daylight faded, the lights came on, transforming the garden into a green, enchanted glade of romantic mystery. Guests left the croquet lawn for the buffet table, helping themselves to a simple dinner of chicken adobo, green salad, rolls, and fresh fruit dessert. Afterward, everyone picked up lanterns from the posts ringing the tables and filed down to the dance floor, set in a wooded picnic area, there to dance under more faux moonlight until dawn. (Precautionary note: If you place the dance floor on the lawn, don't leave it there more than two days or it may damage grass.)

HOW TO WORK WITH AN ARCHITECT

Anyone who is fortunate enough (as, for instance, editors of House & Garden) to visit houses with the architects who designed them finds himself sooner or later applying the Threshold Test. This is a wholly intuitive method for judging how successful a house may be, in human if not architectural terms. As the name implies, the Threshold Test begins, and sometimes ends, at the front door.

Imagine an architect named Charles Jones who takes you to see a house he has designed for, say, Alfred and Jane Smith. Architect Jones strides to the entrance, raps, opens the door halfway, and announces his presence.

"Al? Jane? Anyone at home?"

"Charlie?" Footsteps approach.

Jane greets the architect warmly, but doesn't say, "Come in." It doesn't seem necessary; Charlie, with you in tow, is already in. The reason becomes clear after Jane invites Charlie to take you on a tour of the house, admonishing you to overlook the toys strewn in the children's rooms and the dry cleaning waiting to be picked up in the master bedroom.

The Smiths' architect, it appears, is always welcome, for in a sense this is his house as well as theirs. They love the house he has created for them, and they continue to think well of him because they associate the success of their family environment with his skill and understanding.

Not all architects—nor all families—pass the Threshold Test with high grades. Some, in fact, will not even subject themselves to it because of one of three unfortunate conditions: The architect has fallen out with the client; vice versa; or they have fallen out with each other. Architects and clients become disenchanted with each other for reasons no more arcane than those which alienate boys and girls, husbands and wives, bosses and subordinates.

Unless your motives for wanting an architect-designed house are well defined and meaningful to your family, you diminish your chances of getting a house that is genuinely gratifying to you or your architect. For it is a fact that most architects believe they do their best work for clients who know what they want and understand the complex process they are letting themselves in for.

So let us assume your motives are keen, and your needs, wishes, and predilections are sharply focused. How do you go about finding the architect? Many do not accept residential design work. The most commonly expressed reason—the inability to make a modest profit or even to break even—is made more poignant by the widespread admission that all talented designers "should try," as one architect put it, "to fit houses into the cracks of their practice."

In every region, however, there are some excellent men who do accept residential commissions, and ungrudgingly. Don't look for them in the Yellow Pages. They will be listed there, but their capabilities won't be. In any case, having an architect-designed house is almost never the result of an impulse decision; nor should it be. The idea most often ferments slowly over months and even years. Typically, your awareness is sharpened and your interest quickened by the houses of friends, the houses you see in magazines, the houses you pass while driving.

Once you have decided that now is the time, a thorough canvas of designers is advisable. If you find an architect in your community whose work appeals to you, well and good. But you needn't stop there. Fan out beyond your immediate locality if necessary. Be willing to seek out and evaluate the houses of architects whose offices may be located a hundred or so miles away. Distance is not likely to be a deterrent, all other circumstances being favorable.

A leading architect and a teacher of architects, William Wilson Wurster, has said, "Houses are built by husbands and wives in the happiest period of their lives, and architects, unlike lawyers and doctors, have to be thankful they are dealing with optimists." There is another peculiar reason why architects, although professional men like lawyers and doctors, differ from them. A lawyer's clients make no pretense of grasping the intricacies of the law; but an architect's clients come to him with a hatful of pragmatic ideas, convictions, and prejudices about his profession. "Everyone is an expert on houses," another architect notes, "because everyone lives in one."

Undeniably, the optimism Dean Wurster has observed in house-building husbands and wives has its uses. The stakes, both subjective and financial, are high, and the occasions for self-doubt can occur with the regularity of sheep jumping over stacks of two-by-fours. But more than optimism—in the beginning, at least—you will need a healthy sense of realism. If your architect is the conscientious man you wish him to be, he will hope to learn a great deal about you and your family. Some architects recommend that a family put their thoughts in writing before the first serious discussion, and some families respond with remarkably voluminous and evocative descriptions of themselves.

It is axiomatic that a client wants more than he can afford. That's all right. Only by spreading out all of your ideas on the table (sometimes literally, in the form of magazine pages, ads, brochures, and whatnot) can the two of you separate the must-haves from the wish-we-coulds. Keep in mind, however, that a house is not a jigsaw puzzle. The pieces do not always fit where you wish they would, which is why you hire an architect. His challenge is to achieve a balance of all elements, material and spatial. The balance can be tipped, of course, if your family's special interests and needs warrant it. For example, an airline pilot with a passion for elec-ronic gadgets persuaded his architect that hey should preempt an incredibly dispro- portionate part of the budget. "The house was little more than a container," says the architect, "but the client was happy." And so, presumably, was his family.

Nearly all of your decisions will be conditioned in one way or another by the size of your budget. For example, if you have not yet bought your site, this investment obviously can have a great bearing on the size and quality of the house itself. Land has never been scarcer or more costly than it is today. Given a choice, the architect would prefer that you did not have a site when you come to him. It is a legitimate part of his service, for one thing, to help you find one. For another, he should be familiar with both available land and a fair price for it. But his main concern—and the one for which you pay him—is one of design. To him, a site is roughly analogous with an artist's canvas; what he puts on it should be determined in large degree by the size, shape, contour, and the immediate surroundings.

Tell the architect exactly how much money you wish to spend. But keep in mind that the bills do not stop coming in when the last workman quits the premises. In your very natural eagerness to have the most house and the best materials, you may be tempted to forget two elements which are essential in any successful home: landscaping and furnishings. Don't forget them. If you have to endure the next ten years apologizing (to yourselves, if no one else) for the crop of milkweed outdoors and the makeshift furnishings indoors, is the adventure worth the effort? You won't be happy with a shell of a house, and it is likely that the architect will share your discontent. So budget realistically for a complete living environment. Think of what goes in and around the house as essentials to your new environment, not "extras" to be added in the dim future.

One of the games people play when building a house might be called, "Who's Kidding Whom?" Clients too often accept as gospel the inability of architects to stay within a budget. As a consequence, they will quote the architect a figure of $35,000 on the assumption that the house will cost $45,000. This stratagem contains the seeds of its own failure. While the architect presumably struggles to build a $35,000 house, you are counting on having one worth $10,000 more.

It is true that many houses exceed an agreed-upon budget, but the blame is difficult to assess. Typically, the culprit is good intentions, shared by client and architect. "We've just got to have that extra bathroom," say you. "Well, I'll try to squeeze it in," says the architect. And there goes the budget.

One architect who has designed hundreds of houses and kept them within the budget tells his clients point-blank that three variables determine the substance of a house: the size of the budget, the amount of space, and the quality of materials and equipment. Any two of these three variables may be made definite stipulations. But the third must be left flexible, with the architect permitted to reach decisions that will keep the whole project in balance. Thus, if you were to agree on a hard and fast budget and insist on a full voice in choosing what goes into the house, then you would be expected to rely on this architect's judgment where space is concerned. Such an understanding can contribute to a fruitful working relationship, since any layman can readily grasp the physical essentials of a house when spelled out in these terms.

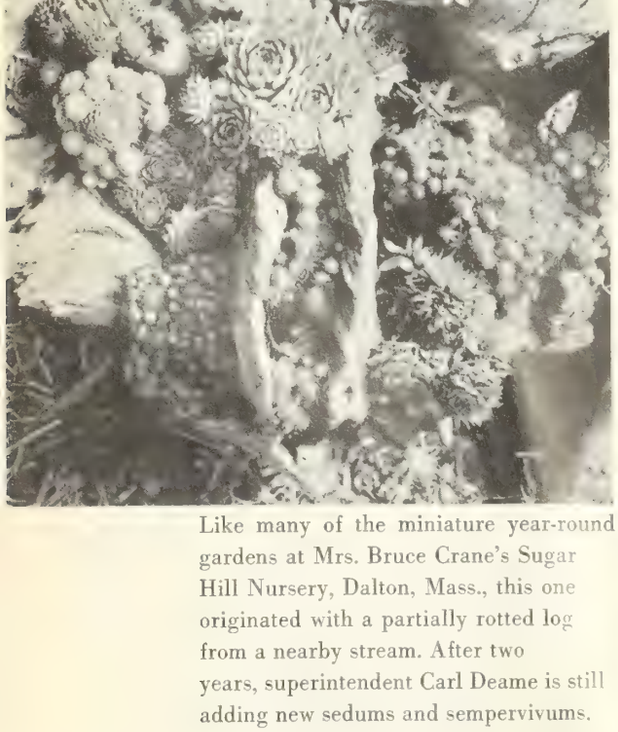
Architects feel strongly that you should be able to have the things you most want in your house. These can be almost anything—from compartmented baths for the children, to walnut paneling in the study, to a greenhouse. Or your wishes may involve planning considerations: clear-cut zoning between adults and children, a garage facing away from the street, or a darkroom near the master bedroom.

These and dozens of other personal wants should be thoroughly aired before the architect begins his preliminary sketches. For once he has moved from the conference phase of planning to the drawing board, it is his professional prerogative to do what he is best at, designing, without major additions or amendments to your family program.

Preliminary sketches usually will be drawn for your consideration in a matter of several weeks. If your architect happens to be a young man who is not directing the work on a number of commissions, he can concentrate on your house and move it along at a fairly brisk rate. His sketches can serve two important purposes. They will give you a comprehensive view of the proposed floor plan, the various elevations, and the siting of the house. In addition, after the sketches have been accepted in principle, the architect may ask one or more contractors to give him a cost (Continued on page 149)

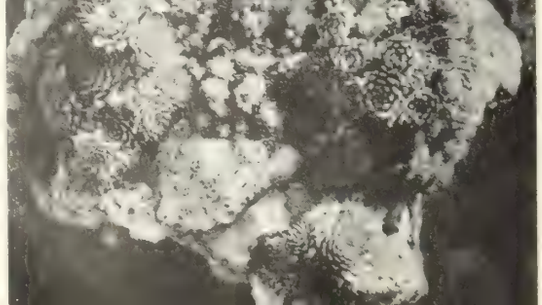
EDITOR'S NOTE: The design talents of at least four professionals may be enlisted in building a house. They are—in addition to the architect—the interior designer, the landscape architect, and the kitchen planner. All four are rarely used in planning a single house; budget limitations and the unavailability of one or more of the specialists in some communities are the most common deterrents. But if you are a prospective home-building family, you should understand the work of each professional. Whether you retain one, two, or more of these designers, the functions represented by all four must be carried out—usually through a collaboration between you and the designer (or designers) you do hire. This article on your relationship with the architect will be followed in subsequent issues by similar evaluations of the other three professional designers you may call upon.

In living plants the look of sculpture



By Carl Deame

Sempervivums (purple on top) cascade from a black glazed strawberry jar.



Five different kinds of sempervivum fill a clay saucer.

Like many of the miniature year-round gardens at Mrs. Bruce Crane's Sugar Hill Nursery, Dalton, Mass., this one originated with a partially rotted log from a nearby stream. After two years, superintendent Carl Deame is still adding new sedums and sempervivums.

The ornamental possibilities of driftwood and unusual rock forms have long been recognized by gardeners and especially by flower arrangers. Filled with some of our toughest and most resilient succulents, such materials assume new importance as year-round plant habitats. The result is a kind of all-weather, all-year living sculpture. The basic containers need not stop with odd-shaped rocks and parts of weather-beaten trees. They may range from conventional clay pots and strawberry jars to cement and ceramic forms of many shapes and colors. My own preference is for the eroded rocks of our native Berkshire hills and dead tree trunks or stumps in which pockets of decayed wood have begun to develop. In such containers, those two big S's of the plant world—sedum and sempervivum—can form miniature gardens that flourish brilliantly in spring and summer, and provide a variety of foliage color as winter approaches, when they remain as living sculpture, unprotected and unharmed, ready for the next spring. (Continued on page 145)

Fieldstone chunks with eroded pockets, iron slag, and desert manzanita roots set off succulent rosettes in a gravel bed, left. This collection is now two years old.

A 6-foot piece of a long-submerged tree, opposite page—heavy and only partly decayed—is in its third year of development with many sedums and sempervivums, all quite hardy in cold winters. As pockets enlarge with decay, planting room increases.

Diary of a remodeled kitchen

The bright, expansive, and superbly efficient kitchen here was, in its last incarnation, a small, low-ceilinged closed-in room in an almost derelict Southampton, N. Y., summer cottage, believe it or not. In its reincarnated guise, the kitchen still retains the old, seemingly limiting floor dimensions. Thus the transformation is a true triumph of space reorganization and exploitation of fresh materials: the surfaces and equipment are new, doors and windows were completely changed, a skylight was installed in "found" space, and a terrace was added. And all the aims of owner Martha Olson and architectural designer Charles Lamar were met. They had agreed that the new kitchen should provide maximum workability for lazy hot-weather cooking, laundering, and eating; foster all the bonus delights of summer living; and "pay its respects to the turn-of-the-century period in which the house was built without yielding to quaintness," as Mr. Lamar put it in a step-by-step remodeling diary he kept of the experience. We found his written record so interesting, both for this particular kitchen and as a guide for any remodeling project, that we quote from it on the next page, where you will find some of the steps, including a few quite unplanned, that turned an ugly duckling into a proper swan.

The breakfast corner, opposite page, is bathed with morning light that enters through French doors on two sides plus a pair of skylights. A carefree feeling of the outdoors is compounded with sunny-hued paneling, a rug of grassy green Herculon olefin fiber by Thomas Pride Mills. More of the same weather-resistant carpeting on the wooden deck, left, visually doubles the room's area by running its full length on the same level. The white brick chimney provides a refreshing color and texture contrast to the warm tones of U.S. Plywood's Duragard linear wall planking. White is repeated in the Frigidaire equipment of the working kitchen, upper left, a tiny U-shaped area that is separated from the dining side by a peninsula counter with sink. Cabinets over and under counter have two-sided access to save steps, avoid traffic problems.

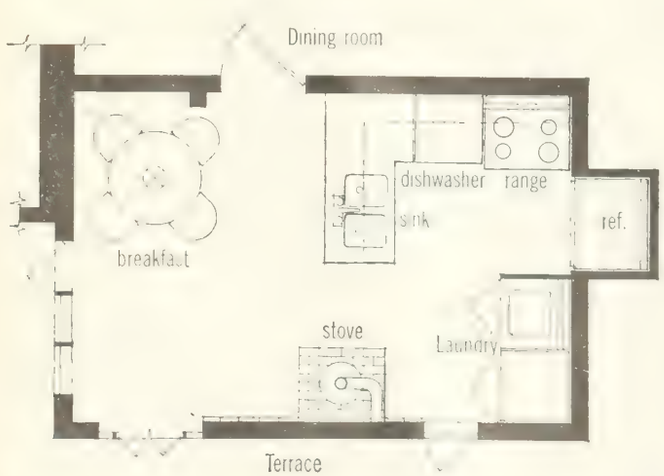
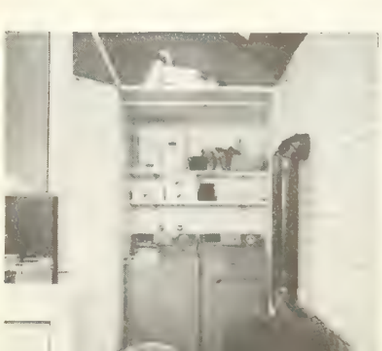
Day-by-day notes made planning easier

Remodeling is an evolving process—a dynamic, developing course of events, not a list of decisions made at a designer's desk in one swoop. In Miss Olson's kitchen the process introduced a number of surprises that contributed greatly to the success of the room. When designer Lamar and his contractor inspected the structure, they found the beaming ran the length instead of the usual breadth of the room and, further, that part of the space above the ceiling (from the dormer down to the roof's edge) was unused. How to make it useful? Mr. Lamar noted the solution in his diary: "We can create a skylight area with prefabricated plastic bubbles that open and close with a pole, and gain glare-free natural light, an almost automatic venting system for rising warm air, good ventilation for rainy days, and an interesting architectural feature."



In another surprising extension of space, a further bit of unused territory was incorporated into the kitchen's working area when the refrigerator was recessed into the woodshed adjoining one kitchen wall (see plan, below). This provided exactly enough space for a full complement of appliances in a small but compact U-shaped space. "Since we now have completely servantless summer living, we depend on electric servants," wrote Mr. Lamar. "I found one major equipment company that can supply everything, including a self-cleaning oven."

Utilitarian needs were one thing; giving the kitchen a warm, personal tone was another. So: "We want to have an open-fire stove for cool mornings and cozy evenings. I've seen a good-looking cast-iron Norwegian stove that has character, but looks like 'today' without being cold. This, with a brick wall and hearth, will harmonize with the period of the house."



Miss Olson and Mr. Lamar wanted the cooking area to be as white as possible "to help unify the various shapes and make the small space pleasant to work in and easy to light." And he repeated the white by painting all the brick. For the washer and dryer, they chose a warm honey-beige, and for walls and ceiling, "a new vinyl-coated material with a vertical-board effect that hints at the period of the house and has a warm color that harmonizes with the laundry equipment."

In such a bright, open room, Mr. Lamar felt the floor could be an important attention-getter, but that it should of course be practical. "If we can carpet the whole room, it will change the image of eating in the kitchen to one of cooking in the dining room. There is an excellent synthetic fiber carpet in a bright grassy green that is durable, easy to clean, dirt- and moisture-resistant, and rot-proof. It can be continued on the deck to increase the visual size of the room."

Feeling that chandeliers would "intrude on the slick linear look of the room," Mr. Lamar used a recessed spotlight over the table, more spots in the kitchen, and a strip light in the skylight for nighttime. "Curtains would also intrude, but Roman shades will close out the dark beautifully, cut the light, and look handsome at all times."

Kitchen is neatly bisected, see plan, above, into dining and working areas. The laundry corner, when its doors are folded back, left, reveals additional storage as well as washer and dryer. Refrigerator, above right and sketch, will "float" on a cushion of air for easy moving, even fully loaded, by attaching a vacuum cleaner set on "blower" position to an accessory at base of refrigerator.

HOUSE & GARDEN'S

Mushroom Cook Book

By Kay Shaw Nelson

For centuries, mushrooms were regarded with awe and superstition. Seeing them appear almost magically overnight, the ancients believed they were created by lightning bolts from heaven. The Greeks called them "food of the gods," while the Chinese believed they were endowed with medicinal properties. Julius Caesar decreed the common man unworthy of such treasures and limited their sale to the highborn and wealthy. It was left to the practical French, experimenting in caves and cellars, to discover the secret of mushroom culture in the late eighteenth century. By the end of the nineteenth, mushrooms had become an established part of the various European and Oriental cuisines. Today, you can buy the onetime food of the gods in markets throughout the year.

Fresh mushrooms should be firm and without spots. Refrigerated unwashed in open containers, they will keep a week (slight discoloration does not affect the flavor) or they may be frozen, unwashed, in sealed containers, and stored for a month. Mushrooms broiled or sautéed until half done may be frozen and stored for several months. Never peel mushrooms or soak them in water. Simply wipe with a damp cloth, or wash briefly, drain and dry. Mushrooms cook quickly—four or five minutes is ample—so if a recipe calls for long simmering, sauté or steam the mushrooms and add them during the last few minutes.

Mushrooms also come canned, frozen, freeze-dried, and dried. The most common canned mushrooms are the cultivated type, but you can also find two wild varieties imported from Europe, the large strongly flavored cèpes and the bright yellow delicate chanterelles. Dried mushrooms, which figure prominently in many foreign dishes, are sold in specialty and foreign food stores. Only a few of these dark beauties are needed to give a distinctive flavor. Wash them first in cold water, then soak in lukewarm water to cover in a covered non-metal container for twenty to thirty minutes. Drain and squeeze dry before using, and reserve the liquid for soups, sauces, and stews. While mushrooms are no longer regarded as a mystery, to the cook they remain always a culinary marvel.

APPETIZERS

Russian Piroshki with Mushroom Filling

1 cake or package yeast
1 cup lukewarm milk
2 teaspoons sugar
Salt
½ cup butter, melted
3 eggs, well-beaten
5 cups sifted flour
½ pound mushrooms
2 tablespoons butter
1 medium onion, chopped
Pepper to taste
¼ teaspoon paprika
2 tablespoons chopped dill
¼ cup sour cream
1 egg yolk, well-beaten

Place the yeast in a large warmed bowl. Add 2 tablespoons of the lukewarm milk and stir to dissolve yeast. Add sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, melted butter, and eggs to the remaining milk and mix well. Mix in dissolved yeast. Add the flour, 1 cup at a time, stirring well after each addition. Knead well on a floured board until smooth and elastic. Form into a large ball and place in a buttered bowl; turn over once. Let rise, covered, in a warm (80°) place for 1½ hours.

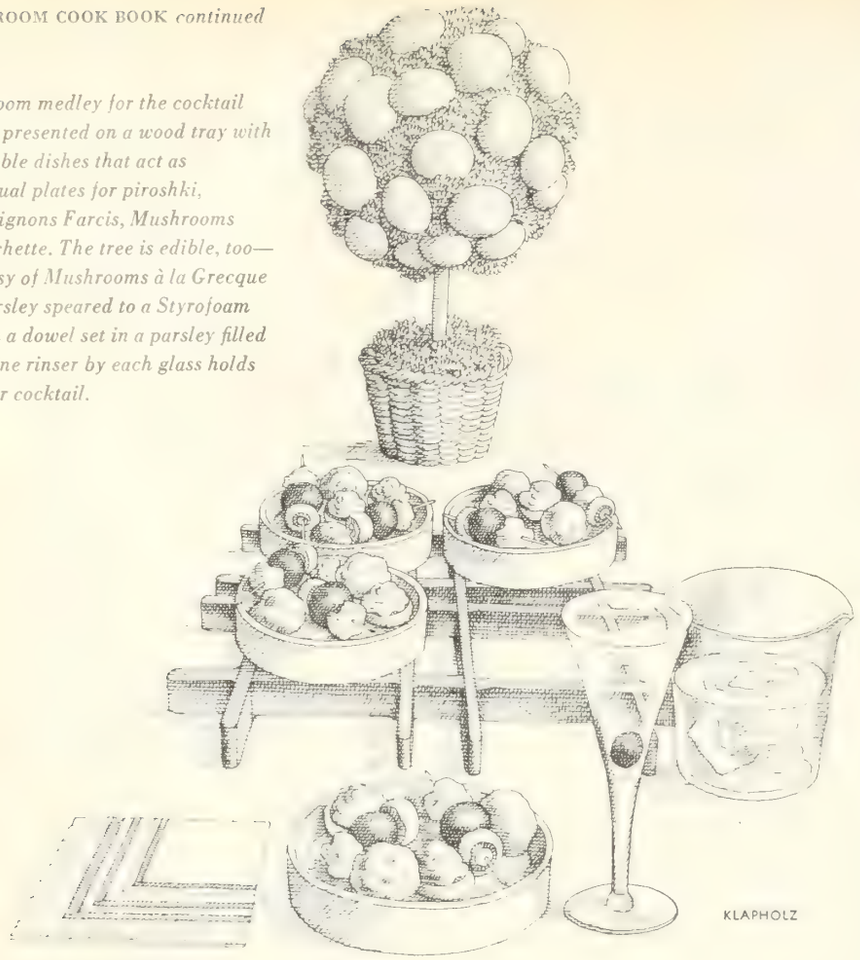
Meanwhile, wash and dry the mushrooms and cut off tough stem ends. Chop. Melt the 2 tablespoons butter in a skillet, add the onion and sauté 1 minute. Add the chopped mushrooms, salt, pepper, and paprika, and sauté 4 minutes. Remove from heat and drain off any juices. Add the dill and sour cream. Mix well and cool.

Punch down the risen dough. Remove to a floured board and knead. Pinch off small pieces, large enough to flatten into a thin 3" circle. Place 1 teaspoon mushroom filling in the center of each. Bring up dough around filling and close securely, shaping into a smooth round. Place on a greased cookie sheet and let rise for 15 minutes in a warm place. Brush with beaten egg yolk. Bake in a 400° oven for about 20 minutes, until done. Makes about 35 piroshki.

Champignons Farcis

1 pound extra-large fresh mushrooms
¼ cup butter
Butter
½ cup minced clams, drained
Salt, pepper, freshly ground nutmeg to taste
1 tablespoon chopped fresh parsley

Wash and dry the mushrooms. Remove stems and mince them finely. Sauté the onion in ¼ cup butter until tender. Add the minced mushroom stems and simmer, stirring often, for 4 minutes. Add the minced clams, salt, pepper, nutmeg, and parsley. Mix well and let cool. Brush the mushroom caps with melted butter and arrange on a shallow dish. Place in a 350° oven for 5 minutes. Fill the caps with the mushroom-clam mixture, sprinkle the tops with a little melted butter and brown in the oven before serving. Serve hot. Serves 5–6.



Mushroom Caviar

½ cup chopped green onions, with tops
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup chopped mushrooms
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Salt, pepper to taste
¼ teaspoon cayenne powder
2 tablespoons chopped dill
½ cup sour cream
Tomato slices

Sauté the green onions in the butter for 1 minute. Add the mushrooms, lemon juice, salt, pepper, and cayenne. Sauté 4 minutes, stirring occasionally. Remove from the heat. Stir in the dill and sour cream. Serve garnished with tomato slices. Serves 2.

Mushrooms en Brochette

Dip whole oysters in grated Parmesan cheese and arrange on skewers alternately with whole washed mushroom caps and cherry tomatoes. Season with salt, pepper, and paprika. Grill about 5 minutes, turning once.

Mushroom medley for the cocktail hour is presented on a wood tray with removable dishes that act as individual plates for piroshki, Champignons Farcis, Mushrooms en Brochette. The tree is edible, too—a fantasy of Mushrooms à la Grecque and parsley speared to a Styrofoam base on a dowel set in a parsley filled pot. Wine rinser by each glass holds refill for cocktail.

Chinese Mushroom Floats

25 large fresh mushrooms
¼ pound shrimp, shelled and deveined
¼ pound cooked ham
5 water chestnuts
2 teaspoons chutney
1 teaspoon minced fresh ginger
½ teaspoon turmeric powder
1 tablespoon flour
½ cup chicken stock
2 tablespoons soy sauce

Remove the stems from the mushrooms. Wash and dry the caps and set aside. Grind the shrimp, ham, water chestnuts, chutney, and ginger. Add the turmeric powder and flour to the ground mixture. Mix well. Form into 1" balls. Arrange each on a mushroom cap. Place in a greased shallow baking dish. Pour in chicken stock and soy sauce. Bake in a 350° oven for 20 minutes. Remove from the liquid and serve warm. Serves 4–6.

Mushrooms à la Grecque

40 small mushrooms
6½ teaspoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon salt
⅓ cup olive oil
1 clove garlic, halved
⅛ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
1 bay leaf
⅛ teaspoon oregano

Wash and dry the mushrooms. Remove the stems. Cook the caps in boiling water to cover with ½ teaspoon lemon juice and ½ teaspoon salt for 5 minutes. Drain and cool. Combine with the remaining lemon juice and salt, oil, garlic, pepper, bay leaf, and oregano in a jar. Refrigerate, covered, at least 24 hours. Drain. Serves 8–10.

SOUPS

Polish Fresh Mushroom Soup

½ pound mushrooms
3 tablespoons butter
¼ teaspoon caraway seeds
½ teaspoon paprika
1 tablespoon flour
4 cups chicken stock
1 egg yolk
1 cup sour cream
2 tablespoons chopped fresh dill

Wash and dry the mushrooms. Cut off tough stem ends. Slice whole mushrooms and sauté in the butter with the caraway seeds and paprika for 1 minute. Sprinkle with the flour. Blend well. Add the chicken stock, a little at a time. Simmer, covered, 30 minutes. Meanwhile, whip the egg yolk with a fork until creamy. Add sour cream and dill, mixing well. Spoon into a soup tureen and pour hot soup slowly into it, stirring with a whisk to mix thoroughly. Serves 6.

Mushroom-Clam Soup

1 pound mushrooms
3 minced green onions, with tops
4 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons flour
4 cups clam juice
Salt, pepper to taste
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
1½ cups light cream

Wash and dry the mushrooms. Cut off tough stem ends and slice from the round sides through the stems. Set aside. Sauté the onion in the butter for 2 minutes. Add the mushrooms and sauté 4 minutes. Stir in the flour; mix well. Add the clam juice, 1 cup at a time, stirring well after each addition. Add the salt, pepper, and nutmeg. Simmer, uncovered, 5 minutes. Add the cream and heat through. Serves 6.

Cream of Pea and Mushroom Potage

½ pound fresh mushrooms
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup chicken stock
½ teaspoon chervil
2½ cups frozen peas
½ teaspoon salt
1 quart milk
2 slices onion
2 whole cloves
1 small bay leaf
1 tablespoon chopped parsley

Wash and dry the mushrooms and cut off tough stem ends. Slice. Melt the butter in a saucepan. Add the mushrooms and sauté 1 minute. Stir in the flour; mix smooth. Add the chicken stock and chervil. Simmer, covered, 20 minutes.

Cook peas in ½ cup water, seasoned with the salt, until tender. Rub through a sieve. Add purée to mushroom mixture.

Combine the milk, onion, cloves, bay leaf, and parsley in a saucepan. Scald. Strain and add liquid to the soup. Mix well. Serves 6–8.

Chinese Black Mushroom Soup

12 medium-size dried black mushrooms
2 quarts beef stock
1 cup minced celery
½ cup bamboo shoots
8 water chestnuts, chopped
2 tablespoons soy sauce
Salt, white pepper to taste

Soak the mushrooms in lukewarm water to cover for 20 minutes. Drain, retaining the liquid. Slice thickly.

Heat beef stock to boiling point. Add the mushrooms with the liquid, celery, bamboo shoots, and water chestnuts. Lower the heat and simmer, covered, for 30 minutes. Add the soy sauce, salt, and white pepper and remove from the heat. Serves 8–10.

Russian Barley and Mushroom Soup

3 ounces dried mushrooms
½ cup chopped onions
1 leek, chopped
3 tablespoons butter
1 cup diced carrots
⅓ cup pearl barley
1 teaspoon salt
4 peppercorns
2 cups diced potatoes
2 bay leaves
1 cup sour cream
Chopped fresh dill

Soak the mushrooms in lukewarm water to cover for 20 minutes. Drain, pressing to extract water. Slice mushrooms. Sauté the onion and leek in the butter in a large saucepan until tender. Add the carrots, barley, salt, peppercorns, and 2 quarts water. Bring to a boil. Lower the heat and simmer, covered, for 1 hour. Add the potatoes, bay leaves, and mushrooms. Continue to simmer until the vegetables are tender, about 45 minutes. Mix in the sour cream just before serving. Garnish with chopped dill. Serves 10–12.

SALADS

Czech Mushroom Salad

10-ounce package frozen cauliflower
1½ cups diced, cooked carrots
½ pound mushrooms
1 tablespoon vinegar
¼ teaspoon allspice
1 tablespoon sugar
1 small bay leaf
½ cup sour cream
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
1 teaspoon prepared mustard

Cook cauliflower and drain. Cut into bite-size pieces. Mix with carrots and set aside to cool.

Wash and dry the mushrooms. Cut off tough stem ends; slice. Bring ½ cup water, the vinegar, allspice, sugar, and bay leaf to a boil. Add the sliced mushrooms; simmer 4 minutes. Drain and add to cauliflower and carrots. Combine sour cream, parsley, and mustard; mix well. Stir into vegetables. Chill. Serves 6.

Watercress-Mushroom Salad

2 cups washed watercress
2 cups sliced mushrooms
½ cup sliced radishes
⅓ cup French dressing

Arrange watercress in the center of a plate. Cover with mushrooms and radishes, mixed together. Pour dressing over vegetables. Serves 6.

French Mushroom Salad

½ pound mushrooms
2 tablespoons minced fresh chives
3 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley
½ cup olive oil
2 tablespoons tarragon vinegar
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
¼ teaspoon paprika
Salt, freshly ground pepper to taste

Wash and dry mushrooms. Cut off tough stem ends. Slice thickly. Mix with chives and parsley in a bowl. Combine remaining ingredients; mix well. Pour over mushrooms. Marinate 1 hour. Serves 4.

Mushroom-Vegetable Salad

½ pound mushrooms
½ cup vegetable oil
3 tablespoons tarragon vinegar
¾ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon minced fresh ginger
1 cup raw spinach leaves, well washed and drained
2 cups lettuce chunks, washed and drained
4 green onions, minced
4 stalks celery, cut in 2" lengths
1 green pepper, cubed
½ cup raw carrot rings
3 hard-cooked eggs, shelled and sliced

Wash and dry mushrooms. Cut off tough stem ends. Slice from the round sides through the stems. Set aside. Combine the oil, vinegar, salt, pepper, and ginger in a large salad bowl. Add the mushrooms, spinach, lettuce, onions, celery, green pepper, carrot, and eggs. Toss lightly. Serves 8–10.

SAUCES AND STUFFINGS

Italian Dried Mushroom Sauce

1 ounce dried mushrooms
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 medium onion, minced
1 clove garlic, crushed
3 tablespoons tomato paste
1 cup cooked tomatoes
1 cup white wine
1 cup bread cubes
½ teaspoon salt
Freshly ground pepper
¼ teaspoon marjoram
3 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley

Soak the mushrooms in lukewarm water to cover for 20 minutes. Drain, press to extract water, and chop.

Heat the oil in a saucepan. Sauté the onion and garlic for 1 minute. Add the tomato paste, tomatoes, white wine, bread cubes, salt, pepper, and marjoram. Simmer, covered, for 10 minutes, until sauce is thick. Add the mushrooms and simmer 5 minutes. Stir in the parsley. Makes 2 cups. Serve with pasta, ham, or toast points.

Duxelles

1 pound fresh mushrooms
3 tablespoons minced onions
3 tablespoons minced shallots
4 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons oil
Salt, pepper to taste
1 teaspoon chopped fresh parsley

Wash and dry the mushrooms and cut off tough stem ends. Chop mushrooms as fine as possible. Press in a cloth to remove any moisture. Sauté the onions and shallots in the butter and oil over a high flame for 1 minute, stirring constantly. Add the minced mushrooms and lower the flame. Sauté over low heat until all the moisture has evaporated and the mixture is quite dark. This may take an hour or more. Season with salt and pepper and mix in the parsley. Makes 2 cups.

Note: This classic mushroom mixture [illegible] and may be used in many interesting ways. Here are some suggestions:

(1) Use as a filling for mushroom caps.
(2) Mix with sour cream and serve on bread slices that have been sautéed in butter.
(3) Moisten with wine and use as a garnish for meats.
(4) Use to stuff vegetables such as tomatoes and onions.
(5) Combine with wine and brown sauce and use on poultry, meat, pasta, and egg dishes.
(6) Mix with herb-flavored bread crumbs and use as a stuffing for chicken or game.
(7) Combine with white sauce, chopped meat, or riced potatoes to make croquettes.

Mushroom-Rice Stuffing

¼ pound mushrooms
2 tablespoons butter
1 chopped medium onion
1 tablespoon red wine
Salt, pepper to taste
6 slices bacon, cooked, drained, and crumbled
½ cup chopped pecans
2 tablespoons chopped dill
2 cups cooked rice

Wash and dry mushrooms. Cut off tough stem ends. Slice.

Melt the butter in a skillet. Add the onion and sauté until tender. Add the mushrooms, wine, salt, and pepper. Sauté 5 minutes. Add the bacon, pecans, dill, and rice. Mix well. Use to fill tomatoes, poultry, eggplant, rolled meat slices, or fish. Makes 4 cups.

Mushrooms sliced through cap and stem [illegible] decoration for summer entrée of chicken breasts chaudfroid and the mainstay of the Watercress-Mushroom Salad. Table setting in green, white, and red takes its colors from salad ingredients, as does garnish for chicken.

Mushroom-Bread Stuffing

4 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 medium onion, minced
⅓ cup minced green pepper
2 cups sliced mushrooms
2 cups bread cubes
½ pound shrimp, chopped, cleaned, and cooked
2 tablespoons chopped pine nuts
2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley

Melt the butter in a large skillet. Add the lemon juice, onion, and green pepper, and sauté 1 minute. Add the mushrooms and bread cubes. Sauté 4 minutes, turning frequently. Add the remaining ingredients and cook, stirring, 1 more minute. Makes 5 cups. This is an excellent stuffing for poultry.

Cèpes-Curry Sauce

1 ounce dried cèpes
⅓ cup minced onion
4 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon curry powder
¼ teaspoon turmeric powder
⅛ teaspoon chili powder
1 tomato, peeled and chopped
2 tablespoons flour
1½ cups light cream
½ teaspoon salt
Freshly ground pepper to taste
Freshly ground nutmeg to taste

Soak cèpes in lukewarm water to cover for 20 minutes. Drain, reserving the liquid. Press out remaining water and chop. Sauté the onion in 2 tablespoons butter in a saucepan until tender. Add the curry, turmeric, and chili powder. Simmer, stirring often, 3 minutes. Add tomato, cèpes, and liquid. Simmer 4 minutes. Set aside.

Melt the remaining butter in another saucepan. Blend in the flour. Slowly add the cream. Cook slowly, stirring often, until sauce is thick and creamy. Season with the salt, pepper, and nutmeg. Add to the curry-cèpes mixture. Heat through. Makes about 1⅔ cups sauce. Serve over cold roast beef, rice, or poached eggs.

Mushroom-Madeira Sauce

½ pound mushrooms
2 tablespoons butter
Salt, pepper to taste
½ cup Madeira wine
1 cup meat stock
2 egg yolks, well-beaten
1 tablespoon chopped chives

Wash and dry the mushrooms. Remove stems and cut caps into thick slices. Melt the butter in a skillet. Add the mushrooms, salt, and pepper. Sauté 1 minute. Add the wine and cook 3 minutes. Add the stock and simmer, covered, 5 minutes. Remove from the heat. Stir in the egg yolks and chives. Makes 2 cups. Serve with steak, chops, meat patties, poultry, or cold roast meat.

Mushroom Spaghetti Sauce

¼ cup olive oil
2 medium onions, chopped
2 cloves garlic, crushed
1 cup chopped green pepper
½ teaspoon oregano
1 teaspoon paprika
⅓ cup tomato paste
2 cups white wine
2 teaspoons capers
2 cups sliced mushrooms

Heat the oil in a skillet. Add the onions and garlic and sauté until tender. Add the remaining ingredients, except the mushrooms. Cook slowly, covered, 15 minutes. Add the sliced mushrooms. Cook 5 minutes. Makes 3 cups.

VEGETABLE AND GRAIN DISHES

Baked Artichokes with Mushrooms

½ pound mushrooms
2 tablespoons white wine
2 7-ounce cans artichoke hearts, drained
6 slices bacon, cooked, drained, and crumbled
2 8-ounce cans tomato sauce
2 tablespoons pine nuts
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

Wash and dry the mushrooms. Cut tough ends from stems. Remove stems; slice and set aside.

Sprinkle a buttered, shallow baking dish with the white wine. Arrange the mushroom caps and artichoke hearts alternately in the dish. Sprinkle with the crumbled bacon. Combine sliced stems, tomato sauce, and pine nuts; mix well. Pour over the vegetables. Sprinkle with the parsley and cheese. Bake in a 350° oven for 30 minutes. Serves 4.

German Mushrooms with Sour Cream

1 pound mushrooms
3 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon onion salt
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons white wine
2 tablespoons sherry
¾ cup sour cream
1 tablespoon minced chives
3 tablespoons chopped cucumber

Wash and dry the mushrooms. Remove caps (reserve stems for another dish). Sauté caps in the butter for 4 minutes. Add the salts, pepper, white wine, and sherry. Sauté 1 minute. Stir in the cream, chives, and cucumber. Heat through. Serve on toast points, if desired. Serves 4–6.

Cèpes à la Bordelaise

10-ounce can cèpes
5 tablespoons olive oil
1 clove garlic, crushed
1 tablespoon chopped fresh parsley
1 tablespoon chopped shallots
Salt, freshly ground pepper

Wash the cèpes in cold water, drain, and wipe dry. Slice thickly. Heat the oil in a skillet. Fry cèpes 2 minutes on each side. Drain. Mix at once with the garlic, parsley, shallots, ¼ teaspoon salt, and pepper to taste. Serves 4.

H&G's REBUS RECIPE

Mushroom-Clam Stuffing

Potato-Mushroom Croquettes

1 pound potatoes, peeled and quartered
3 eggs
3 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon salt
Freshly ground pepper to taste
Freshly ground nutmeg to taste
3 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
1 cup duxelles (see recipe on page 135)
1–2 teaspoons oil
Bread crumbs
Fat for frying

Cook potatoes in salted water until tender. Drain. Place in a 350° oven for about 1 minute to remove excess moisture. Put through a potato ricer while still hot. Beat one of the eggs. Add butter, salt, pepper, nutmeg, beaten egg, grated cheese, and duxelles to the riced potatoes. Combine until ingredients are well blended. Let cool slightly. Shape into cylinders about 1" by 2½". Refrigerate for 30 minutes. Beat 2 remaining eggs well and combine with the oil. Dip each croquette into this mixture and then roll in bread crumbs, covering well. Refrigerate 15 minutes. Heat fat to 375° and fry croquettes, a few at a time, until golden brown, 3–5 minutes. Drain on absorbent paper. Serves 6.

Mushroom Fritters

1¼ cups flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
⅛ teaspoon paprika
3 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons chopped chives
½ cup (about) milk
1 egg, well-beaten
¼ pound mushrooms
3 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon sherry
Fat for deep frying

Sift the flour, salt, and baking powder into a bowl. Add the paprika, cheese, and chives. Combine the milk and egg. Add liquid to the dry mixture a little at a time, stirring well after each addition.

Wash and dry the mushrooms. Trim off tough stem ends and cut mushrooms into small pieces. Heat the butter and sherry in a skillet. Add mushrooms and sauté 4–5 minutes, until tender. Drain and add to flour mixture. Mix well. Add more milk, if necessary; the dough should be stiff. Drop by spoonfuls into hot 375° fat. Cook 4–6 minutes, until golden. Drain and serve at once. Serves 6.

Lithuanian Sauerkraut with Mushrooms

1 ounce dried mushrooms
4 slices bacon, chopped
1 medium onion, chopped
1 quart bulk sauerkraut, drained
1 large apple, chopped
¼ teaspoon salt
Freshly grated pepper to taste
⅛ teaspoon allspice
12-ounce can or bottle beer

Soak the mushrooms in lukewarm water to cover for 20 minutes. Drain. Press to extract water and chop. Sauté the bacon and onion until the onion is tender. Drain off the fat. Mix with the sauerkraut, apple, salt, pepper, allspice, and mushrooms. Spoon into a shallow baking dish. Add the beer. Bake, covered, in a 350° oven for 1 hour. Serves 6.

Swiss Chanterelles with Sour Cream Sauce

4-ounce can chanterelles
5–6 tablespoons butter
2 slices bread, halved and crusts removed
1 tablespoon chopped shallots
¼ teaspoon salt
Freshly ground pepper to taste
Freshly ground nutmeg to taste
2 tablespoons flour
½ cup sour cream
2 tablespoons grated Swiss cheese

Drain and slice chanterelles. Melt 4 tablespoons of the butter and sauté the bread on both sides. Remove to a buttered shallow baking dish. Add the remaining butter to the pan and sauté the shallots until tender. Add the chanterelles and sauté 4 minutes. Remove with a slotted spoon and spread over the bread. Sprinkle with salt, pepper, and nutmeg. Stir the flour into butter remaining in pan. Mix with a wire whisk to blend. Add the sour cream, mix well, and heat, stirring constantly, until sauce is thick. Pour over the chanterelles. Sprinkle with the cheese. Place in a 375° oven for a few minutes, until the cheese is melted. Serves 2.

Barley-Mushroom Casserole

1 ounce dried mushrooms
1 cup pearl barley, washed
Salt, freshly ground pepper
½ teaspoon caraway seeds
3 tablespoons butter
2 cloves garlic, crushed
2 tablespoons chopped fresh dill or parsley

Soak the mushrooms in lukewarm water to cover for 20 minutes. Drain; press water out. Chop.

Put the barley in 3 cups boiling water seasoned with ½ teaspoon salt and the caraway seeds. Cook, covered, until barley is tender and the liquid has been absorbed, about 40 minutes. Melt the butter in a skillet, add the garlic, ½ teaspoon salt, pepper to taste, and mushrooms, and sauté 4 minutes. Mix into barley. Spoon into a well-buttered shallow baking dish. Sprinkle dill or parsley over the top. Bake in a 350° oven for 20 minutes. Serves 4.

Alsatian Chanterelles à la Cr[illegible]

2 tablespoons chopped onion
2 tablespoons butter
4-ounce can chanterelles, drained and chopped
½ teaspoon salt
Freshly ground pepper to taste
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup heavy cream
Juice of 1 lemon
Toast points
Chopped parsley (optional)

Sauté the onion in the butter until tender. Add the chanterelles, salt, and pepper and sauté 4 minutes. Stir in the flour and blend well. Slowly add the cream and heat slowly, stirring often, until the sauce is thick. Add the lemon juice and cook 1 minute. Spoon over toast points and garnish with chopped parsley, if desired. Serves 2.

MAIN DISHES

Burmese Mushroom Curry

1 pound mushrooms
4 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 cup chopped onions
2 cloves garlic, crushed
2 teaspoons turmeric powder
2 teaspoons chili powder
Salt to taste
1 cup cleaned, minced raw shrimp
2 teaspoons anchovy paste
1 cup chicken stock
4 tablespoons lime juice

Wash and dry the mushrooms and trim off tough stem ends. Halve small mushrooms; quarter large ones. Set aside. Heat the oil in a skillet. Add the onion and garlic and sauté until tender. Add the turmeric, chili powder, and salt. Fry, mixing constantly, 1 minute. Add the mushrooms, shrimp, anchovy paste, and chicken stock. Simmer, covered, for 5 minutes. Add the lime juice and stir well. Serves 4.

Burmese Mushroom Curry suggests a party buffet table with an Eastern mien. Curry in a rice ring appears on a metal tray. Pappadams (crisp wafers) are piled in a metal dish, small [illegible] condiments (raisins, chutney, coconut) are colorfully interspersed with [illegible] heads on a tiered [illegible]. Even the napkin takes the lotus position.

Mushroom Risotto

7 tablespoons butter
1 minced medium onion
1 cup rice
Salt, pepper to taste
¼ teaspoon saffron
2 chicken bouillon cubes
2 tablespoons sherry
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 cups sliced mushrooms
⅓ cup chopped pine nuts
4 tablespoons chopped parsley
3 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

Melt 4 tablespoons butter in a skillet. Add the onion and sauté until tender. Add the rice and sauté, stirring often, until it becomes translucent, about 5 minutes. Add the salt, pepper, saffron, bouillon cubes, and 2 cups hot water. Simmer, covered, until liquid has been absorbed and rice is tender, about 35 minutes.

Meanwhile, melt the remaining butter in another skillet. Add the sherry, lemon juice, and mushrooms. Sauté until tender, about 4 minutes. Add with pan juices to the cooked rice. Stir in the pine nuts, parsley, and grated cheese. Mix well. Serves 6.

Italian Baked Mushrooms

2 pounds extra-large fresh mushrooms
½ pound ground beef
3 tablespoons chopped parsley
1 clove garlic, crushed
¾ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon black pepper
3 tablespoons tomato sauce
⅓ cup bread crumbs
1 egg, slightly beaten
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons butter, melted

Wash and dry the mushrooms. Remove stems and set aside. Sauté the beef in its own fat, separating meat with a fork, until the redness is gone. Pour off any fat. Add remaining ingredients, except the butter. Mix well. Spoon meat mixture into the caps. Pour butter into a shallow baking dish. Arrange caps in the dish. Cook in a 400° oven for 25 minutes. Brush sides of mushrooms with butter drippings while baking. Serves 6–8.

Skewered Korean Beef with Mushrooms

2 pounds beef sirloin, cut in 1" cubes
6 tablespoons soy sauce
3 tablespoons sesame oil
½ teaspoon minced fresh ginger
4 green onions, minced
1 clove garlic, crushed
1 tablespoon sugar
¼ teaspoon black pepper
1 teaspoon sesame seeds
1 pound mushrooms

Place meat cubes in a bowl with the soy sauce, sesame oil, ginger, onions, garlic, sugar, pepper, and sesame seeds. Marinate 1 hour, turning occasionally.

Wash and dry the mushrooms. Cut off tough stem ends. Remove meat cubes from marinade and string on skewers alternately with the mushrooms. Broil, basting with marinade, until the desired degree of doneness, not more than 5 minutes. Serves 6.

Austrian Mushroom Soufflé

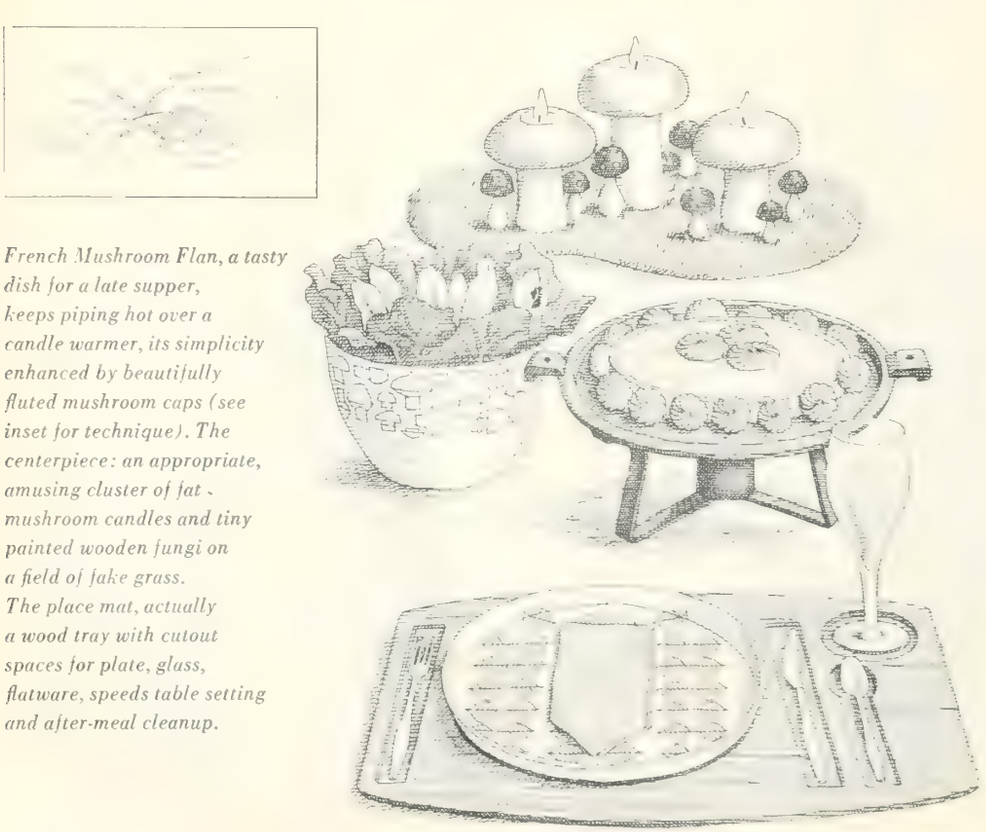
1 pound mushrooms
7 tablespoons butter
1 medium onion, minced
Juice of ½ lemon
2 tablespoons flour
1½ cups light cream
Salt, pepper to taste
Dash freshly ground nutmeg
4 eggs, separated
3 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley
3 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

Wash and dry the mushrooms and cut off the tough stem ends. Slice. Melt 5 tablespoons butter in a skillet. Add the onion and lemon juice. Sauté until tender. Add the mushrooms. Cook, covered, 3 minutes.

Melt the remaining butter in a saucepan and mix in the flour until smooth. Add a little cream. Cook until smooth. Add the remaining cream, salt, pepper, and nutmeg. Cook, stirring constantly, until the sauce is smooth and thick. Remove from the heat. Beat the egg yolks until creamy. Add to the sauce with the parsley, cheese, and mushrooms. Mix well. Beat the egg whites stiffly and fold into the mushroom mixture. Pour into a buttered soufflé dish. Cook in a 400° oven for 30 minutes. Serve at once. Serves 6.

Sardinian Eggs with Mushrooms

½ pound mushrooms
3 tablespoons olive oil
7-ounce can artichoke hearts, drained and cubed
4 tablespoons tomato paste
¾ cup white wine
2 tablespoons chopped fresh chives
Freshly ground nutmeg to taste
Salt, pepper to taste
4 eggs
1 tablespoon grated Parmesan cheese
3 strips bacon, cooked, drained and crumbled



Wash and dry the mushrooms. Cut off tough stem ends. Slice thickly. Heat the oil in a skillet. Add the mushrooms and sauté 1 minute. Add the artichoke hearts, tomato paste, white wine, chives, nutmeg, salt, and pepper. Cook, covered, 3 minutes. Make 4 indentations in mixture with a tablespoon. Break an egg into each indentation. Cook slowly, covered, until desired degree of doneness. Sprinkle with grated cheese and crumbled bacon. Serves 4.

French Mushroom Flan

1 stick pie-crust mix
20 medium mushrooms
5 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon sherry
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Freshly ground nutmeg to taste
2 tablespoons minced onion
2 tablespoons chopped carrot
2 tablespoons minced celery
3 tablespoons flour
Salt, pepper to taste
2½ cups hot milk
½ teaspoon turmeric powder
¼ teaspoon paprika
1 pound shrimp, cooked and cleaned
3 eggs, well beaten

Use the mix to prepare and bake a 10" pie shell. Remove stems from the mushrooms. Wash and dry the caps. Melt 2 tablespoons butter in a skillet. Add the sherry, lemon juice, and mushroom caps. Sauté 4 minutes, turning once. Drain. Sprinkle with nutmeg and set aside.

Melt the remaining 3 tablespoons butter in a saucepan and sauté the onion, carrot, and celery 1 minute. Blend in flour, salt, and pepper. Add the milk, a little at a time, stirring until smooth. Simmer 15 minutes, stirring often. Remove and discard vegetables. Add the turmeric powder, paprika, shrimp, and all but three mushroom caps. Cook slowly 1 minute. Remove from the heat. Mix a little of the sauce mixture with the eggs. Add to the remaining sauce. Pour carefully into the pie shell and garnish with the three remaining caps. Bake in a 450° oven about 25 minutes, until a knife inserted in the center comes out clean. Cool about 10 minutes before serving. Cut into wedges. Serves 6.

French Mushroom Flan, a tasty dish for a late supper, keeps piping hot over a candle warmer, its simplicity enhanced by beautifully fluted mushroom caps (see inset for technique). The centerpiece: an appropriate, amusing cluster of fat mushroom candles and tiny painted wooden fungi on a field of fake grass. The place mat, actually a wood tray with cutout spaces for plate, glass, flatware, speeds table setting and after-meal cleanup.

long straws into the glasses, serve on coasters, and supply paper napkins to protect the glasses from the warmth of the hand.

Blackstone Cooler
Decorate a tall Collins glass with lemon peel as for a Horse's Neck. Put in 3 or 4 ice cubes and 3 ounces of Jamaica rum, and fill with chilled charged water. Stir quickly with a long spoon and serve.

Rum Sangaree
Put 3 ounces of dark rum into an 8-ounce glass, add a teaspoon or two of simple syrup to taste, and fill with ice water. Stir to mix, and dust the top with nutmeg.

Planter's Punch
The old rule for this famous beverage was a 1-2-3-4 formula: 1 sour (lemon or lime), 2 sweet (sugar), 3 strong (rum), and 4 weak (ice and water). Today a Planter's Punch is more apt to be made with 1 sweet and 2 sour. Into a shaker put 1 ounce of simple syrup, 2 ounces of lemon or lime juice, 3 ounces of Jamaica or other dark rum, 3 dashes of Angostura bitters, and a cup of crushed ice. Shake vigorously and pour, without straining, into a tall highball glass. Add more crushed ice to nearly fill the glass, fill up with chilled charged water, and stir with a bar spoon until the glass begins to frost. Decorate with fruit, if you like, and serve with straws.

Cuba Libre
Perhaps the name of this should be changed to "Puerto Rico Libre," as that's where the bulk of our rum comes from. Into a tall Collins glass squeeze the juice of a small lime and drop in half the shell. Add 3 ounces of light rum (white or gold label), 3 or 4 ice cubes, and fill up with Coca-Cola. Stir lightly and serve.

Java Libre
Put 3 ounces of Jamaica rum into a tall highball glass, add 3 or 4 ice cubes, and fill up with strong cold coffee. Stir to mix, and serve with a float of heavy cream if desired.

Rum Swizzle
The original swizzle stick was a thin stick of sweet wood about a foot long, with the bark removed and the end split lengthwise about an inch into the wood, then opened out to form four blades. This was agitated between the hands to mix the drink. Nowadays swizzle sticks are manufactured of metal, wood, plastic, or glass, but they do the same job. Pre-chill small highball glasses in the freezer or refrigerator. Fill a large glass or silver pitcher two-thirds full of finely crushed ice, and put into it 1 ounce of simple syrup, orgeat, or falernum, 2 ounces of lime juice, 8 ounces of your favorite light rum, and 4 dashes of Angostura bitters. Churn the pitcher with the swizzle stick until it starts to frost, then pour into the well-chilled glasses. Decorate with a sprig of mint.

Rum Punch
The original rum punch was a mixture of lemon or lime juice and rum, devised as a means of getting sailors to take the fruit juice which was a specific against scurvy. Today's punches are a far cry from that simple and ardent libation, and may contain any number of fruit juices, singly or in combination, along with rum. In addition to lemon and lime, they may include coconut milk, pineapple, guava, tamarind, cherry, apricot, orange, mango, papaya, and even apple juice. The following recipe is a good one and will give you the general idea, but it's fun to experiment with other combinations.

For each glass of Rum Punch, put the following ingredients into a blender or drink mixer. (If neither blender nor mixer is available, put them into a shaker or pitcher where they may be well mixed.)

2 ounces orange juice (unsweetened)
2 ounces pineapple juice (unsweetened)
2 ounces papaya nectar
1 ounce lime juice (unsweetened)

Mix thoroughly and chill. At drinking time, put several ice cubes into a tall 14-ounce glass, add 2 ounces of gold label rum, and the chilled fruit juices. Stir to mix, and serve with a sprig of mint or a garnish of appropriate fruit.

In this recipe the papaya nectar contains sufficient sugar to balance the other juices, as do other tinned "nectars." Be sure to read the label on whatever juice you are using or better yet, taste the fruit juice mixture. A Rum Punch should never be too sweet, and one pre-sweetened ingredient is usually enough. If frozen concentrated juices are to be used, reconstitute them before mixing, otherwise the drink will turn out thick and syrupy.

cocktail hors d'oeuvre. The sauce for the lobster was ladled from another shell, an abalone. My sister-in-law has four of these giant clams —she ought to be able to set an impressive seafood buffet.

Don says he is used to tossed salad, but it wasn't until we went to the Lamberts' that we had whirling salad. All fun aside, Jane Lambert's new self-standing salad bowl that revolves on a tripod is a wonderful convenience, set up near a barbecue or a crowded buffet table. The generously proportioned hardwood bowl revolves on smooth ball bearings set into a three-legged stand that is almost table-height. The serving fork and spoon depend from the tripod. The bowl can have a life of its own, too, of course, when the stand is not needed. Jane said she bought it last spring from Abraham & Straus in Brooklyn.

Last time we drove through North Conway, N. H., I stopped at Yield House and bought a nifty set of food covers to use on our outdoor table near the pool. Made of wire screening, oval in shape, they come three to a set—large, medium, and small, and in red, blue, or green. Sturdy and washable, they nest conveniently for storage.

In our part of the country, there is a craze for old-fashioned oil lamps. The twentieth-century refinement, however, seems to be the use of scented oil in them. I fill mine with a citronella-treated oil and burn them when we eat out-of-doors. A neighbor of ours has a whole set of very small ones; she puts one at each individual place to give a nice flattering light and informal charm to an outdoor supper table.

Don loves frosted drinks, but rarely has enough patience to go through the ritual of cracking the ice and waiting for the glasses to frost. This summer I found an answer for him at Hammacher Schlemmer: a "Chiller-Diller." A wondrous gadget developed by Invento, it provides instant frosting. You gently press an upended glass against the small "machine" and presto—a beautifully iced glass, as cold to the eye as to the touch. Just occurred to me what a marvelous birthday present one would be for Don's partner—another man who always seems to be in a hurry.

The asparagus was exceptionally wonderful this year. We consumed all we grew in our own patch, then bought more at a neighboring farm. I decided to freeze some, too, and when I went to the store to buy more freezing containers, I was delighted to find that the new Freezettes, the plastic food containers I always use for the freezer, are heavier and boilable. This means a container straight from the freezer can be put into a pan of boiling water to thaw and/or cook its contents in one operation. Freezettes are very modestly priced and come in round or square shapes, each with a lid, in quart and pint sizes.

Found a nifty new product especially made for stainless steel which combines cleaning and polishing in one operation. It has transformed our kitchen sink and laundry tubs to a state of glory. You just spray Sheila-Shine on sparingly from its aerosol can, then wipe off the excess with a clean dry cloth. The steel doesn't even have to be polished afterward and the cleaner leaves a protective film that keeps the metal from water-spotting quite so much. While NOT to be used on cooking utensils, Sheila-Shine is fine for large steel areas: counters, back splashes, stoves, and refrigerators.

Tom and I invested in a bathroom scale to encourage one another in our campaign to lose a few pounds each. Just for fun, I picked one in an oval shape, although I could have had the same make—Continental—in a square or round, and in a choice of seven different colors. The scale has a lifting handle, too, and altogether should be a big help in keeping us on the straight and narrow.

Anyone who has ever had the frustrating experience of trying to pull off a paper towel with dripping wet hands only to have the whole roll fall out of its holder and unroll on the floor should appreciate the new automatic cordless electric towel dispenser. We have just installed one over our sink and the whole family is entranced. You just touch a button at the end of the dispenser and instantly it unrolls a towel. The roll can't fall out because the Towel-O-Matic holder has a bar that goes all the way through it. Since the roller is powered by two flashlight batteries, there is no danger in pressing the button with wet hands.

As we're all wearing our wash-and-wear clothes these days, I have been reviewing some of my drying methods. With most of these fabrics you get the best results by hanging them up over a sink or tub dripping wet. But sometimes I need a garment quickly and can't wait for it to drip dry. In that case, I spread it out wet on a thick bath towel, cover it with another, then roll and squeeze the towels. After it has been rolled up for a few minutes, I hang it on a good shaped hanger and smooth with my hands. This takes half as long as the drip method.

A further note about hangers: it is absolutely essential to have good ones to dry wash-and-wear fabrics properly. An ordinary wire or plastic hanger often leaves a high ridge on the top of the shoulders of a shirt or dress. I have had the best results with the kind of sculptured wood hanger you find in closet shops, specifically made for a man's jacket. We reserve four for the purpose of drip drying, and I have treated each of them with a coat of clear acrylic sealer to protect the wood from dampness.

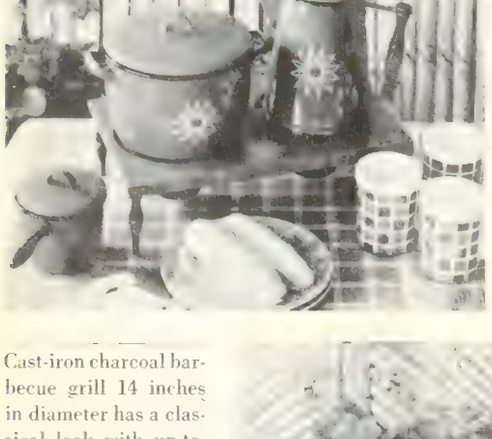
PICNIC EQUIPMENT: FAIR-WEATHER FRIENDS

The sky's the limit these days for the ambitious outdoor cook. Given the marvelous array of grills, cookware, and utensils, you can prepare dozens of delectables that used to be possible only in the kitchen. Here is a harvest of new conveniences for outdoor meals in the garden, on the terrace, or beside the pool, the lake, or the sea. There is equipment to keep food hot or cold, and to help you cook and serve with greater ease than ever before. Some of the utensils and cookers are handsome new models of old classics; others are built to eliminate such familiar picnic nuisances as sand blowing onto the grilling food or grease fires raging in the charcoal.

Skewer set with a l tomless tray that h slots to hold skew just the way you tu them assures well-c trolled brochette co ing. You can use it top of any grill y choose. Shish-Ka-T der by Desco. $4.

Insulated plastic portion-sized containers with screw tops keep salads, cottage cheese, desserts cold for hours. Snak Jar by Thermos, $1.29. Polka-dot paper plates, House of Lord.



HERMANN

Wheel-about charcoal grill of rustproof cast aluminum performs yeoman's service with its ample 14-by-22-inch surface for barbecuing plus a deep, vented covering hood that enables you to smoke-cook roasts and turkeys. Enormously useful rubbed oak work table is cutting board that can lift off to become serving tray. Range-Al by Char-Broil, $29.95.

Vertical charcoal cook er, 12 inches high, ha upright fire box, an foods are grilled on hanging grill rack o one side. Grease drip into pan below instea of on charcoal, elim nating smoke, flare-up Top surface can b used for skillet, coffe pot. Verti-Grill b Williams Cutlery, $12 Ice bucket by Thermos

Battery of porcelainized enameled steel cookware comes in four strong colors, each piece with its own heat stand plus a can of Sterno. You can buy separately this two-burner Sterno stove. Country Cookery by Sterno. Casserole, $7.48: percolator, $7.98; sauce server, $3.98; stove, $8.98.

Deep platter of heavy aluminum in which you can bake or cook over a direct flame, and then set up to use as a warmer: the platter will nest in its wooden holder over a candle. Sizzler set by Gladmark. $14.95.

Cast-iron charcoal barbecue grill 14 inches in diameter has a classical look with up-to-date conveniences: flat-top grate with concave bottom to channel melted fats to the side, raised edge on grate to keep grease from running over. Grill adjusts to three heights. Caribe by Char-Broil, $15.95.

Barbecue on fold-up legs has an 18-inch diameter turnable grill and a half-circle wind protector band that makes it especially good for beach cookery. Three chrome plated skewers that come with barbecue will stay put in slots on protector band. By Big Boy, $8.95. Beach bag by Jasper House.

In addition to the sedums and sempervivums, another S group—the saxifrages—lend themselves especially well to miniature container gardening, although some are of doubtful winter hardiness. But there is always refurbishing, replacing, and adding to do, so there is no need to overlook the saxifrages, especially for use in rock crevices (saxifrage means rock breaker). Furthermore, these three genera may be readily propagated in shallow trays, then divided simply by separating the new "offsets" for replanting as and when needed. Species of these three genera withstand sun, wind, and cold. All are of slowly spreading growth habit, readily separable, but forming mats when left alone. Their leaves have a special capacity to store reserves of food and moisture, which makes their care simple.

Most interesting of all, perhaps, is the way the foliage, color, and texture change according to the season and the stage of growth. Patience is desirable, since a year or two are required for the plants just to fill the container pockets with either enlarged foliage or additional rosettes. From, say, the third year on, the effectiveness of the whole arrangement will hit its stride. In spring and summer, the sempervivums ramify with new rosettes (these are the "hen and chickens" plants) into every unfilled crevice and pocket, piling one on top of another when there is no more room to expand laterally. The texture as well as the color of the rosettes is constantly changing as the plants grow. The sedums (they are all among the greatest rock perchers, with roots that seem able to find foothold and sustenance in a few grains of sand or some bits of rotted vegetation) offer not only handsome foliage tones, but often spectacular spring flowers, as do the saxifrages.

As summer wanes, growth slows, then stops. The colors change, with the greens becoming darker, some even turning bronze or brown, red, and rich deep purple. These somber tones intensify as winter approaches. Then the plants all become semi-dormant, and if they seem somewhat less attractive at this time of year, at least their guard is up, and neither cold nor the harsh winter sun can harm them. They may be left outdoors under ice and snow here in the elevation and latitude of the northern Berkshires without protection.

If you can bring your container gardens under the protection of a shed or porch roof, the plants must be watered occasionally—just enough to make up for the moisture they would receive in the open. Two or three waterings a winter should suffice.

Given a greenhouse or some comparable growing conditions indoors, a whole new set of changes takes place in the form, color, and texture of the plants. Weekly watering will keep them growing well in a sunny location. But they must be kept cool—especially at night—if they are to remain healthy. Excessive watering or heat will cause the sedums to "sit" no longer, but stretch and wander, with the chicks going unpleasantly astray.

Exposure to outdoor spring weather once more should be gradual for plants that have been in full growth inside. If you brought them indoors the end of November (a good time), mid-April is none too late to take them out again.

Preparation of the plants for use in rocks, in driftwood pockets, and in clay or ceramic containers requires attention to a few general rules. First, set small divisions of sedums or the chicks from sempervivums in a shallow container filled with not more than an inch and a half of light gritty loam, to develop, in about two weeks, a supply of compact roots. Such plantlets are now ready to be wedged into their planting niches. Those set in stone or hard wood should be watered daily in hot clear weather during the active growing season. In addition they should be fed weekly with soluble plant food, at about half the recommended standard strength. After a prolonged rainy spell, containers should be tilted to ensure proper drainage of excess water. Very shallow containers require fertilizing less often, watering usually more often than normal.

These succulent plants are seldom affected by either diseases or insects. If, occasionally, aphids appear, the usual aphid sprays will control them.

Since the sempervivums, especially, tend to die out after they have flowered, it is a good idea to keep a new supply of offsets coming along in shallow pans outdoors. And if any particular arrangement of plants and container should happen to pall, the whole thing can be taken apart with impunity and a new start made—using the same or different plants and the same or new containers. Even if you don't tire of any given arrangement after a few years, natural changes are bound to take place. But since the changes are usually very gradual and often quite subtle, a general effect may be maintained for years. It is not every kind of garden ornament you can say that about.

STEPS TO ASSURE A GOOD LAWN

BY DR. ROBERT W. SCHERY, DIRECTOR, LAWN INSTITUTE

The elegant bluegrasses, fine fescues, and bent grasses of our temperate-zone lawns are all autumn-oriented. These top turf species all make and shed seed which, when suitably afterripened in summer, is ready to initiate a new grass generation come autumn. This is the season when such grasses profit most from attention—in either new lawns or old. A bluegrass plant is not bothered in autumn with drawing food reserves from tiller and root to make a seed head. It need not even compete greatly with weeds, most of which tail off at this time of year. Nor does it grow lanky tall, as lengthening days in spring cause it to do. So no matter how generously you feed the lawn in autumn, mowing chores are but little increased. All that turf wants at this time of year is to wax fat and thick, set buds that will be next spring's rhizomes and tillers. It husbands foods produced in bright autumn weather, which are used up faster than they accumulate in hot weather. So it's time to get on with the following:

MAKING NEW LAWNS

1. WEED REMOVAL

Here is an "if" alternative: if you have a lot of coarse, rank, weedy stuff where you hope soon to have bluegrass, fine fescue, or bent grass—and particularly if you are choosy and meticulous—you may want to knock out the competition chemically before and as you prepare the seedbed. Most elaborate method involves soil sterilization, which "fumigates" the soil against living shoots, weed seeds, and insects. Methyl bromide, applied to loosened soil under a tarpaulin, is the most-used method; something most people prefer to hire done if they resort to it at all. It's probably too late to drench your seedbed with Vapam now (something you can do yourself), since a wait of several weeks is needed before you can seed. Both these sterilization methods are strong medicine.

More practical for most people is surface scorching of all growing grass and weeds (underground parts may be weakened, but not necessarily killed) by spraying with a contact weed killer such as cacodylic acid (active ingredient of Ansul's Phytar, for example). This chemical shrivels all vegetation it hits, but is not hazardous in the sense that 2,4-D is, with its subtle vapors that can cause internal damage to nearby ornamental plants. You can use other chemical sprays that are even more effective against weedy perennial grasses, since they are carried into underground parts; but with them, seeding is not advised for several weeks. With cacodylic acid, the chemical is inactivated in the soil and you can seed next day. Follow directions for the formulation chosen; typical strength calls for one part concentrate in fifty parts water. With the familiar 2½ gallon hand-pressure sprayer one tankful covers 1,000 to 2,000 square feet.

2. THE SEEDBED

Whether for new seeding or nursery sod, establishment and rooting will be quickest, most adequate, if the top few inches of soil are cultivated. At the same time mix in lime if your soil is much acid (you can take a pH soil test, or check with the county agent as to whether soils of the vicinity require lime for farming). For the application of ground limestone 50 to 100 pounds per 1,000 feet are a general recommendation. You will want to mix in ample fertilizer, too, the exact amount depending upon how infertile your soil is (you will have an idea about this from the way things grow in the garden). As much as double the "normal" rate recommended on most lawn fertilizer bags may be called for. Some fertilizers lose nitrogen if applied along with lime; if you need lime, it may be best to mix this in at initial cultivation, then stir the fertilizer into the root zone during finishing operations. For large proportions hire a tractor with cultivating disks to get the seedbed preparation done easily. On small areas, use a rotary tiller or hand spade.

There are optional opportunities, too, at the seedbed preparation stage. Poorly drained sites can be improved by the laying of drain tile. Underground watering systems can be set out (by you, with plastic pipe, or by professionals). Organic supplements can make either sand or clay more retentive, crumbly, and pleasant to handle (although growing grass will in time accomplish about as much in the way of soil improvement as any special organic supplement).

SEED QUALITY

Sow good seed
›uy good sod). New, generally accepted labeling tice groups lawn grasses as either "fine-textured" category), or "coarse kinds" (somewhat less ·able). The former are deemed the best-looking species, and it is suggested that a seed mixture lawn near living areas contain only or almost en-y fine-textured grasses. Among the fine-textured ses are all the bluegrasses (prominent varieties ıde Park and Merion strains), the red or fine fes(familiar Oregon varieties are Chewings, Illahee, ılawn, and Rainer), the bent grasses (lawn types Highland, Astoria, and Exeter; Penncross is a ping bent), rough bluegrass (for damp shade), a few other types, including Bermuda grass for South. All others are coarse kinds. Clumpy hay ses should be kept out of a lawn (it's the sort of f you want to kill with the cacodylic acid).

Leave the seedbed surface loose and a little pebto let the seed sift into the crevices. Seed can be spread most evenly using one of the modern lawn seeder-spreaders. Particularly if you sow by hand, cast half the seed in one direction, the other half crosswise to help avoid misses. With Kentucky bluegrass-fine fescue blends, about 3 pounds per 1,000 feet is the usually suggested seeding rate. Try to complete seeding by late August in northerly areas, through September southward as far as Atlanta, Ga.

Moisture is needed to sprout the seed—not standing water, but fairly constant humidity. In warm autumn soils kept moist by frequent light sprinkling, good grass should begin to show within two weeks. Of course, if weather is cold or dry, it will take longer. Spreading a mulch right after seeding helps hold moisture at the surface and makes sprouting surer, faster. A mulch can be any loose material such as excelsior, clean straw, fibrous stems, woven nettings, or sprayed slurries and emulsions. Even clear plastic tucked down with wire wickets (cut up coat hanger staples) will do for the smaller trouble spots.

Continue with such
e as the type of grass and local conditions call for.
w seedings should be watered frequently at first, frequently but more thoroughly as growth prosses. Most hay or straw mulches can be left in ce to decay. Mowing should begin before the grass ches twice its normal mowing height. Since young ss could be injured by weed killers, chemical weed treatment is probably best reserved for next spring. (Mowing, and an approaching season that will be harsh on weeds, should keep grass dominant over weeds through winter.) If for any reason fertilization was on the lean side initially, a later feeding in October or November should prove helpful; the nutrients aren't lost in cold weather, but become fixed in the soil and in underground grass parts ready for spring.

IMPROVING OLD LAWNS

. THE NEEDS

What is the source
your present dissatisfaction, and what the cause?
the grasses you now have are the proper kind, ·rely thin or spindly, improvement is usually easy.
ıt if there are fundamental difficulties, such as low ots that hold water, really inadequate soils, or masses of perennial weed grasses, more difficult and expensive measures will have to be undertaken. These might include regrading and perhaps tilling, improving soil structure and fertility even to the extent of purchasing good new soil, or complete renovation according to the procedures for making new lawns.

. RESEEDING

Where there is too
tle good grass, sow the kinds you want. Generally is means a half-rate overseeding to bolster thin rfs. Use just as good a seed mixture as you would r new seeding—of bluegrass varieties in combina-on with fine fescues for general lawns. Even though ·latively few seeds are likely to become mature rass plants, better that seed of good grasses lie in ·serve than only crabgrass and other weed seeds.

When old grass is thick and matted, supplemenıry seeding will be much more effective if you scratch out the thatch or duff (thin or aerate, preferably with a "power rake" or de-thatching machine that is generally rentable from garden centers). This allows the new seed to sift down to mineral soil, where it has a good chance to strike root. It won't sprout perched atop a lot of dry fluff. And the thinning (vertical mowing) stimulates attractive new juvenile growth from old grass plants at the same time that it frees the lawn of its undertone of browned foliage. Sweep up the loosened thatch and add it to the compost pile or use it as a mulch under your shrubs.

3. FERTILIZING

If there is one spe-ial time of the year when you get your money's worth rom lawn feeding, it's autumn—and without the ›other of a lot of extra mowing (see New Lawns). A ›mplete lawn fertilizer is normally advisable. Lawn ertilizers are comparatively rich in nitrogen, the first ›ercentage given in the analysis which reads con-›ecutively "nitrogen-phosphorus-potassium." Typical ınalyses are 24-9-5, 22-8-4, and 30-5-8. Most products ıre bagged these days for 5,000 square feet, and supply about 1 pound nitrogen per 1,000—a reasonable rate. For underfed lawns you may well double this rate, in two separate applications—one early in autumn, one later. Fertilization will encourage tiller formation (thickening of the grass), and pay dividends in the year ahead in a turf that smothers out much of the weed competition on its own. Tests at Iowa State University have shown that fertilizing bluegrass can be more important than a pre-emergence chemical for checking crab- (Continued on page 152)

Notes for August gardeners

This month's operations are divided equally between improvement and line-holding

First weekend

Spring in August. If everybody who intended to plant autumn-flowering bulbs actually did so, this month would mark the start of the season's second spring. Autumn crocuses (there are half-a-dozen especially fine species, including as many named varieties), colchicums (at least a dozen good species and varieties of this genus, too), and sternbergias (only a couple of species available here) would twinkle in garden corners everywhere. All these plants are loosely lumped under the heading "autumn crocus," but it is a good idea to know which are and which aren't, because the differences actually are considerable. The true crocuses behave and look much like the rest of the tribe, with many of the same colors—but muted. Colchicums and sternbergias produce flowers before leaves. For this reason it is a good idea to place the bulbs (which should be planted this month, beginning now, for best autumnal effect) among, against, or in front of other plants that can show off their initially leafless flowers.

The two sternbergia species you are most likely to find in the market without a struggle are S. lutea (satiny yellow) and S. clusiana (bigger, better, and yellower). Among colchicums, C. autumnale is the commonest and, although lovely, by no means the best. Some named varieties of C. speciosum are likely to be handsomer, all in the lilac-to-violet-to-rosy-purple range. The autumn-flowering crocuses are bellwethered by C. speciosus, especially the near blue variety 'Oxonian' and lavender 'Aitchesonii.' Crocus byzantius (iridiflorus) is big and blue-purple; it grows well in the shaded shelter of a big tree. One of the loveliest, C. niveus, is white, with a deep yellow throat and stamens; it flowers late (November), and is hardy to reasonably cold winters if it has a light covering of leaves (but don't try it in Chicago or Boston). C. kotschyanus (zonatus) flowers early, usually before the end of August when established. The flower is lilac, orange spotted down the inside.

Plant all these where the mind's eye welcomes the color—and in groups of not less than seven or eight.

Book note. Doretta Klaber's Primroses and Spring (Barrows, $4.50) is as pretty and appealing a book as her earlier volumes on rock plants and gentians. The pen drawings are accurate and deft. The information, couched in simple and warm text, is unpretentious and convincing, and to us, who certainly know less about primroses than she, it is authoritative without being horticulturally overbearing.

Second weekend

Strong poison. Just as most of the good lawn fertilizers are now supplied in granular or pelletized form, so are the weed killers. In fact, the most generally useful herbicides are now incorporated in fertilizers during the process of granulation. All may be applied at virtually any time of year without danger to the grass, although the weed killers are most effective when the weeds are in full growth (except for the pre-emergence crabgrass killers, which must be applied before the early spring). There is no question about the effectiveness of the standard lawn formulations. They work. But there may be some question about the best way to apply them. The familiar commercial spreaders do a good job of strip application, but require some precision in handling to avoid skips and overlaps. The rotary spreaders featheredge the dose, which is fine. But with herbicides, precise application to lawn areas and not to adjacent flower beds is important. Hand application—from a plastic bucket—may be the best answer.

To avoid possible irritation to the skin, wear rubber gloves. The old-fashioned hand sweep, controlled as necessary to put the amount you want where you want it, is easily accomplished with a little practice. But go over each area in at least two directions and apply less rather than more than the recommended amounts.

Reading notice. The Nehrlings—Arno and Irene—have brought out another of their fond and expert books The Picture Book of Annuals (Hearthside, $6.95). This is really a concise illustrated encyclopedia, followed by lists and chapters on the uses and care of plants grown from seed to seed in a single year. The style is simple and conversational: the information clear and inclusive.

Third weekend

Odd plant out. The dwarf, miniature, pendulous, weeping, fastigiate, columnar, contorted, and otherwise atypical forms of most plants (and most plants have such forms) are best used sparingly if at all on home properties. With the small-sized plants, the problem is less important, because there is always a place in a rock garden or atop a wall or beside a flight of garden steps for the plant that is a true dwarf. But be wary of the weepers and twisters and cloud piercers. They may do real violence to an otherwise harmonious and well-balanced planting. It is partly a matter of improper scale, partly a matter of an accent in the wrong place.

In addition, some plantings, particularly if they are made up of truly good species well placed and well grown, do not take kindly to the company of oddballs and beatniks. Among the former we could class the weeping cherries, dogwoods, and birches; among the latter, contorted Hankow willow (Salix matsudana tortuosa) and hazel (Corylus avellana contorta). Used as an isolated specimen plant and with adequate room around them for good growth as well as good visibility, such plants as the weeping hemlock and weeping beech develop, over the years, enormous grace and dignity. The same is true of the rare weeping form of the blue Atlas cedar (Cedrus atlantica glauca). And against a distant dark green background, the equally rare Cornus florida welchii, with green, white, and pink variegated leaves, has considerable charm. But as a general rule: moderation does it.

Watering pot shots. If proof were needed that water is one of the great secrets of good turf, the recent and still prevailing drought in the Northeast would supply it. Lack of water of course could have an extremely serious effect on turf in many other parts of the country, but in the Northeast, lawns have become accustomed, over the years, to having a pretty fair supply of natural rainfall. Neither the ground beneath the grass nor the gardeners on top of it are accustomed to the current deprivation. The answer, for those who are not prevented by law, is to master the art of artificial watering. Leaving aside the utopian underground watering systems that require considerable attention or large amounts of money or prohibitive quantities of water to be effective, what you have left is lawn sprinklers.

The best lawn waterers for hose wielders with no greater amount of lawn than say 5,000 square feet are either the perforated plastic tubes, the big old-fashioned oscillating sprays, or good jet-pulse rotaries. It all depends on the shape of the area to be watered and the tenderness of the turf (the perforated triple tubes are the gentlest). On irregular shaped lawns, the oscillator is best only if you don't mind watering whatever else may fall within the rectangular spray limits. Otherwise, you may find the rotary, on which you can adjust the size of the circle, most suitable. A jet-pulse model can—if it is a good make—put out an adequate amount of water (and quantity counts) with reasonable gentleness. Better yet, try the type of jet rotary perched atop a hollow pipe, with a spike at the lower end and hose connection at ground level. The 4 feet of added height will allow a wider sweep with a more gentle fall at the outer edges. It will also make watering in shrub borders, among plant rows, and on uneven ground more effective.

imate. If the contractor has rked with the architect before d is confident that his final work- ; drawings will not depart wildly)m the preliminary sketches, the imated cost can allay your dget anxieties.

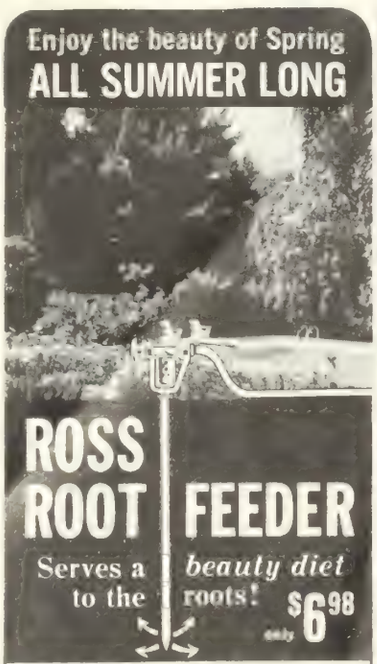
Finished working drawings e what the layman calls blue- ints. They are the plans on which ntractors' bids are based. Copies e supplied to all subcontractors or carpentry, plumbing, heating, ctrical work, etc.), and their rkmen follow them throughout nstruction. Specifications for the use are drawn up by your archi- t, and they constitute an agree- nt between you and the con- actors. They describe in detail e types of materials and equip- ent to be used, the manner in ich they are to be installed, and en how the workmen are to clean) after their work is finished.

Having spent weeks and even onths cultivating a lovely rela- onship with your architect, you ve now reached the time, as con- ruction commences, when he one calls the turn. Few exaspera- ons can compare with those of e architect and builder when nfronted with a client family at camps on the job, offering ratuitous advice and requesting st-gap changes in the blueprints. o one supposes that you should eekly suppress your thoughts hen you see slipshod work or ructural mistakes being commit- d. But it is your architect's re- ponsibility to represent your in- rests at the construction site.

Enthusiasm, of course, is al- ays welcome. Indeed, some ar- hitects believe that houses are ost successfully built when ev- ryone engaged in this adventure —owner, architect, builder, and ven the workmen—senses that an nteresting out-of-the-ordinary ex- erience is taking place. A little nore effort is exerted, a little more are taken.

As the house nears comple- ion, many families begin to think bout retaining two other profes- ionals (if they can afford them) —a landscape architect and an nterior designer. Too late, for best esults. Ideally, the landscape ar- chitect should be on the scene when a site is being chosen; and f not then, certainly when the ouse is being sited and future lanting is under consideration.

An interior designer's skills are best introduced at early con- ferences, when personalities, tastes, and family makeup are being taken into account. Most architects feel it is their function to deter- mine the form and the character of a house. In their view, the inte- rior designer's principal role is to select the furniture, furnishings, colors, fabrics, accessories. Con- flicts between the two do occur, and they can be acrimonious. The only sensible course should lead you to bring them together soon enough to share in the delicate process of making decisions.



If you plan to avail yourself of the services of a kitchen plan- ner also, it is clearly desirable that he arrive on the scene early. His concerns are literally measurable: How large should the kitchen be? How much of the building budget should be spent on the equipment that goes into this most expensive and pivotal room? The kitchen planner, the architect, and you need to answer these questions to your mutual satisfaction before the architect draws his first line.

Is having an architect-de- signed house worth all the trouble? No, if you are a bargain-hunter. Contrary to the arguments of wish- ful thinkers, an architect in most instances cannot be expected to save you money and the good ones make no such claim. But he can in many instances design and help you build a better house, a house more responsive to your family's requirements, than any you might happen onto in your local housing market. Most architects charge be- tween 10 and 15 per cent of the total cost of the house, although some work on an hourly basis. Either way, this investment, added to the inevitable special-order and custom-detailing expenses, will in- crease the cost (and hopefully the pleasure) of your house.

Some families hire an archi- tect for prestige purposes. They want a house by a "name" design- er, and what they too often get is a house embodying most of the architect's values and few of their own. Yet such an imbalance in fa- vor of the architect is not always a thing to be deplored. There are people who feel their lives can be enriched by living with "architec- ture." But they are not typical.

The happiest of all motives for wanting a house uniquely yours grows out of a zest for expanding your horizons and enlarging your experience. It has a great deal to do with a family's optimism, but also with its imagination and sense of purpose. In a letter to a young designer, Frank Lloyd Wright once wrote, "Building can be fun, but it should assume a se- rious obligation." He might well have expressed the same sentiment to any young couple who came to him and asked him to design a house for them.

helicopter (or at some seasons, by boat); the rest of the coastline is dotted with places to stay. Among those to choose from: Waiohai, on Poipu Beach, has the offhand charm of a country house; the Kauai Surf at Nawiliwili is up-to-the-minute modern; Coco Palms at Wailua boasts a century-old lagoon and dramatic pageantry; Hanalei Plantation offers a spectacular view of the peaceful Hanalei Valley from its perch on a bluff over the bay. And, if you can tear yourself away from the beaches, Kauai is small enough so that from any point you can explore the whole island.

For garden buffs there are two irresistible lures near Lihue, the capital of Kauai: Menehune Gardens, a beautiful collection of tropical trees and plants owned by Mr. and Mrs. Kailikea, and Pa'u-a-laka, Mr. and Mrs. Hector Moir's fabulous gathering of succulents from all over the world, considered one of the world's finest. The town of Lihue itself is worth exploring. It has interesting shops, a good small museum, and everywhere fascinating reminders of its nineteenth-century past as a sugar plantation town.

Maui, the Valley Island

The atmosphere of the past century is even more pronounced in the old whaling port of Lahaina on Maui. With its narrow, palm-shaded streets, false-front wooden shops, and veranda-circled turn-of-the-century Pioneer Hotel, it seems like the setting you have imagined for every South Seas saga you have ever read. But its seeming somnolence is deceptive; the activity isn't frantic, but it's there—in the resort hotels springing up on the West Maui beaches all around Lahaina, and behind the false fronts of the Lahaina shops that sell up-to-the-minute merchandise, much of it Maui-designed and made.

In contrast to the sunny, wind-swept beaches of West Maui, East Maui offers dramatic lava-ringed coves, a damp and languorous atmosphere, luxuriant vegetation, and, in the shape of the Hana-Maui Hotel in its orchid-hung valley, an idyllic and luxurious retreat from the busy hum of life.

Hawaii, the Big Island

Newest, geologically, and largest of the islands, Hawaii periodically calls attention to itself with spectacular volcanic eruptions. Volcano-watching is a favorite Hawaiian diversion, and any outburst draws a swarm of spectators from all over the islands. But the unearthly beauty of the landscape on the slopes and in the craters of the volcanoes is a sufficient lure, even when they aren't performing. You can do your volcano-visiting either from the Kona Inn in the history-laden, coffee-growing town of Kailua-Kona, or from Hilo, the largest city and capital of the island, and major producer of two alluring Hawaiian specialties: orchids and macadamia nuts.

Still another variation in the Big Island's climate and landscape—the cactus-covered ranch lands of the northwest end of the island where wide-screen, wild-West vistas are dominated by the snow-covered cone of Mauna Kea. Also under Mauna Kea's benevolent dominance is the green oasis of the Mauna Beach Resort complex, one of the newest of Hawaii's luxury hotels and one of the most beautiful. For some of the ideas that intrigued us there, see pages 112-119.

grass. Remember, too, that a flourishing bluegrass plant can spread extensively by itself. Research in Canada has indicated that a single plantlet, in one growing season, can produce 818 feet of underground spreading stem (rhizomes) that yields 1,305 daughter plants.

4. T.L.C. Pamper a little the kind of grass you grow. Kentucky bluegrass-fine fescue is best mowed rather tall, although certain strains such as Merion endure a lower mowing height. A bluegrass lawn is best not mowed shorter than 1 inch—and that low only in the cooler climates and where the lawn is well tended. Where summers are long and hot, such as in Missouri, a mowing height of at least 2 inches would give better survival, permit fewer weeds. On the other hand, bent grasses, such as Highland, should be mowed closer, generally only ½ to 1 inch. They should be mowed frequently, too, about twice a week, with a reel-type mower. And they should be watered whenever weather turns dry, be fertilized about once a month, and be given preventive disease treatment (especially for snowmold) going into winter.

Bluegrasses and fine fescues don't need quite this intensive attention, except for Merion which demands about double the normal amount of fertilization. Bluegrasses and fescues outlast minor drought well, perform adequately with limited feeding, and mow well with the less expensive rotary-type mowers. (But choose a good model that sucks up any sprawling or floppy leaf blades.)

INCORPORATING LIVING FOR YOUNG HOMEMAKERS

OTTO MAYA

On the cover: On the walls of an entrance hall, Parrot Green, one of H&G's five new colors for 1967, extends a bright and emphatic welcome. And the concentration of this tangy new hue, sparked only by black and white, is typical of the opulent one-color look that is becoming increasingly popular for today's rooms. Here the impact of the Parrot Green is varied by the interplay of textures: shiny leather on the benches, patterned cut velvet on the walls, and sculptured wool pile in the rug where it is accented by a strong pattern in Empire Green. For the whole story of H&G's new colors for 1967 and how to use them, turn to the special 21-page section that starts on page 165. For shopping information, see page 224.

TURKISH-TRADE WATCH

I bought this watch in Turkey but was told it had been made in London by Edward Prior especially for trade with Turkey and other Moslem countries. Its mechanism is driven by a small link chain similar to a bicycle chain. The watch is enclosed in two cases, the inner elaborately engraved silver, the outer tortoise shell. Would it be possible to date the watch?
Mjr. W.E.A.—APO N. Y.

Edward Prior was a fine watchmaker in London from 1800–1868. The double case would date your watch about 1800–1820. Instead of the customary Roman numerals, the numerals are Modern Arabic and totally different from ours, which derive from the Hindu-Arabic.

BALTIMORE SPOON

Can you tell the age of my silver spoons from this drawing of their mark? M.E.B.—Selma, Calif.

Your spoons are of coin silver made by Nicholas LeHuray of Baltimore between 1809 and 1831.

My father-in-law owns this Oliver typewriter. I saw one like it in a museum. Does it rate as an antique?
D.G.T.—Portland, Ore.

Oliver made this model in Chicago from 1900–1918, to undersell regular typewriters. Since its keyboard is not standard, it might qualify as a semi-antique.

White

CASA de BLANCO is a fresh reminder that Spanish design is a newly exciting source of decorative inspiration. All the enchantment of Old Spain and New Spain comes together in White's numerous style variations and design motifs. Many pieces are richly ornamented like this elegant breakfront. Others reflect the simplicity and decorative charm of Country Style Spanish. Deeply etched carvings, ornamental black wrought iron, brass studded latticework, and the light, honey-hued finish present fascinating plays of color and pattern throughout the collection. Decorating with Casa de Blanco is like choosing individual, custom-designed pieces. See for yourself with illustrated booklet.*

The mark on my grandmother's tea set has the initials G F B and the words Dresden Wreath beneath. Can you tell me anything further about it?

E.M.W.—Wyckoff, N. J.

STAFFORDSHIRE TEA SET

George F. Bower & Co., Tunstall, Staffordshire, made your bone china tea set between 1842 and 1868. Dresden Wreath was the name of the pattern.

AMERICAN OIL LAMPS

When and where was my pair of oil lamps made? The bases are of iron with a soft brown finish. They have no mark.

R.F.K.—Evansville, Ind.

Your kerosene lamps were manufactured somewhere in the United States between 1870 and 1890. Since there is no maker's name, they can't be traced further.

GOTHIC STYLE DESK

This drop-front desk was given to my grandmother just after the Civil War. The interior is maple. I would appreciate knowing more about it. K.E.C.—Alexandria, La.

The desk is American Victorian in the Gothic substyle. An American furniture factory made it about 1855–1870.

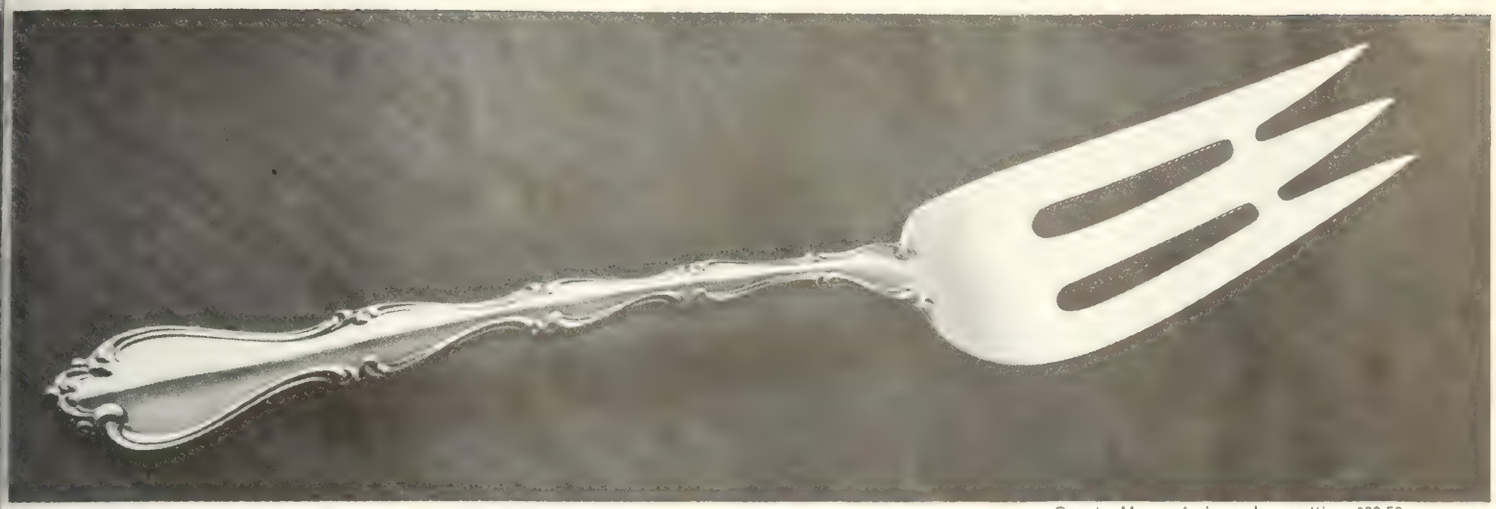
TENNIS-PLAYING TOTS

My late aunt and uncle left me these 13-inch china statues. Could you tell when they were made despite the fact that they bear no mark?

A.F.—Great Neck, N. Y.

I would judge that your pair of figurines was made between 1880 and 1890, either in France, Germany, or Bohemia. At that time some forms of tennis were played with paddles such as those the children are holding.

ENGLISH BALANCE SCALE



Can you tell me the approximate age of my brass balance scale? It has two marks: the first, C.W.S. Makers Manchester; the second, a lead seal with a crown and ER II 58 below it. H.G.J.—Framingham, Mass.

The design is that of an English Victorian balance scale dating around 1860–1880. The maker's mark cannot be traced. But the second mark shows the scale was tested and passed by a sealer of weights and measures after the coronation of Queen Elizabeth II in 1958.

Towle made this sterling silver buffet fork yesterday.

(No extra charge for the 192 years of craftsmanship.)

THE TOWLE SILVERSMITHS are still in almost the exact spot in Newburyport, Massachusetts, where the man who made the porringer above worked. His name was Joseph Moulton III, and his sons carried on the great tradition of unhurried craftsmanship and unsurpassed quality that actually began in 1690.

Today, you can see the results of that great tradition in every piece of Towle silver. You can feel it. You can sense it. Today's Towle sterling is beautiful—and made to be used. For occasions or every day. (You can even put it in the dishwasher; it's solid silver.)

Take a good look before you buy it. Study its elegance. Pick up a piece. Balance it. Examine its perfect design, its grace, its grandeur that comes only from the oldest silver-making tradition in America—it dates from 1690.

But hurry. You've already missed 276 years of great silver.

A new concept in the understanding and enjoyment of 500 years of painting and sculpture

TIME LIFE BOOKS® invites you to begin with

THE WORLD OF MICHELANGEL

yours to browse through for 10 days free

The masterpiece of Michelangelo's early twenties, this Pietà was the only work he ever signed.

He was called "divine" by his colleagues, yet he felt himself a failure . . . he was the pet of popes, but he was starved for love . . . he slept in his boots, and his head was filled with the loftiest beauty . . . he was an ascetic who portrayed the human body with an unprecedented voluptuousness . . . he claimed he was incompetent to paint the Sistine Chapel, though it became his greatest triumph . . . he combined a peasant's simplicity with superhuman genius. This was Michelangelo.

Introducing the TIME-LIFE LIBRARY OF ART

TIME-LIFE BOOKS' new series, which covers the whole range of Western art from the Renaissance to the present, begins, appropriately, with The World of Michelangelo. For Michelangelo was the very soul of the Renaissance . . . an archetypal artist whose record of accomplishment reduced the historian Varchi to stammering and "trepidations" as he delivered the funeral oration. Brought up by a lowly stonecutter, contracted into virtual bondage by his father, torn by a perpetual tug-of-war for his talents, Michelangelo still was able to dominate the most fantastic flowering of art the world has ever seen.

Though his career was sometimes bedeviled by such distractions as disputing with popes, dodging political assassins, and working with his dinner in one hand, Michelangelo managed to paint the more than 300 figures of the Sistine Chapel, sculpt a sublimely beautiful Pietà, complete the gigantic David, the Medici tombs and the magnificent Moses, and design the dome of St. Peter's.

The World of Michelangelo is not o sorbing biography, but a gorgeous gall see all of Michelangelo's paintings and m ture faithfully reproduced in its pages. is his Florence, as much museum as cit ually torn among politics, pleasure an cradle of art and a battlefield of ideas pages, you'll find Pope Julius threatenir Michelangelo thrown from the scaffold Sistine Chapel . . . you'll see Michelange an unfriendly critic into Hell . . . you'll tell in his own words how he felt abo

For all its superb full-color reproduc World of Michelangelo is more than ar Showing the relation between the man and his world, it indicates how Michela influenced by his time and influenced it how he revolutionized later artists' ways and working . . . how he was sometime by politics and patronage, sometimes pl despair. Using Michelangelo and his example, the book helps you to unde genius and the genesis of all art.

FRESH AIR WITH THE FLICK OF A SWITCH

Air purifiers and fresheners are now available for every room in the house

For a thousand years, we have been scenting the air around us with incense and perfumes, but it is only recently that we have developed effective devices that actually remove soot, dust, grease, smoke, and unwanted odors. Some of today's smaller and simpler air purifiers are designed to deal primarily with odors or smoke. The larger and more complex devices remove additional impurities from the air so efficiently that they can be a significent help to people suffering from respiratory problems. Also available are filtration systems that can be added quite easily to many existing duct-type central heating-cooling systems. Large or small, these devices are based on one or both of two principles—activated charcoal filters, or the release of negative ions. The latter, which occur in nature after an electric storm, can be produced artificially with an ultraviolet lamp or a radioactive source, and some doctors believe asthmatics can be helped by breathing air with a high concentration of them. Here is a sampling of new air fresheners and purifiers designed for a variety of household purposes.

MIEHLMANN

● In a bathroom, a small 3½-pound air purifier removes odors by releasing a stream of negative ions into the air. Impurities are attracted to positive ions; negative ions then destroy the positive ions and any impurities in the air along with them. The machine can be screwed into a wall or placed on a shelf. Puritron, $19.95. Wall cabinet by Wolff Products.

If your home is really your castle, you probably don't need a professional's help to sell it.

On second thought, maybe you do.

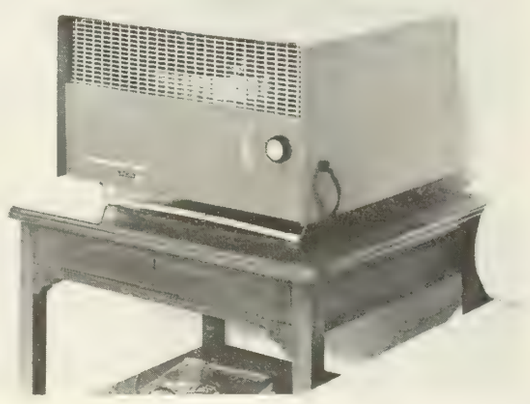
Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home.

Even if you had a castle to sell, you wouldn't want a bunch of sightseers traipsing through the halls and secret passages, pretending to be interested buyers. They might fall into the moat and sue you.

And you couldn't sell the castle as smoothly and efficiently as a Realtor®. Because that's his job. And he has to be an expert; otherwise he couldn't be a Realtor.

You see, a Realtor is a professional in real estate who subscribes to a strict Code of Ethics as a member of the local board and of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

He's trained to evaluate your castle (or home) for what it's worth, to recommend the right price, and to make a skilled presentation of it to truly interested buyers, not bargain-hunters or time-killers. Years of experience help him smooth over the endless details, even help the buyer find financing.



So whether you're selling a three-room bungalow or a 90-room chateau, by all means see a Realtor. It's easy: just look for this seal, which only he can display.

● In a larger room, a 25-pound air purifier cleans and purifies the air with a combination of a charcoal filter pack, a plastic filter, and an electrostatic filter that employs the negative ion principle. Air is passed through five filters altogether. The purifier is portable (by a sturdy male), has an air output of about 200 cubic feet per minute, and can be plugged into any AC outlet. Machine is finished in textured steel. Voltronic Air Purifier, manufactured by the Knapp-Monarch Company, is $99.95.

● In a bedroom, a 28-pound purifier can be used on a table top or installed in any double-hung window to filter air as it comes from the outdoors. Its thick filter impregnated with activated charcoal plus a germicide is said to remove 99.99 per cent of ragweed, pollen, dust, dirt, bacteria, smoke, odors, and fumes. Equipped with a three-speed motor, the machine can ventilate 1,500 cubic feet per minute. The Pure-Air 99 Electronic Air Filter-Purifier, made by Associated Mills, is priced at $89.95.

● In the kitchen, an air refresher small enough to stand on a counter will remove cooking odors and smoke by means of activated charcoal filters. With the addition of a ceramic perfume container, it can also be used to add fragrance. Scents available are Floral Bouquet, Lily of the Valley, Spice, Mountain Pine. Machine comes in white, sandalwood, pale blue, or pink (for nurseries). Air-O-Dor, made by the Songrand Corp., $19.95.

TREVI BY UNITED FURNITURE

We think stainless should look like stainless.

That's not as silly as it may sound. The fact is, a good many stainless steel patterns look as though they were designed for silver. But not ours. When we make stainless, we never think of it as being second best to silver. We make sure it's beautiful in its own right.

Our patterns are especially designed for stainless steel. With clean, simple lines that add to the modern look and contemporary feeling of the metal itself. Besides fitting the everyday function of stainless in your home.

But there is one similarity between our stainless and sterling. The craftsmanship.

A good example of what we mean is Saturna, at right. It takes the steady hand of a man named Kenneth Glenn to give it that texture. Piece by piece.

Yet it costs just $59.95 for a 50-piece service for eight.

The same 50-piece service in Astra (center) is $79.95. And in Today (far right) it's $59.95.

If you want stainless that looks like stainless (but gets made like sterling), look for the new "IS" hallmark wherever fine silverware is sold.

To get a free color brochure of all our patterns, write to The International Silver Company, Meriden, Connecticut.

SONG YUNG SOOK, AGE 4½, KOREAN. One of four children. Father dead. Mother servant. Earns $4 per month. Family always hungry. One meal a day . . . boiled noodles or barley. "Home" is a tent. Freezing cold in winter. Insufficient bedding, blankets. Children dressed in rags. No winter clothing. Mother struggles desperately. Looks with anguish on children she cannot adequately house, feed and clothe. Help to Song Yung Sook means help to entire family.

Thousands of children as needy as Yung Sook anxiously await "adoption" by you or your group. You can choose a boy or girl from any of the countries where Foster Parents' Plan has offices—Greece, South Korea, Viet Nam, Hong Kong, the Philippines, Colombia, Ecuador or Peru. Your child receives $8 a month of your money in cash as well as blankets, household equipment, clothing, medical care—and education. EVERY PLAN CHILD OF SCHOOL AGE MUST ATTEND SCHOOL. Through your help the child will become a productive citizen of his country, a loyal friend of ours. You receive a case history and photograph. Every month you write and receive a letter (original and translation). PLAN's local social workers and our resident American Directors are always on-the-spot, ready to provide medical aid, counselling and guidance to your child and his family. Soon, through the regular letters and progress reports, you and your child develop a warm, loving relationship. "Accept" a child the responsible way—through Foster Parents' Plan.

CHECK YOUR CHARITY! PLAN never employs professional fund-raisers. We eagerly offer our financial statement upon request because we are so proud of the handling of our funds.

PLAN is a non-political, non-profit, non-sectarian, independent relief organization, approved by the United States Government, registered under No. VFA019 with the Advisory Committee on Voluntary Foreign Aid of the Agency for International Development and filed with the National Information Bureau and the National Better Business Bureau in New York City.

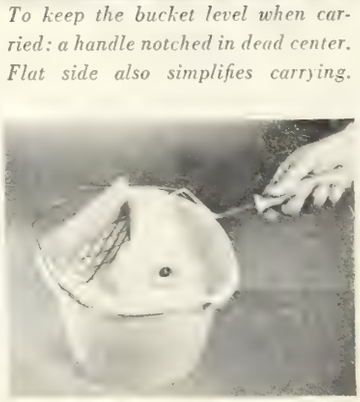
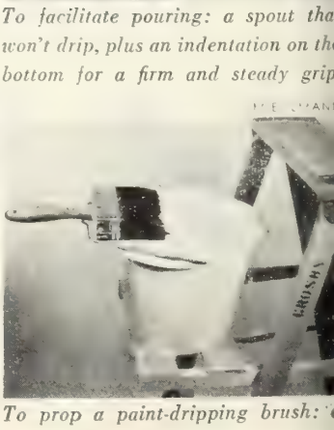
PAINTER'S HELPER: A BETTER BUCKET

Every once in a blue moon, someone comes along and improves a familiar object, the design of which nobody had thought to question before. Such an innovation is a new paint pail, winner of an award from the Industrial Designer's Society of America and designed so ingeniously that it is bound to make the chore of painting simpler, safer, neater. This star performer also lends itself nicely, because of well-marked measurements, to mixing either cleaning or gardening solutions.



The 6-quart-capacity bucket is made of molded, high-density polyethylene, which sheds paint as a duck does water. This and the bucket's seam-free interior make it agreeably easy to clean, and a sloping bottom not only makes paint easier to get at when the supply is low, but provides a handy grip for pouring. The handle, interior design, pouring spout, and quart measurements clearly marked on the interior, all combine to make the Wooster MagiKoter a paragon among paint buckets.



To keep the bucket level when carried: a handle notched in dead center. Flat side also simplifies carrying.

To facilitate pouring: a spout tha won't drip, plus an indentation on th bottom for a firm and steady grip

To speed paint distribution on a roller (without a separate roller pan): a handy removable plastic grid screen.

To prop a paint-dripping brush: squared-off handle. Flat edge fits o a ladder, helps to prevent tipping

WOOSTER MAGIKOTER AVAILABLE THROUGH PAINT, WALLPAPER, BUILDING SUPPLY STORES, $1.2

Harry Lee Hinson III, 28, and top New York designer for Bonwit Teller, believes that "as the public progresses in its knowledge, interior design will become purer." He's used Fiberglas in a bold, pure way—giving full play to texture and pattern.

Elegance without upkeep... Fiberglas* draperies.

Give young American designers the potential of Fiberglas and anything goes—as long as it's beautiful. No color is too fragile . . . no texture too delicate . . . no print too wild, if it's Fiberglas.

Fiberglas sets you free from all the worries, all the effort, all the cleaning bills. Neither city smokestacks nor seashore sun can hurt Fiberglas.

It will never shrink or stretch or sag or burn. You never need to iron it! If that's not elegance without upkeep, what is?

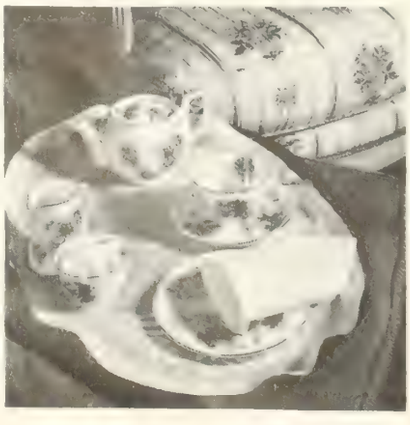
TEAPOTS TO MAKE POURING A JOY

The trappings of tea can contribute as much pleasure to the morning and afternoon rites as the brew itself



Simple traditional shapes in a tea set of stainless steel with a pewter-like finish include a generous ten-cup pot that can be very welcome when there are more than two for tea. Teapot, $60; cream pitcher, sugar bowl, each $25; tray, $15; tea strainer with coaster, $4. Hammacher Schlemmer.

Blue stripes ring a white ceramic bamboo-handled teapot from Sweden. Cups in matching stripes are teamed with blue saucers. Teapot, $11.25; cup, saucer, $4. Georg Jensen.

Vine-shaped handles and acorn finials give a refreshing pastoral look to a breakfast set of mottled pink and white Italian pottery. The nine-piece set is $50. At Tiffany.

Bright blue bachelor's buttons sprig a breakfast set of English bone china—a lovely way to greet the morning. The eleven-piece set for one is $52.50 at Scully & Scully.

Queen Anne designs from the days when tea drinking was still a new fashion are reproduced in sterling silver. Set including teapot with ebony handle, creamer, and sugar bowl, $675. At Shrubsole.

A Persian pattern in blue and pink spangled with gold stars embellishes a china tea set with a delicate feminine air. Teapot, $38.50; tray, $52.75; sugar bowl, $29.75; cream pitcher, $10.75; cup and saucer, $16.25. Ginori Fifth Ave.

Modern Danish design marks a cheerfully gleaming tea set of silver plate. Teapot, $42; tray, $80; sugar bowl, $14; creamer, $15; waste bowl (which may be used for lump sugar instead), $10. Also available, a black Formica insert that slips into the tray, $7.50. From Reed & Barton.

Classic shapes created almost 200 years ago by Josiah Wedgwood are still made in black basalt—the chic dark stoneware he perfected, too. Teapot, $26.95; sugar bowl, $8.95; creamer, $7.95; cup and saucer, $5.95. All available at Plummer McCutcheon.

THE $100 DIFFERENCE

n the Heritage carver turns over his model to the man at the machine, hands continue to interpret low of each curve. When a carved wood commode, or any piece of furniture, is made more by men machines, only more money can buy it.

ght be able to find a commode ks somewhat like this for 120. And, if all you want is ing to fill a wall in a foyer a lamp next to your bed, you'll py with it.
eritage commode night stand ound $220. Or $100 more than k-alike". This commode is or the person who considers a backdrop and a lamp essory for furniture. From vings along the base and he legs to the beautifully worked antique cherry finish, this commode is a product of men's hands. Hands that respect the individuality of each grain in the wood. Hands that interpret the arc, the depth, the importance of every turn in the carving.
When the personality of natural as well as man-made designs is respected like this, a commode costs more money. The higher price on this commode—or any other piece of furniture we make—reflects deep-seated qualities that only more money can buy. Not just carving or a finish unmatched by shortcut methods. But the stretching and shaping that hold the lines of a sofa. And the way we'll finish a leg on a sofa whether or not it's meant to hide behind kick pleats.
When you find work like this, you'll see the Heritage name. Hanging from the hardware on this scaled down Louis Quinze style commode. Burned inside the drawers of a Heritage chest that takes its cues from Chippendale. Nestled under the cushions of a Heritage sofa. Swinging on a hangtag from one of our wing chairs. Hiding behind the doors of a mahogany Heritage hutch.

Notes for the Hostess

BY DIANA BRYAN

Kay Jones talked a group of us into having a basket party around her heated swimming pool for a sort of farewell-to-summer get-together. We have divided up the responsibilities for the food—hors d'oeuvres, soup, main dish, and salad. Kay herself will provide drinks and dessert. But this isn't to be just a simple you-bring-the-potato-salad-I'll-bring-the-hard-boiled-eggs type of picnic. Each of us is to prepare one or two very extra-special dishes. Since my assignment is salad, I'm going to make Tabooli—a delectable Middle Eastern concoction of bulgur (cracked wheat) mixed with chopped parsley, scallions, mint, and tomatoes, dressed with olive oil and vinegar and garnished with Greek olives and tomato wedges. I'm also planning a salad of marinated saffron rice, lobster, artichoke hearts, raw spinach, and watercress. Someone else is bringing escabeche (picked fish) and breasts of chicken Kiev, individually foil-wrapped for reheating. And we are all planning to make our baskets look as pretty as possible so that they can be placed as-is on a simple buffet table near one end of the pool.

This is to be a down-to-earth party, literally, for instead of using tables and chairs, we will sit around the pool on Kay's brilliantly striped Japanese mats (pink and orange, purple and green, orange and olive) from Takashimaya. Needless to say, we were all urged to bring food that doesn't require cutting up.

After supper, we will all vote on which was the most interesting or exotic dish. The Joneses are offering a brace of vintage wines as a prize.

Note for my party food file, hors d'oeuvre department: Caviar mousse—a "cold shape" of sour cream, whipping cream, mayonnaise, gelatin, and caviar with more caviar ladled over the top of the mold. You spread it on melba toast (preferably homemade melba toast). Sensational!

With my cutting garden now on the wane, I am delighted to have the Mexican clay candelabrum the Pringles sent me as a hostess gift—it is just enough to adorn a table by itself or with a very few flowers. The style is traditional, but not the color. None of those hot bright shades! Instead, the interwoven pyramids of leaves and trees and figures are painted in pale mauve, misty pinks, and blues, picked out with white. I'd love to have a pair in the Tree of Life design—one for each end of my long table. Julie Pringle says that these candelabra come from Arthur Miller in New York, but you have to order them through a decorator.

The hottest thing to come our way in a long time is Outerbridge's "Original Old Bermuda Sherry Peppers"—an absolutely great detonator for all kinds of drinks and dishes. This fiery liquid is a traditional Bermuda condiment, but until recently you could never buy it off the island. Now Charles & Co. in New York carries it bottled in a little cruet that is nice looking enough to bring to the table. Sherry peppers is a decoction of sherry and very hot small peppers plus some secret ingredients which are allowed to steep and age until the proper pyrotechnical flavor is reached. A few drops in chowder, salad dressing, and stew are remarkably bracing. Some people add it to a Martini, thus creating a Peppertini—quite a drink. We like it in Bloody Marys, too.

What made me crazy was the nuts

Whole toasted pecans. And almonds. And puffy white pieces of popcorn. That's Poppycock. Exquisitely held together in a caramelized crunch. Made with butter. And more butter. I couldn't control myself. I wanted to stop. I really tried. Those almonds kept looking at me. The pecans called. I was helpless. It was magnificent. Sheer delight. How could I possibly resist. I'm only human. If you're human, see if you don't go crazy for it. You can find Poppycock mostly in fancier food and department stores at only $2 a can.

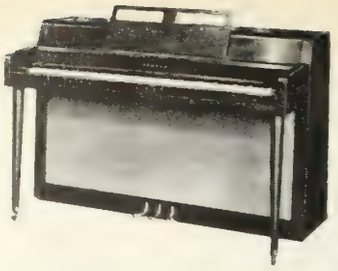
OUTDOOR TILE FLOORING that any do-it-yourselfer can install. A new resilient vinyl tile suitable for laying over any outdoor concrete base—driveway, patio, walkways, sun decks—is resistant to extremes of heat or cold, to sunlight, even to indentation from heels and furniture legs. Made in 12-inch squares, with a rugged, textural surface, Weatheron tiles come in a choice of four colors. To install, you follow four-step directions, using a primer and a contact adhesive. Tiles and installation material cost about 70c a square foot. By Armstrong Cork Co., Lancaster, Pa.



COMBINATION DOOR LOCK guaranteed to foil light-fingered housebreakers. There is no lock to pick—and no key for you to carry: the push-button lock operates like a safe with a four-number combination. A built-in night latch button is further insurance against intrusion from the outside. Should you want to change the lock, a different combination can be substituted. About $15.95; decorative escutcheon plate, $3.95. By Preso-Matic Lock Co., 8228 West 47th St., Lyons, Ill., 60534.

FLY BY NITE, an antique shop for Victoriana buffs hunting for nostalgic miscellany from the nineteenth century. Shop owner Thomas Tomc boasts of having a stock of authentic Victorian brass hardware—some 150,000 door knobs, latches, escutcheons, hooks, and the like. Other specialties of the house: decorative accessories such as wood carvings and unusual bottles; paper Americana—valentines, postcards; tins and product containers from the Country Store room; leaded glass shades, umbrella stands, marble-top washstands. Located at 1534 North Wells St., Chicago, Ill., 60610.

GOURMET'S INTERNATIONAL GUIDE to dining around the world. From firsthand experience, Lester Gruber, restaurateur, has compiled price-coded résumés of 2,600 restaurants in thirty-five countries—from the Laughing Buddha in Macao to the Merenkävijät in Helsinki. He has peppered his text with directions for finding out-of-the-way food and utensil markets, notes on local customs and regional specialties. A modern art buff, too, Mr. Gruber mentions galleries, exhibitions, and architectural attractions. The booklet, a handy 8-by-4-inch paperback called Itinerary of Taste, is published by E. F. MacDonald Company. $3.75. Available by mail through the author's restaurants: London Chop House and Caucus Club, 155 W. Congress, Detroit, Mich., 48226.

RETROSPECTIVE EXHIBIT OF DANISH FURNITURE, to be held at the Copenhagen Museum for Arts and Crafts from September 30 to October 16. Sponsored by the Cophenhagen Cabinetmaker's Guild, the exhibition will trace the evolution over the last four decades of the furniture designs that have exerted so much influence on our own contemporary design. In addition, the results of a furniture design competition entitled Furnishing for Mankind will be on display. The furniture will be shown in full room settings to illustrate the architects' and designers' concepts for ideal living.

ELECTRIC WASTE DISPOSERS

Questions and answers on the most sanitary efficient device for getting rid of garbage

Although the electric waste disposer that fits into the drain of the kitchen sink has been on the market for twenty years, its workings are still as much of a mystery to some families as they are an old story to others. If you live in certain areas around Detroit, Mich., you know the disposer as well as you know your kitchen stove because in that city it is required by law, in old houses as well as new. If you live in New York City, you may never have been confronted with a disposer, since New York, along with 5 to 10 per cent of the other urban communities in the country, prohibits the appliance, claiming its already overtaxed sewer systems cannot handle the extra load. If you are building a new house in Denver, it would be well to find out how a disposer works, since the law there says every new house must have one. For the benefit of any H&G readers who, for one reason or another, have not yet caught up with the waste disposer's talents, we have compiled this basic primer.

What is a garbage disposer?

A garbage disposer is an electric motor-driven grinder housed in a cylinder about the size of a gallon thermos jug and installed under a kitchen sink. Its purpose is to reduce food waste into non-solid and flush it down the sink drain. It does not chop or cut garbage, but actually grinds and grates it into small particles.

What does it do?

A garbage disposer enables you to get rid of garbage by dropping it down the sink drain while you are preparing meals or scraping dishes after a meal. Since so much food preparation takes place in or next to the sink (peeling, chopping, coring), flushing the waste down the drain is the simplest way to get rid of it. The disposer should be able to handle leafy vegetable tops and parings; egg shells; fruit peels, rinds and pits; corn cobs and husks; bones up to chop length; meat, poultry, fish, and seafood remains except for hard shells.

Some models can also cope with soft papers such as napkins, but newspaper cannot be up. You will still have to of most paper wrappings and bottles in another man with a sink disposer nea the odor-making, insect-att waste can be disposed of delay.

Is there more than one type

There are two basic types posers. The most popular continuous-feed type into you can put garbage contin A flexible rubber baffle cov disposer opening and you push food through this whi ning the cold water. To st motor you flip a switch.

The second or batch-fee takes a quantity of garbag time. There is no back-splas fle opening; instead you o metal cover, to admit the ga put the cover back into plac on the cold water, and twi cover to set the grinder in m You reverse-twist the cover t the motor off. Then you can other batch.

Both kinds make abo much noise as a dishwasher.

Does it have to be cleaned?

Disposers are self-cleaning; ical drain cleaners should be used. The cold water yo while the machine is in oper and for a few moments afte grinding stops is the only cl required. The disposer uses, o average, about 6 gallons of a day—the equivalent of a second shower.

Jamming should not ha with proper use, but most disp have a system (such as a re switch, or special wrench) to themselves if jamming does o

How is it installed?

Some plumbing and elect work is required to install a w disposer. Today's disposers fit sink with a standard 4-inch dr but a few simple changes may h to be made below the sink in drain lines. Occasionally, in a old house, the installation is n complicated. Disposers drain the household's main waste tem (sewer or septic tank).

SHAPED VALANCES: THE LAMBREQUIN

The flat valance or lambrequin, a favorite over-window decoration of the eighteenth century, makes an effective heading for many different styles of curtains popular today. (For another kind of valance, the draped swag, see May H&G.) The traditional lambrequins—covered with rich damasks or velvets and ornate trimmings—had elaborately contoured edges. Simpler fabrics and shapes are used today, but the basic design and its advantages remain the same. In addition to its assets as a decorative heading, the valance can be hung well above the window molding to create an illusion of greater height, can unite a group of adjacent windows, and serve to conceal rods, rings, blind or shade hardware, and built-in lighting. Lambrequins may run straight from wall to wall, but when they are installed over individual windows in mid-wall, they need shallow sides to box in the tops of the windows.

Most of today's shaped valances are made in the traditional way, lined and interlined, over a buckram base, but sometimes the fabric is attached to a wood backing and mounted as you mount a cornice. In most cases the valance extends only low enough to conceal the curtain rod, so that it will not cover the window and reduce the daylight.

AT WILLIAMSBURG: A DOG-EAR ENGLISH VALANCE

In the parlor of the Brush-Everard house in Colonial Williamsburg, the flat shaped valance has dog-ear corners that accent the large design of the antique gold silk damask. Made on a stiff base of duck which is lined with linen, the lambrequin is also interlined with flannel, and—like the curtains—edged with braid.

The simplest kind of lambrequin—a fascia board covered with white fabric—spans the window wall of the Marvin Smalls' New York City dining room, concealing curtain hardware and the lighting that compensates for absence of daylight after sundown. Interior designers: Paul Lester Wiener, Ala Damas.

The scalloped-edge design of the lambrequins in the George L. Colemans' guest room in Pebble Beach, Calif., was inspired by a pretty fabric motif—bouquets of pink and yellow tulips. The valances, lined and stiffened with buckram, hang free from a wood frame. Interior design: McMillen, Inc.

A continuous valance around two adjoining walls of a bedroom in Mr. and Mrs. John P. Pitcairn's house in Corpus Christi, Tex., crowns a wall-to-wall stretch of curtains that unifies the corner, makes it more usable. Alternate scallops are rounded, squared off. Designer: Norman McD. Foster.

THE GREAT COLOR EXPLOSION IN TELEVISION

By FAUBION BOWERS

Among the many new developments in color over the past twenty years, perhaps the most spectacular and spectacularly rewarding is the recent emergence of color television. Off the drawing board, out of the laboratory, the long-awaited, near-perfect super-set of color television is here. Those disparaging comments we heard as late as six months ago are being reversed.

Until the arrival of this year's new models, color television still suffered from some of the defects that marked the first sets when they were introduced in 1954. Blurs developed on the screens and adhered like patches of algae. Screens had to be frequently "degaussed" or un-magnetized. The pictures alternated between the washed-out paleness of a tintype and the artificiality of early Technicolor movies. Sometimes the color "drifted" and just went away, occasionally taking the picture with it. "Ghosts" or double images, tolerable in black and white, were unendurable when a green figure developed a red shadow. And the viewer had little control over the color stability.

Now, almost overnight, nearly all the old obstacles to pleasurable viewing have been removed. The transformation dates from about this time last year when, simultaneously but independently, a new invention reached the market and a discovery was made. The invention was a color tube in a new shape—rectangular. Previously all color tubes were round. The set looked like a vast seeing-eye in front, and in back, a doghouse to kennel the tail end of the outsize picture tube. (Bulkiness was another mark against early color TV; you practically had to live in a mansion to have room for it.) But when the set makers developed the rectangular tube, they simultaneously lopped 5 inches from its depth, thereby reducing the depth of the set and achieving what had hitherto been impossible: portable color. Almost immediately the demand for color sets raced ahead of the supply.

This might not have happened, however, if it were not for the important discovery that was made about the same time. A scientist found that when a TV screen was washed with a slurry of mud (a metallic oxide called rare earth), the picture glowed with a brilliance and sparkling clarity of detail that had never before been attained. The new coating allowed the three primary colors to be shot at equal strength through the 300,000 clusters of three phosphor dots on the face of the picture tube. In other words, no more toning down of the loud and overwhelming color red at the expense of the frailer blue and yellow. At last, that will-o-the-wisp, color fidelity, had been captured.

Today's level of color fidelity would not have been thought possible two years ago. "Hi-C-Fi" is very real now, as real, perhaps, as Hi-Fi itself. Of course, the grouch can complain that color television is not absolutely true, but what reproduction is? The green baseball diamond may seem a bit romanticized, the beauty contest too rainbow-splashed, or the participants in the Oscar, Emmy, Tony award ceremonies somewhat too glamorous, but I know of no expert in any of these fields who would not at this date prefer to see a telecast in color rather than black and white. After all, stereo, too, falls somewhat short of reality. So do the finest color engravings and the best motion pictures. The radiance of the world cannot be reduced to a photograph.

To watch color television, you must, of course, have a color set. But you can still see any color program minus its color on a black-and-white set, because the three component pictures in red, blue, and yellow are superimposed over a black-and-white picture, or luminance, that gives the color definition and sharpness. And this black-and-white luminance is receivable on any set. On the other hand, if you want to see marvelously clear black-and-white television, tune into a black-and-white program on a color set.

Anyone who goes shopping for a color TV set today will be faced by an almost staggering number of choices—around 250 models by more than twenty major manufacturers. They come in five different screen sizes (soon to be standardized according to the dimensions of the screens from the upper right hand corner to the lower left corner) which range from the 11-inch screen on a little 24-pound wonder-box up to a 25-ich screen encased in an elabo-ate piece of furniture. Today's verage price is about $550—con-iderably lower than in the early ays—but still more than three mes the average for black-and-hite sets. The full range runs oughly from $250 for a portable o $1,000 for a console which in-ludes a record changer; eight peakers; solid-state stereo FM ith FM/AM radio; and input and utput jacks for a tape recorder.

The new sets are more auto-natic, require less effort to oper-te. Some contain more transistors, hich reduces their size and peeds the warming-up of the color ube. And most recent models al-ow you to adjust the color strength o your personal taste. Some sets ave built-in adjusters that set au-omatically, or remote controls ith which you can adjust your olor as easily as you can change station—all without rising from our chair or bed. Other sets pro-ide little visual tuners, so simple hat even if you are color blind you an watch a line narrow and widen nd thereby reach the just-right ıedian for the whole family.

The best way to find the set hat will be right for you is to try ut in your own living room the ne you think you want. See if you ike its color. Each set—that is, ach color tube—is like a fine iano, different from any other. Watch the color test signals or BC's fantailing peacock. You hould be able to see the whole pectrum that color TV now offers: ellow, cyano (a dark blue), reen, magenta, red, blue, and, of ourse, black and white. Let the et warm up for at least an hour hile the color steadies itself.

The supreme test is in the skin one of a person's face. Black-and-hite TV can get away with brown ipstick and gray painted scenery, ut with color television, there are o tricks. The scenery must be eal, the make-up natural. Every ace should look pleasantly realis-ic, not blistery red or "flesh pink." f the skin tones are not natural, he set fails to measure up to the urrent quality standards of color elevision.

The Program Explosion

Along with the big changes in the color set itself, color telecasts have mushroomed. Today more than 75 per cent of the nation's 600 or so TV stations are transmitting at least part of the time in color. Beginning this month, all the major networks will present their eve-ning programs exclusively in color and some daytime shows as well.

A dramatic recent scientific development which has further in-creased the excitement of color television is the Early Bird satel-lite. This hovering transmitting tower, 23,000 miles above the equator, revolves around the world every twenty-four hours, sending and receiving microwaves that can transmit TV programs from Eu-rope into your living room in full color. Sports fans can watch championship events in Europe. Musical competitions in Moscow can be followed, player by player.

In addition to these special programs from abroad, which tend to be offered or canceled at mo-ment's notice, the domestic color programs scheduled for 1966-67 are extremely abundant and tempt-ing. All of the thirty-four new shows on the season's list will be transmitted in color. Among the specials on NBC will be The Law and the Prophets—a history of the Old Testament as told by great paintings; an original musical ver-sion of Alice Through the Look-ing-Glass, with a star-studded cast; a tour of the royal palaces of England, including many palaces not hitherto open to the public. Dramas on NBC will include Othello with Sidney Poitier in the title role, and Anastasia starring Julie Harris and Lynne Fontanne.

Some of the more colorful highlights of the varied CBS schedule will be: S. Hurok Pre-sents, featuring, among others, Antonio with the Ballets de Ma-drid and Maya Plisetskaya with the Bolshoi Ballet; The Glass Menagerie starring Shirley Booth; Chekhov's Ivanov with John Giel-gud repeating his brilliant Broad-way performance; and the Dr. Seuss color cartoon, How the Grinch Stole Christmas.

The big excitement at ABC is the much-discussed Stage '67 series of programs, which will con-sist of original dramas and musi-cals, created expressly for TV by well-known authors and compos-ers, and featuring all-star casts. For instance: The Love Song of Barney Kempinski by Murray Schisgal with Alan Arkin and John Gielgud; Richard Adler's new musical Olympus 7-0000 (not about baseball, as was his Damn Yankees, but football). ABC also will do Brigadoon star-ring Robert Goulet, and in the film department, two blockbusters Hans Christian Anderson, the tune-ful hit with Danny Kaye, and The Bridge on the River Kwai, to be shown for the first time on tele-vision, uncut and during prime eve ning hours.

Color has now become a staple of our esthetic and emotional diet. It has been called the "glorious embellishment" of everything it touches. The embellishment it adds to a television program is like the difference between a fact and an anecdote. Both black and white and color may tell you the same thing, but most of us, I believe, like our truths burnished with the glamour, the beauty, and the brightness of color.

ARMOR-GARD PLASTIC TOPS

The notes of a happy housekeeper

BY MARY ELIZABETH FALTER

Those little extra household jobs that appear from time to time can require a lot of running around when you tackle them one by one. I mean things like removing the spot on the slipcover, regluing a bit of veneer on the antique bed, or giving the heavy traffic areas of the floor a little extra waxing. To speed up this kind of work I have set up a household first-aid basket so that I can check minor repairs all at once and have the materials at hand to cope with them.

The basket is a roomy one with a handle over the top. In it I keep a good spot remover, a can of Goddard's wallpaper cleaner, an art-gum eraser, a small can of hard carnauba floor wax, a small can of Lexol for the leather chair seats, a stiff brush, some thread and needles, scissors, Reviva mar-removing polish, and magic mending tape. All this plus white blotting paper, a box of man-sized Kleenex, and some soft, clean rags made of old sheets. I add to the basket from time to time as special jobs come up—Elmer's glue and a metal polishing cloth went in recently. Each week after the heavy cleaning has been done, I take an hour to travel around the house with my basket, catching small jobs before they become big ones.

Young Tommy was given a handy addition to his model-making gear: a little battery-powered drill about the size of a flashlight. It has two drill heads, two burrs, and a sanding drum, all very tiny. Since the drill is as useful for minor household repairs as for making models, the whole family is constantly borrowing it. We have used it for drilling small holes to mount fine picture-wire eyes on the back of picture frames, and for making small holes in plastic, wood, or metal. We can even sharpen some of our favorite tools with the sanding drum. Called the Strombecker Cordless Power Drill, it hums away on a pair of C batteries.

The latest addition to the glove compartment of our car is a dozen little individual packets of shoe shine. I'm amazed at how often we use them. During those frequent short waits that find you sitting in the car with nothing to do, there is usually just enough time to open a package of Cinch and rub it over your shoes. We keep paper towels in the glove compartment, too—use them to wipe off our shoes first and to give them a quick rub after the polish. The other day I shined up my lizard handbag and wallet while waiting at school for the children.

Being enthusiastic paper users, we have about six rolls of various kinds of kitchen paper going at all times. They used to wind up in such a jumble on the shelf it became imperative to do something about it. An Artwire Paper Caddy turned out to be the perfect solution. It holds six rolls in their boxes: two side by side on the bottom, one on each of the four little shelves. Each roll can be taken out without disturbing the others.

Speaking of kitchen cupboards, our seven-year-old Tina helped me rearrange some of ours one rainy afternoon last week. In the process she came up with the suggestion that one of the lower cupboards be reserved for certain things that were normally stored on shelves way above her head. She pointed out, quite logically, that if she could reach the cereal bowls, cups, and glasses, she could be more of a help in setting the breakfast table, and could also fix her own cereal and juice. At her age the urge to help is so often thwarted by frustrations, I agreed that we would set up one cupboard just for her. I moved some seldom-used baking pans to a place in the utility room and used their former space for cereal bowls, mugs, glasses, and an extra box of paper napkins. We also transferred the dog and cat food to a lower shelf, and Tom put up a towel hook at Tina's height. Now she is able to help with the dishes and feed the animals, which gives her a great feeling of pride, yet she is not risking her neck trying to climb up to reach things on the upper shelves.

When we went to the Lodge with the Milligans for the weekend, I had a chance to use the cute little Steam 'n Dry Universal travel iron by General Electric I got for my birthday. It was warm and humid when we packed, and all our clothes were a mass of wrinkles when we took them out of our suitcases. But my iron fixed that. It looks just like a regular iron, except it's smaller and thinner and the handle folds over flat. It can be used dry but will also give up to twenty minutes of continuous steam, comes packed in a neat red leather case that also contains simple sewing equipment.

Thank goodness someone has finally invented a dust pan that folds in the middle for easy dumping. When you squeeze the handle, the pan bends to a wedge shape so you can pour the sweepings neatly into a trash basket without spilling. Made of shiny lightweight plastic, the pan has a thinly turned edge so you can pick up every grain of dust. There are two roomy depressions toward the back where the sweepings tend to stay put until you are ready to empty them. The Foley company is the author of this housekeeping gem.

The whole family turned out last Saturday to give the basement a thorough fall cleaning. Our large and venerable house has a real old-fashioned basement—spacious, quiet, cool in summer and warm in winter. But it's neither finished nor furnished—we use it for storage and do-it-yourself projects since Tom's tool room-workshop is down there. On Saturday we went through everything in storage, and swept, vacuumed, and mopped the floors and walls of the whole basement. I cleaned all the shelves and corners with Lysol Disinfectant Foam Cleaner, which not only removes dirt, but actually helps prevent mold and mildew. After the damp summer we have just had, parts of the basement were beginning to have a faintly musty odor, but now the whole place smells wonderfully clean and fresh.

GOING PLACES,
FINDING THINGS IN

THE WINE TOWNS OF EUROPE

BY HUGH JOHNSON

It is hardly coincidence that some of the pleasantest places in the whole of Europe are the towns which give their names to their wines. The influence of the underground activity taking place in the cellars under the streets—just the presence of the long dark corridors of venerable barrels—seems to be felt everywhere. The citizens of such towns, living by wine, are countrymen at heart; they understand patience and the slow workings of nature. The seasons are felt in the city streets as much as they are in the lanes of the countryside. At vintage time the excitement is ubiquitous; elation or disappointment with the year's harvest is inescapable as much in the cafés as in the fields. In autumn while the wine ferments in the vaults under the houses, its sweet-and-sour scent is a constant presence. Even in the crisp of winter the cellars are like truffles in the city's heart; the whisper of their perfume cannot be shaken off.

Best known wine town of Germany: Bernkastel on the Moselle. It is a picture-postcard place of gables and turrets, narrow streets, and colorful façades, overlooked by its hillside vineyards.

Wine has brought these towns wealth as well as happiness, and the men of wine have not grudged to show their gratitude in glorious churches and princely charitable institutions, or their prosperity in elegant houses and lovely public monuments.

Reims, Bordeaux, Beaune, Arbois, Riquewihr, Cognac, and Macon in France; Asti, Trento, Frascati, and Orvieto in Italy; Bernkastel, Trier, Worms, and Rüdesheim in Germany; Spain's Jerez and Portugal's Oporto—the list could go on for pages—are all cities that live by and for wine above all else. A visit to some of the more outstanding among them, and to the vineyards and estates that encircle them, could be the core of a fascinating trip through Europe, adding an extra dimension of enjoyment and understanding. Ideally, these spots should be seen at vintage time, which varies from place to place and from year to year, but which starts in early September in southern Spain, and sometimes goes on until late October, particularly in Germany. The vintage, wherever it is, is a form of hard labor indivisibly linked with merrymaking, wonderful to witness.

Bordeaux

Any way you look at it, Bordeaux is the greatest of all wine towns. It is the center of the region that produces more of the best wine than any other. It is also the biggest and most splendid city that is famous for its wine. There is nothing small-time or provincial about Bordeaux: it has the air, the elegance, the streets and squares, the parks and theatres of a capital.

It is its role as a port, in combination with the famous vineyards surrounding it, that has provided the livelihood and fortune of Bordeaux. Ninety miles up-river from the Bay of Biscay, Bordeaux handles the trade of all southwestern France as well as its own great business in wine. Six (Continued on the next page)

WINE TOWNS OF EUROPE

Classic example of a château in the Mèdoc region. Vineyard owner's mansion, workers' homes, farms, "pressoir," cellars, and barrel shop cluster amid the vineyards comprising a total industrial unit.

The famous 500-year-old hospital at Beaune. From its vineyards come such aristocratic wines as Pommard, Aloxe-Corton, Meursault, Savigny-les-Beaune, whose proceeds keep the hospital —unbelievable as it seems— running smoothly.

miles of waterfront stretch like a spine from end to end of the city, broken only by one great bridge, for the Garonne here is still a good 500 yards wide. For most of the length of the quais the houses are the handsome, subdued, four-square gray terraces of 1780, their only outbreak of frivolity the wrought-iron balconies that suddenly writhe from their starched fronts. Although Bordeaux's history (and relics) goes back to the Romans, and the city flourished and built its magnificent cathedral in the Middle Ages, wherever you look today it is the sober grace of eighteenth-century architecture that meets the eye.

In mid-town the even cliff of waterfront buildings is interrupted by what the Bordelais claim to be the biggest city square in Europe —the Place des Quinconces, so-called for the quincunx arrangements of trees that decorate the huge space. In June it is the scene of a great fair, but the bedlam is short-lived and the usual sleepy mood is quickly restored.

On the site of the square a medieval citadel, the Château Trompette, once stood, and its name is preserved in one of Bordeaux's very best restaurants in a little side street nearby. Diners-out in Bordeaux debate the relative merits of the Château Trompette, Dubern (upstairs over a wonderfu Fortnum's of a food shop, in th Allée de Tourny), and the Hote Splendide's fine dining room, al within 300 yards of each other Their Bordeaux-style food lives up to the superb wines of their cellar perfectly—in fact, Bordeaux is one of the richest culinary regions o France. A woodcock, stuffed with another woodcock minced with foie gras and flamed in brandy, is a trifle to the Bordelais. They will follow it with cèpes—giant, and gloriously flavored, mushrooms— stewed in oil and garlic and parsley. They will not have stinted themselves on the fat oysters of Arcachon beforehand. Nor will they refuse the tiny wood-straw berries soaked in red wine afterward. "The better the wine, the better the dish," they say as they uncork another bottle of the same great growth as they have drunk with the game, the cèpes—oh yes, and with cheese.

Wine is in the air, in the people's blood, on their minds, and in their mouths at virtually every hour of every season. You have not seen Bordeaux until you have been into the countryside where the vines grow; they start, indeed, before you are fairly out of town, on the Graves side to the southwest. How can carpet possibly survive in all these crazy places?

Mostly because Suburbia's surface is 100% Marvess™ olefin fiber. So it doesn't do all the things you'd expect carpet to do if you left it outdoors. It doesn't absorb dirt and you can just hose it clean.

Because Marvess also won't absorb water. It's easy to mop up even buckets of it.

(We're thinking about your laundry room now.)

It also resists fading by the sun. Because the color isn't just a dye, it's actually part of the fiber. (There are eight bright, cheery colors to choose from.)

Man may not have conquered the elements, but Suburbia has. You can lay it down without fear of mildewing, curling, shrinking or any other nasty thing. It has no padding to buckle, in fact, you don't even have to nail it down. Just glue it once and that's it.

A 6′ x 10′ laundry room costs less than $40 to carpet with Suburbia. So for a lot less than the cost of a mediocre tile floor, you can enjoy the luxury of having wall-to-wall carpet in some absolutely ridiculous places.

This is only one in a series of ads that Mohawk Carpet is running with the following purpose in mind: we plan to take over your house. With practical carpets for the family room. Wildly luxurious carpets for the living room. An ingenious idea for the kitchen. The ultimate solution for your dining room. Bathroom carpets. Bedroom carpets.

We've gathered many of these ideas and put them together in an exciting little booklet. It's yours for the asking at your Mohawk dealer. If you don't know who he is, write to: Mohawk Carpet, 295 Fifth Ave., N.Y. 10016.

duces one of the four first-growth red wines of the region (which is another way of saying one of the greatest wines on earth) stands, looking only slightly affronted, in a suburb of the spreading city. To the north there is a slightly more decent interval before you reach the Médoc, but it is only twenty minutes' drive to the first of the châteaux, and from then on it is vines all the way.

There are three really essential expeditions from Bordeaux, to fit in between exploring, eating, and antique shopping in the city. Each one is a long and happy day in the country. The first is north to the Médoc; the second is south through Graves to Sauternes; the third takes you away east across the river to the hill-town of Saint-Émilion. How quickly you can get back to Bordeaux depends on what pulls you most strongly: rural peace, old crumbled stone, and quiet barns, or rich urbanity.

Beaune

The old Dukedom of Burgundy lies in the eastern part of central France. It is the fairest, fattest province of all the fair and fat provinces between Normandy and Provence; it is the countryside that symbolizes all that is fertile and fattening: snails, pike, chicken, beef, cheese, and above all wine. Dijon is the capital city of this region, but Beaune is its heart.

Beaune is a small town compared to Bordeaux or Reims, a mere market town, whose interests lie in the surrounding country, whose park is the farmland that rolls up to its gates, and whose more sophisticated inhabitants go elsewhere for their shopping and entertainment. The greater part of the city still fits within the encircling walls of its old fortress, whose patina is almost that of a farmhouse—the brown shutters unpainted, the old coach doors under the arch long unopened, the courtyard long gone to sedge and run-wild vines. The walls themselves, turreted, business-like, and thick enough, in the traditional phrase, to drive a wagon and horses around the top, are no longer complete, but they serve a purpose as useful as ever: their deep foundations and the massy masonry of their bases are a warren of vaulted crypts, each one steeped, saturated, and stocked to the roof-boss with wine.

Beaune's pride and joy is its hospital. Unlikely as it sounds that it should be worth crossing seas and traveling abroad to visit a hospital, I can think of few places from which the Hospital of Beaune is not worth the journey. What it is, in fact, is a perfect relic of the Middle Ages—not a museum, no a ruin, but a going concern, t which people come not just to look but to be cured, or to die. It was gift to the people of Beaune from their ruler, Duke Philip the Goo of Burgundy, more than 500 years ago; a gift so welcome, and s well-planned, that it runs on today just as he intended, and still with the same source of income for all its operating costs—wine.

When the Duke started the hospital, he gave it, to provide funds to carry on, several very fine vineyards in the neighborhood. From time to time ever since other people have followed his example. Today the annual sale of the hospital's wines—which are among Burgundy's, and France's, best—realizes enough money to keep the institution going for another year. The auction takes place each November in the great Gothic courtyard overlooked by wards, with the savory smell of real Burgundian cooking coming from the great, gleaming, coppery old kitchen under the cloisters. Bidders come from all over the world, prices are high, and each of the wines goes into the world under the title Hospices de Beaune, followed by the name of the cuvée—the vineyard, named for whichever benefactor gave it to the hospital.

Beaune lies on the flat valley floor below the wine-growing hillsides which bear its name and the proud names of its neighbors. It is only a few minutes' drive to the fields and farms which give France its greatest white, and some of its greatest red, wine. To the north toward Dijon the road winds past Aloxe-Corton through Nuits St. Georges, where there is a better restaurant than Beaune has to offer (or so think many of the wine men): La Croix Blanche. It is the kitchen for the famous feasts of the Confrèrie des Chevaliers du Tastevin in the nearby Clos de Vougeot, and cooks the fat, farmy food of Burgundy with the authenticity demanded by some of its proudest inhabitants. After Nuits the wine label names turn up like the numbers on the speedometer: Vosne-Romanée (the most exotic and expensive reds), Vougeot (delicate, dry), Musigny (tender, voluptuous, perfumed), and finally Chambertin. Heading in the opposite direction, south toward Lyon, the roll call is equally impressive: Pommard, Volnay, Meursault, Puligny-Montrachet, Chassagne-Montrachet, Santenay. Brief pause. Pouilly-Fuissé, Beaujolais. And Beaune lies in the midst of them all—on the way from Paris to Geneva, on the way from London to Rome, at the most savory crossroads in Europe.

Reims

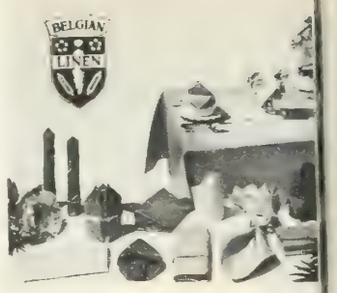
The nearest wine-city to Paris—and for that matter to London—is the capital of Champagne. Reims is a battered city, largely rebuilt, showing more of the graceless façade of the nineteen twenties than the richly textured conglomeration of centuries of growth. World War I almost destroyed it. What has survived, or been restored, however, is of such superlative interest that simply as a place of pilgrimage for art lovers Reims remains one of the first cities of France. Between its monuments and its champagne industry, it keeps fairly humming with life.

Above all else, Reims has its cathedral. When people call it the Parthenon of France, they are not just repeating Chamber of Commerce superlatives. Here, in one building, the age of the highest inspiration and the finest workmanship in the history of a nation came to fruition. Just as Athens crowned herself with the lovely hilltop pediment of golden stone on the Acropolis, so France wrought her desires and dreams into the limestone fabric of Reims cathedral, and in her temple, in symbolic ceremonial, she crowned generation after generation of her kings. Just as Phidias carved statuary whose grace has never faded for the Parthenon, so some nameless Frenchman found in his quarried blocks gestures which still express the elusive spirit of France—the gravely smiling saints and angels of Reims.

The restoration of Reims cathedral from a near-ruin (for which a vast grant came from the Rockefeller Foundation) is a wonderful tale of devotion and ingenuity. Some of the skills of the medieval masons who hung its delicate vault a hundred feet above the floor have no modern counterpart. Yet they had to be rediscovered, for the vault was gone. The towers and spires, the richly wrought façade were blackened and rotting after the bombardment; the features of celestial faces, feathers of angelic wings were crumbling and corrupting. All had to be restored or replaced. Somehow the very survival of France seemed to depend on it.

Nor is the cathedral the only great church of Reims. The Basilica of St. Remy, where the saint who gave his name to the city crowned the first Christian king of the Franks, remains at what is best of its early Romanesque austerity. And both great churches have their episcopal palaces intact. The lovely symmetry of the palace by the cathedral stands floodlit at night beside the mysterious shape of the buttressed apse like the Age of Reason beside the Age of Faith; the love of order beside the sense of wonder.

Deep in the ground under this strangely spiritual city, dank chalk vaults reverberate and chime to the sounds of industry—an industry which symbolizes the joy of



Villa Aldobrandini at Frascati, whose fountains alone are well worth the visit. This glorious showplace nearly upstages the fragrant white wine that is the town's namesake.

France almost as the cathedral symbolizes her soul. Champagne is essentially the drink of the French, however easily it crosses the seas, and however welcome it is at times of celebration everywhere. If they make seventy million bottles of champagne a year, let us remember that they drink fifty million of them themselves.

A visit to the cellars, to see the long process by which the white wine of the hills south of the city is given its sparkle, is the most rewarding excursion in the whole world of wine. Watching the laborious handcraft is—next to drinking the result—the first diversion of Reims. The city is honeycombed with cellars, all full of champagne; all the houses (as the firms call themselves) welcome visitors, explain their mysterious processes, and pass around foaming glasses at the end. You will want to drive out into the country, down to the valley of the Marne to see the little villages in the vines, and the Abbey of Hautvillers, high above the river, where the blind Dom Perignon is supposed to have invented the champagne method three centuries ago.

Reims always seems to hold, in a microcosm, the secret of France: it is the spirit of Joan of Arc, whose statue reminds you that it was in the cathedral that she crowned her Dauphin; the spirit of weariness, in the ineradicable traces of war; the spirit of resurection, in the heavenward ges- ures of Gothic stonework; the pirit of joy, in the foaming wine.

Bernkastel

The Moselle valley is a hidden orner of Germany—Catholic, con- ervative, epicurean, idyllic, and estled into the border of France. t is a different world from the iry, brash, bustling valley of the Rhine. The river moves in a trance between forests, between high anges of hills, the Hunsrück and he Eifel, between the world of golden Rhine wine and the world of crisp champagne. Every horse- shoe bend in the long green canyon of the Moselle reveals another wall of vineyard. On one such bend, the very hub of the whole Moselle wine region, lies the old town of Bern- kastel, across from its modern neighbor, Kues.

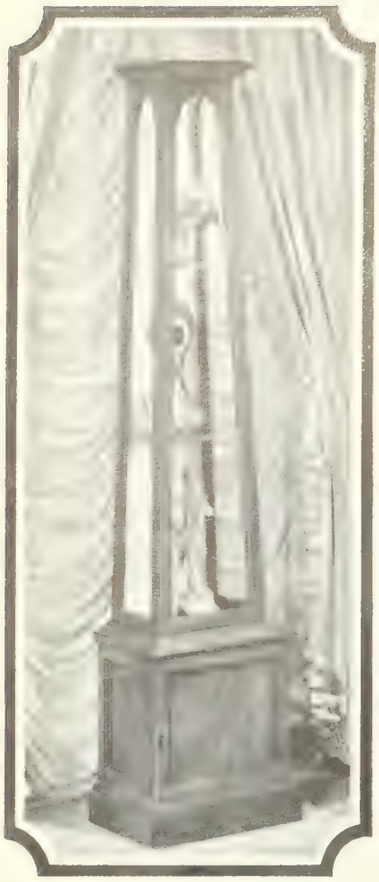
It is easy to choose Bernkastel as the German wine town to visit. Apart from its position as pivot of the Moselle, it has suffered less from war and time than almost any of these near-border towns. The town square of Bernkastel has not seriously changed in appearance since the town hall was built, in a sophisticated Renaissance manner to overawe the neighbors, 350 years ago. Most other buildings have stayed the way they were: the way of the old topping gable, of houses leaning confidentially to- ward each other, of wooden beams that refuse to forget their forest origin and writhe as much in the form of joists as ever they did in the knotty forks of trees.

The town hall is a good place to start in Bernkastel, for its ground floor is, logically enough, the town's wine cellar. Thus all municipal decisions are assured of a good foundation. The Rathskeller (or Mayor's parlor) will allow you to become familiar with the impor- tant names around these parts— without exception, the names of vineyards. Starting right in the town itself are the vineyards of Bernkastel—the famous Doktor, its neighbors Graben and Badstube, and their distinguished cousins Bratenhöfchen and Schlossberg. Slightly downstream and clearly visible from the town bridge is the cliff of vines of Graach and Wehlen and Zeltingen. Around the corner in the other direction are their rivals, the vineyards of Braune- berg, Piesport, and Trittenheim.

The visitor's first essential is to become familiar with the taste of some of these local wines. (You can ask at a hotel which grower to visit.) Then you must go out onto the hillside—which means, in the case of Bernkastel, almost verti- cally up—to see where and how such exquisitely refreshing wine is made. From the vineyards you can almost peer down the chimneys of the town. Some people even claim that they can taste the chimney smoke in Bernkastel wine.

Having gone over the ground (and walking on it is far from easy —you will never believe that at vintage time, men scramble up and down the gable-steep slopes with 200-pound hods of grapes on their backs), the next thing is to visit a cellar. Several of those are actually under the vineyards themselves. One, under the Doktor vineyard, has an air-hole going up to the sur- face a hundred feet above.

In the cellar you will taste the new wine, which is better or worse depending on the weather of the year before, but at its best is ma- gically scented, light and fresh, white just tinted with greeny gold, and just perceptibly fizzy. The way it is in a cellar on the Moselle you will never taste it anywhere else. That freshness is not a transport- able quality.



Frascati

Frascati, in the Alban hills a short drive south of Rome, is one of many towns in Italy which deserve to be called wine towns. But few merit the name as thoroughly, or carry it off so beautifully, as Fras- cati. Few are so full of interest, so welcoming, and none so accessible from the capital.

The Alban hills have been the summer retreat of the Roman no- bility since ancient times. The Pope has his summer palace, Cas- tel Gandolfo, on the slopes of the volcanic Lake Albano. Frascati, halfway up the slopes overlooking Rome, is dominated by the Villa Aldobrandini, which stands with- drawn behind gates and a great hill of lawn. Higher in the hills other great Renaissance villas, their names making a special kind of Italian poetry—Mondragone, Falconieri—lie in parks of cedars, cypress, and poplar, reserved and patrician.

Frascati is hollow with wine grotte. Every little café, every workshop, every restaurant is the doorway to a labyrinth of dank and winding, unlit and sometimes frightening, cellars. Every street corner has its pork seller, cutting slices off a hot roast of suckling pig to make sandwiches with fresh bread. In the cantine, the wine shops or cafés, the citizenry set- tles down with its bread and pork and calls for pitchers of wine.

The Brandt Cabinet Works, Inc. Dept. 680, Hagerstown, Md.

There is only one kind. It is strong, dry, fragrant, and white. "Food as well as drink," the locals say of it, meaning to warn of its strength.

In the summer the cantine blossom out onto the pavement outside their doors, happily ignoring the traffic and setting up trestle tables under the plane trees, so that the whole town seems to be a sort of open-house, pot-luck feast. As the year ripens toward harvest the streets become workshops as well, and the great fat wine barrels are rolled out onto the cobbles to be inspected and repaired. The cooper comes around like a doctor with his bag of tools to bang on the barrel staves and sniff the air inside. A trace of vinegar and the whole caskful can be ruined; a rotting stave and all can be lost. If something needs doing, he sets to work, banging away out under the planes and the walls of the dreaming old castle which has heard six centuries of this annual din. If all is well, the barrels are stood up on end and the top covered with a puddle of water to seep in and swell the wood. Before long the streets and squares are bright with these shiny discs and every tree, every turret is looking at its own reflection in the top of the barrel underneath.

By tradition the winemakers of Frascati load their wares onto bright little pony-traps from time to time and take a trip to Rome. But fewer of them go on these little commercial travels these days because more Romans come out to Frascati to drink the wine there. It has always been a place for holidays, but now it is a place to drive out to for dinner on any stifling summer evening, when the air in the hills is a blessed relief.

Jerez

The towns of southern Spain have a certain dusty remoteness that makes them particularly intriguing to visit. Perhaps because of their Moorish ancestry, they seem to turn their backs on a casual visitor and guard the secrets of their patio-hearts for those who woo and probe them. The rewards they offer the patient, interested visitor are infinitely worth the early discouragement of their high walls and faceless mansions, but there may be some lost trudging to be done before the magic moment when a patio opens up its cool greenery, its blue tiles and falling water, its unfolding palms and scented orange trees.

Jerez, the capital city of sherry, is no exception. Save for the one delirious week of the year—beginning September 8—when the town peels back its shirt front, like Superman, and reveals its full glory at the Feria, you will have to nose around to see its charms. First, and most public, of them are the sherry houses, the bodegas, cathedrals of wine entirely different from anything else the world of wine has to show. In their dim, high-roofed coolness a different process of aging and blending produces a different wine from any other on earth, despite the many imitations which have borrowed its name. It is a drink of deep, deep flavor—in its natural state, the way the makers drink it, as dry as the driest of martinis—full, fresh, fat with perfume and considerable strength. To the Jerezano it is the only drink; he drinks it, chilled, from a tall, elegant glass, all day —and never without tapas: prawns or olives, crumbles of white cheese or peppers, onions or celery.

After the bodegas there are the gardens, patios, churches, palaces, the old, old balconied streets and barred windows, the little cafés (dark and sawdusty inside, with the same rich, fragrant wine as you tasted in the bodega). Among the outlying villages and towns that contribute their wine to the bodegas, the most notable is Sanlúcar de Barrameda, which lies on the estuary of the Guadalquivir 15 miles of terrible road from Jerez. Here you will get the best seafood you have ever had at the unlikeliest-looking little restaurants that perch, in summer, on stilts out over the beach, and in rainy weather tuck themselves back into the tiny, scruffy bars from which they emerged.

During the Feria, the gardens of Jerez are hung about with lanterns, the roads are closed to all except horse-drawn vehicles and mounted men. Girls are all crinolined and mantillaed; the men in their short jackets and boots strut and pose and finger their guitars. Explosions of flamenco drown the polite strings in the elegant pavilions as though Cinderella's Ball were suddenly overrun by gypsies.

The Feria is the thanksgiving for another harvest of grapes. Joy at the coming of the new wine—the first of the year in the whole of Europe—possesses the town utterly; there is no room for any other thought. Can it be this very involvement, right through the year, with nature and the harvest that gives the wine towns, even in their quieter moments, their special atmosphere? I will keep on going back, whether I ever find out the answer or not.

Naugahyde doesn't have to look practical.

These days Naugahyde® looks more like fabric than vinyl upholstery. It's softer. More textured. Handsomer. Naugahyde vinyl still acts pretty practical though—it even welcomes a friendly toad. Scuffs and stains wash off. Naugahyde stays beautiful—for what seems like forever. Before you buy a new piece of furniture or reupholster an old one, look at the Naugahyde swatch book. You'll find 600 ways to get the job done. With or without toads.

Perk up your bathroom with Kohler lavatories in Accent Colors

Fun to be different? Sure it is—that's the accent color idea! Instead of going all the way with "a safe, neutral shade," let your lavatories provide a bold, bright note of contrast. Play red against white... accent a soft blue with a deep, rich jade. Or do as we've done here: use two accent colors, and double the excitement!

FIVE SPRIGHTLY NEW TONES help you make the most of the accent color idea. Antique Red. Citron. Expresso. Blueberry. Jade. Each in three lavatory models—oval, round, rectangular. New beauty in enameled cast iron.

LAVATORIES ARE SELF RIMMING. Round and oval Kohler lavatories (Radiant and Farmington models) need no metal rim—seal right into your counter top, neater, smoother.

A BOOKFUL OF ACCENT COLOR IDEAS. Free brochure illustrates "what-goes-with-what." We'll rush your copy if you write for "Accent Bathrooms," Kohler Co., Kohler, Wisconsin.

DIAMOND-BRIGHT "FLAIR" FITTINGS add the crowning touch. Clean of line, crystal-clear, these new acrylic fittings keep their sparkle.

Bloomcraft's Tergal® sheer voile. Why it's worth bringing all the way from France.

You have to admire FRANCE-VOILES® for the way their looms make a faultless sheer voile of 100% Tergal® polyester. For something that looks so delicate and sheer, Tergal is fantastically strong and stable. Enough so that it can hang in either direction (up and down, or sideways).

Picture what all this means if you want to cover a big picture window... or even cover a whole wall with fabric. Instead of having to seam many widths together (as you do with other fabrics) you can have Tergal seamless draperies any width! To finish the picture, consider that Tergal won't shrink, won't stretch, launders beautifully, never sags.

Tergal...it's sheer magic.

"WHAT'S IN YOUR NAME?"

An adaptation of the ancient science of Heraldry to the twentieth century!

ONDER WHAT TO GIVE THE CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD? and his president...and his purchasing agent and his secretary...and his...

u going to play the 'bottle game' again this Christmas and let him line your Scotch along with the his gifts? Not very individual, is it? Haven't you thought more than once, "I would like to know about ne and the coat of arms, but I never had the time to find out." It's not too late to think of this most l and memorable gift. We feel there is nothing quite like a personal coat of arms to spark interest endship. A coat of arms symbolizes the ancient history of a person's name. It harks back centuries s when knights with gleaming broadswords fought under colorful heraldic banners . . . When y went hand in hand with bravery . . . When names which we bear today were first recorded.

panies have employed the Sanson Institute's specialized heraldic services to create a rapport with who have helped their business grow. Othere have contacted our company to design special pro- utilizing our fine embroidery facilities. And then many are quite proud to have the coat of arms of ame to display quietly in their home or office. Our replicas of arms are individually researched stom made, be your order for one or one thousand.

COAT OF ARMS RESEARCH REPORT & DRAWING

nson Institute's private heraldic library contains the coat of arms records of almost one-half million . . . representing more than twenty European countries. Our research staff investigates each name ds the arms on record. If you wish you may order your own or any name for complete arms research port. You receive a document of the findings of the research which includes the heraldic wording arms, the source of reference, also a drawing indicating colors and illustrating the charges on the Supplementary material outlines the symbolic meanings of the elements found on the coat of arms. search service is included with every merchandise order. If, however, you wish to have a Research and drawing of the arms prior to ordering, you may request this service and a completed report mailed to you. For this service there is a fee of $5.00 ($2.00 of which is deducted on any order). Please allow us four weeks for delivery. You may consider your wife's name, special or friends' names for this research for a later gift order. Complete Arms Report & Drawing $5

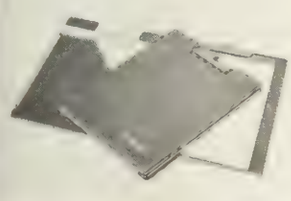
Dear Prospective Customer:

If you're not already familiar with us, we're proud to say that for over twenty years we've been bringing unique gifts by mail to people in every state. Because they're fine values backed up by a money-back guarantee, we've made many friends . . . and we'd like to number you among them.

But, try us! Order anything on this page — we're sure you'll be pleased with our merchandise and our service. We'll be glad to hear from you.

Sincerely,

Alberta Kimball



Dolphin Duffle

When two gay frolicking dolphins grin at you engagingly, it's a definite invitation to pick up the toys that you've found so diverting through a bath and put them in the big mesh bag to drain dry for the next bath! Twin tile holders have colorful dolphins painted on them —powerful suction cups hold them to the wall. Nylon mesh bag is 9¾" x 13½" to take the entire tub toy collection and drain it dry.

2430-6—Dolphin Duffle ..$1.98

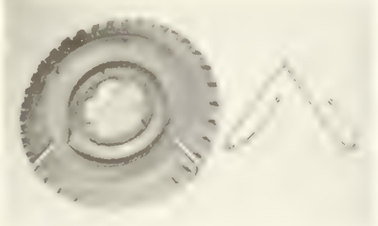
How To Order:



List the name, stock number and price of the items you want, mail to us with check or money order. Add nothing for postage — we pay all of it. Order with confidence — we guarantee satisfaction or your money back!

Personalized Clipboard Folder

Price is much of a point here but it's so handsome that it wouldn't be spurned even by the chairman of the board! Big 9½ x 12½" rigid board has luxurious padding and is covered in rough grained vinyl in deep library green. Inside is a big brass spring clip and a pad of yellow legal note paper so popular for taking notes. Large inner pocket holds important papers. Full name or initials stamped in gold.

XK834-6 Clipboard Folder, $1.50

Snow Tire Hanger Hooks

Keep expensive snow tires from further wear and rotting by holding them away from the floor and completely out of the way! Here are two pairs of heavy-duty steel hooks that attach to any 2 x 4—each pair holds one snow tire so with the set you can hang two tires. Hangers are angled so that they hug the wall. You'll have a much neater garage and more floor space when they aren't standing around and cluttering it up. Each pair of hooks attaches with one screw.

1544T-6 Snow Tire Hangers, 1 set, $1.98

Spaghetti Loop Dress Hangers

Narrow straps, skirt loops, wide-necked dresses and jumpers that slide off ordinary hangers stay in place with these! Spaghetti Loop Hangers are sturdy steel rods with rustproof nickel plating and nonsnag vinyl cushion coating—long loops curve inward to take any kind of strap or loop. Perfect for drip-dries because they're rustproof and keep shoulder shape better than ordinary hangers. They're much sturdier than old wire hangers and come in a heavenly shade of pink. Set of two.

which tells all about these wonderful, handy carts!

So many ways BETTER than a WHEELBARROW plus so many other uses!

This wonderful TOWN and COUNTRY CART holds TWICE as much as a wheelbarrow . . . EASILY carries up to 300 pounds . . . AND has so many OTHER uses.

The weight balances on the axle – you don't carry it in your hands. Won't tip over. SO much easier to push thanks to TWO BIG 20-inch wheels! Rubber tires. Ball Bearings. Only 30″ wide to go through narrow doors and gangways.

Built by Vermont craftsmen to last for years. Tight welded all-steel construction. Loose sand, dirt, etc., won't spill out the sides. Flat bottom keeps pots, pails, bottles, etc., from tipping over!

Please look at just the few sample uses shown and think how many, many ways this wonderfully handy Cart would save you time and work, and increase your enjoyment of your home, garden, grounds and hobbies.

Honestly! When you've had this TOWN and COUNTRY CART a week you'll wonder how in the world you ever did without it! And the ladies love it just as much as the men! Makes a grand gift for anyone with a nice home, camp or summer place!

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED. Use the Cart around your place for three months. If you are not delighted, just send it back! We will refund every penny of the purchase price.

How to GROW SLIM With Martinis & Whipped Cream:

News about a revolutionary reducing plan, based on a remarkable biochemical discovery, and now available in a new book which we invite you to read for 10 days at our risk.

INCREDIBLE BUT TRUE! You may eat and drink foods like martinis and whipped cream and grow slim, says Sidney Petrie, the man who reduces people who can't reduce or stay reduced by any other method people referred to him by doctors! What's more, Petrie says you may eat more than you ever thought possible . . . at TV time, between meals, at fancy restaurants . . . and never once go on a diet!

It isn't the fact that you consume calories that matters, says Petrie. What matters is the kind of calories you consume. All foods contain just three kinds of calories. To lose weight you need eliminate only one of them!

This is the CARBO-CAL the calorie that poleaxes pounds . . . the unsuspected culprit found even in such so-called "diet foods" as skimmed milk, carrot sticks, and all things melba toast!

Now, in the most thrilling book you've ever seen—so fascinating, clear-to-earth, easy-to-read book—Sidney Petrie explains this amazing fact about your body's chemistry, and shows you immediately how

- How to eat three good, full meals a day and STILL lose weight safely, comfortably, steadily—without having to count calories, go to bed hungry, measure food helpings—without doing anything at all, except cutting out a few Carbo-Cal foods you're probably not fond of anyway!
- How, having once attained the weight you want, you can keep it and still eat hearty meals—even frankfurters and fried eggs, whipped cream, butter, etc.—without putting back the weight you've lost!
- How you can eat every kind of fried food except one, every kind of appetizer except certain soups, actually eat custard desserts, ice cream, drink cocktails, enjoy steaks, and much more—and stay slim!
- Why it doesn't matter how you prepare food, and why you don't have to follow any special recipes—so long as you follow one simple rule!
- How to walk into any restaurant—and be limited in your food choice ONLY by price!
- All the things you CAN eat, as opposed to other methods that tell you only what you can't eat!
- How to recognize foods that have the Carbo-Cal, avoid them, and keep eating the "good" calorie foods.
- Why foods that contain the Carbo-Cal don't really satisfy you even though they leave pounds of fat on you—while good calorie foods make you feel like you've had a good, satisfying meal, even though the body quickly consumes them!
- Why doctors may recommend this diet to people with various glandular troubles who could otherwise eat practically nothing on a "regular diet"—and why this diet system may be used by those with low blood sugar counts—and by vegetarians!
- How this revolutionary reducing plan is linked to a low cholesterol count, better skin condition, resistance to colds, freedom from minor aches and pains, increased virility, and a 15 to 25% longer life span!
- Why many sauces, gravies and dressings—taboo by other methods—are perfectly acceptable by this one (and this includes one of the greatest, pleasantest surprises of all, if you've ever suffered through a starvation diet)!

Makes Weight-Reduction Easy, Pleasant, Effortless

The new Carbo-Cal method is backed by case histories of lost weight totaling 30,000 pounds. The author of the book, Sidney Petrie, perfected this remarkable method after 8 years of private practice among the rich all of whom were referred to him by physicians and other specialists.

During that time his method melted away the pounds like magic, helping people even the medical "experts" couldn't help. What's more, since observation by play-team found no ill effects, this fast, easy method lets dieters "feast by fasting" and shows them immediately how

That's why we urge you to read and try this book at our risk for ten days. It will really open your eye to a bright, fabulously effective method that lets you reduce without dieting or pill. Enjoying exciting, satisfying meals at every meal, the will power. And nothing to eat all weight loss may be your guide.

That's right After you've reached the slimness you want, Sidney Petrie promises you this—

"You can [illegible] and still remain slender!"

CASE HISTORIES OF CARBO-CAL IN ACTION

CASE HISTORY OF HELEN G., expert Weight Lel Diagnosis: 76 lbs. overweight, severe angina and high blood pressure. Used standard three-meal-a-day diet [illegible] loss. Treated with Carbo-Cal system. 76 lbs. lost in 7 months, angina vanishes, blood pressure down.

CASE HISTORY OF JEAN J., [illegible] Problem: developed serious weight condition after birth of second child. Treatment: [illegible] pills, exercise, even Cortisone. Result: No permanent loss. Discouraged, about to [illegible] Carbo-Cal system. 26 lbs. lost in 5 months. Clothes look like she's had new figure made to measure. Has kept normal weight ever since!

MESSAGE MINDER
Why waste time scrawling a hurriedly written note that may prove difficult for someone else to read? Merely flipping a button and speaking into Message Minder creates a sharp & clear voice message on a tape that never needs changing. When the absentee returns, he merely turns the switch which automatically causes the message to repeat continuously. Another flip of the button erases the message clearing it for the next. Compact, attractive, completely portable and simple to operate. Works on standard batteries. Batteries & tape included. 6" tall x 3" x 2"

We, the originators of oil portrait number kits, have enabled thousands of people with no prior experience to paint quality portraits of loved ones. Our exclusive system gave you the finest reproduction at the lowest possible price. No mis-shaped abstracts! From your photo or color slide (any size) every brush stroke area is outlined and numbered on a fine mounted 16" x 20" canvas (standard portrait size). Twenty four cups of individually mixed artist's oil paint, marked for the numbered areas are provided with screw cap lids to preserve freshness. The kit also includes: an artist's palette, fine brushes, brush cleaner. Please indicate hair and eye coloring. All photos returned unharmed.

Amazing New NEL-KING WALLPAPER REMOVER
No expensive steaming
No tiresome scraping

Wallpaper practically falls off in your hand when you remove it with NEL-KING WALLPAPER REMOVER. Simply mix 2 ozs. of this wonder-working liquid concentrate in a gallon of water and apply to paper with rag, brush, sponge or spray. WALLPAPER REMOVER penetrates paper, loosens adhesive, and paper "skins off" smoothly in a matter of minutes. Works miraculously on several layers of paper and even on troublesome painted-over wallpaper. As safe to use as water. Only $2.98 + 25c postage for pint—enough for 3 average rooms. Results guaranteed or money back if returned postpaid within 30 days.

Locust Grove was built near Louisville circa 1790 by William and Lucy Clark Croghan. A fine example of Georgian architecture, it was the home of General George Rogers Clark, Mrs. Croghan's brother, from 1809 until 1818. Restoration is being carried out by the Historic Homes Foundation. The H. J. Scheirich Company is co-sponsoring the work on the kitchen.

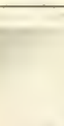
Solid, Hand-Cast Museum Series

CHESS SETS

Authentic Museum Reproductions
Richly Hand-Glazed Stone & Resin



For sheer beauty and the romance of antiquity, there is nothing to compare with these superb sets. Each solid piece has the heft and appearance of the original figurines. Only the finest specimens from the nation's greatest collections, under license from the museums, were selected for casting. Each includes descriptions of original pieces and numbered so that the original can be located in respective museums. Each chess piece is easy to recognize because the King is a king, the Queen is a female, etc. Data is supplied concerning each piece [illegible]. Each set in a 18¾ x 19½ x 2" gift box with built-in playing board with museum motif. If you were fortunate enough to own the original pieces from which these [illegible] were hand-cast it would cost you tens of thousands of dollars.

PRE-COLUMBIAN INDIAN CHESS SET (as illustrated above). Chessmen in luxurious green and white jade glaze. King stands 4⅞" tall with other pieces in proportion. Solid hand-cast stone and resin is break-resistant. Board motif is museum's Indian design. Weighs 5 lbs. $19.95 plus $1 pp. & hd.

PRIMITIVE AFRICAN CHESS SET. Pieces in rich ivory and mahogany glaze reproduced directly from African fetish figurines. King is massive [illegible] head 4⅛" high. Board reproduces African motif. Weighs 5 [illegible] lbs. $24.95 plus $1 pp. & hd.

EGYPTIAN CHESS SET. Each unit in this novel set artfully hand-glazed in lapis lazuli blue and bone white. Original specimens over 2600 years old. Brilliant sculpture. King is 4½" high. Museum scarab motif. Weighs 3½ lbs. $17.95 plus $1 pp. & hd.

Solid, Hand-Cast Museum Series

CHESS SETS

Authentic Museum Reproductions
Richly Hand-Glazed Stone & Resin

For sheer beauty and the romance of antiquity, there is nothing to compare with these superb sets. Each solid piece has the heft and appearance of the original figurines. Only the finest specimens from the nation's greatest collections, under license from the museums, were selected for casting. Each includes descriptions of original pieces and numbered so that the original can be located in respective museums. Each chess piece is easy to recognize because the King is a king, the Queen is a female, etc. Data is supplied concerning each piece in chess play. Each set in a 18¾ x 19½ x 2" gift box with built-in playing board with museum motif. If you were fortunate enough to own the original pieces from which these chessmen were handcast, it would cost you tens of thousands of dollars

PRE-COLUMBIAN INDIAN CHESS SET (as illustrated above). Chessmen in luxurious green and white jade glaze. King stands 4⅞" tall with other pieces in proportion. Solid hand-cast stone and resin is break-resistant. Board motif is museum's Indian design. Weighs 5 lbs. $19.95 plus $1 pp. & hd.

PRIMITIVE AFRICAN CHESS SET. Pieces in rich ivory and mahogany glaze reproduced directly from African fetish figurines. King is massive sculptured head 4⅛" high. Board reproduces African motif. Weighs 5½ lbs $24.95 plus $1 pp. & hd

EGYPTIAN CHESS SET. Each unit in this novel set artfully hand-glazed in lapis lazuli blue and bone white. Original specimens over 2600 years old. Brilliant sculpture. King is 4½" high. Museum scarab motif. Weighs 3½ lbs $17.95 plus $1 pp. & hd

At 4½ she's reading 3rd grade books

a child prodigy? not at all! your child, too can be reading one, two or three years beyond his present age level...even if he's a "poor" reader now

Prove it to yourself...with this 7 day free trial!

ing is fun for Sarah—as it should r every child. At age four and a she's already choosing her own at the San Diego, Cal. library. e reads books many third graders 'hard going." Yet she won't enter grade for another year.

rah is typical of thousands of chil- who learned to read with "Listen Learn with Phonics" — a reading at actually makes reading fun.

isten and Learn with Phonics" was oped by a reading expert. It has endorsed, after extensive testing achers, schools, and educators.

is practical (and inexpensive) e-learning kit fascinates eager g minds from three to ten. The hears the letters or sounds on the ograph record, sees them in his and repeats them himself. This s an absorbing game of better ng—with amazing results!

EXAMPLE:

w or average readers show sudden, en spectacular improvement in ding, in spelling, in understanding.

- Older children often advance their reading skills several years beyond their age levels.
- Young "pre-schoolers" actually teach themselves to read by this simple but startlingly effective phonics method of words, pictures, and records.

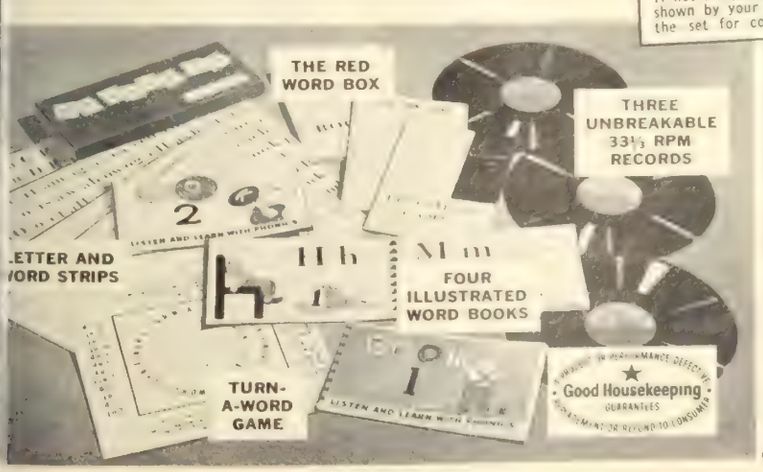
6 TEACHING GAMES INCLUDED FREE
Set includes six separate "word building" games. All six are sent with your Listen and Learn Phonics Set FREE of charge!

TEACHERS & PARENTS ACCLAIM RESULTS

"I received your Combination Teaching Set and am positively delighted with it! . . . your marvelous approach to reading is just what we need."
Mrs. Rogavin, Central High School, Snyder, N.Y.

"We purchased 'Listen and Learn With Phonics' . . . for our nine year old son . . . within two weeks his reading had improved 100%."
Mrs. Gregory Knight, San Leandro, Cal.

4-MONTH UNCONDITIONAL GUARANTEE
If not delighted with the progress shown by your child—just return the set for complete refund.



These "Learning Tools" Simple to Use!
You don't need special teaching skills to use this program. Nor do you need any special knowledge of phonics.

In fact, your child needs no special supervision on your part. This set is so simple, so fascinating, he can learn "on his own" without help.

7-DAY FREE TRIAL — PLUS 4-MONTH MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE!
Results are so dramatic, the publishers will make the complete kit available to your child with an equally dramatic FREE trial and guarantee.

Under the terms of this unusual offer you can test the kit free of charge for seven days. Moreover you may use the kit for four months and then return it for full refund if you're not completely satisfied with your child's progress!

See for yourself how fast your child can learn to read. Just fill out and mail the coupon below. There's no obligation, and six teaching games are included free—yours to keep whether you buy or not. Americana Interstate, a division of Grolier, Inc., publishers of Book of Knowledge, Mundelein, Ill.

Can't read a note of music?

Fine!

We've invented something for people just like you: people who want to make music that sounds like something...without a lifetime of learning.

It's a completely automatic, visual playing guide called the Conn "Show-Chord" that shows you how to play the basic chords without the aid of a book. With "Show-Chord," a beginner's simplest melodies enjoy a rich chord accompaniment. You are actually creating music in a matter of minutes, yet "Show-Chord" will never restrict or limit your ability. It's like a built in teacher that only helps you become more proficient faster than you ever imagined.

You'll find this amazing Conn exclusive on Models 460 (illus.) and 432. These ideal home spinet organs for beginners, with solid state circuitry, also offer such dramatic features as: 2 speed built-in Leslie speaker, repeat percussion. And your choice of the most popular decorator styles.

Conn Models start at $895. Your Conn dealer can arrange convenient terms. And even if you can't read a note of music, we'll have you playing familiar tunes in minutes!

Notes for September gardener

It takes many brooks and rills to keep t mainstream of gardening flowing briskl

First weekend

Plastic plumbing. Among the modern inventions that the gardener can readily do without, the hose is not included. While half the nozzles and sprayers and sprinkling devices on the market are scarcely worth the dies they are stamped from, the hose itself has no equal as a basic water deliverer. Therefore a strategic placement of hose connections becomes important. The one or two sill cocks provided by the builder of your house seldom prove to be conveniently located for anything more strategic than washing the automobile or sluicing down the front steps. But a mail-order reel of plastic pipe and a couple of dollars' worth of fittings (from a local plumbing supply dealer) will put a hose station (plastic successor to the standpipe) wherever about the the yard you may want it. The mounting of a faucet (hose bib) on a fence post on the far side of the garden, the connecting of the necessary threaded oddments to the house sill cock line, the setting of the stainless-steel clamps where plastic meets plastic require little more than a nodding acquaintance with a screw driver and a Stillson wrench. But the laying of the pipe —there is the chore.

Makers of do-it-yourself watering kits tell you to open a slit in the lawn (garden) with a sharp spade and push the plastic pipe down into the slit. In the first place, no spade is that sharp. In the second place, the average lawn is too inelastic to have either a slit or a piece of pipe simply pushed into it. In the third place, to dig a full-scale trench for a piece of half-inch pipe is an act of supererogation. So here is a compromise that has proved its worth. 1. With a sharp half-moon turf edger (sharpen it with a file), make a slightly slanting cut across any turf areas the pipe is to traverse (cultivated dirt areas are easy). Follow a tightly drawn garden line for a straight course. 2. Make a second cut on the return trip, abou inch-and-a-half from the firs and slanting toward it. 3. Re and lay to one side the V-s ribbon of sod thus formed. 4. someone unreeling the pipe a of you (100 feet of heavy plastic pipe, ½-inch size, w scarcely 5 pounds), chung the into the bottom of your V w trowel handle. 5. Replace the immediately. Addendum: in country, leave the garden fa open when you shut off the supply before winter. Water i pipe will evaporate enough to vent breaking of the plastic which has ample give to it any Little green schoolhou There is always one class gr ating and a new bunch of be ners coming along. As with little red schoolhouse, so with little green one. Every garde who pursues his avocation lon zealously enough sooner or l acquires a plant nursery. There an out-of-the-way corner of garden, he nurtures odd seedli rooted cuttings, small gift pla or valuable rarities, inexpen because small, that may nee temporary growing space w they can be protected and loo after for a season or two. O such a nursery gets establis plants are always going in coming out of the rows. Neatn and an orderly arrangement rows are neither required nor e possible. That can be a good thi indeed, because the sixth grad so to speak, can protect the f graders, the fourth the second, so on. As one large (relative azalea, say, goes out into the o garden, put three rooted cutti of Euonymus alatus compactus its place. Protected by remain large plants, the little ones will shaded, and will be less likely be weeded out or stepped on in vertently. Of such minutiae is g dening made.

ok note. For some reason deners, as a group, seem gen- lly to take special pleasure in presence and the activities and song of birds. Certainly no bird consume enough insects to win gardener's heart, yet gardeners m to make good if not energetic d watchers. A small new volume oted to the attracting and feed- of birds has the disarming title, e Bird Table Book (Taplinger, 50). Tony Soper, the author, is trade a photographer and mak- of wild-life documentaries. This ok is pleasantly full of facts on food, feeding, nesting habits, gs, and general behavior of glish birds. Since many English ds are also found here, Ameri- ns with a cheerful interest like . Soper's may enjoy his book— illustrations, too.

anageable bulbs. The time s come to think about ordering e winter's forcing bulbs. These, course, are the daffodils, hya- nths, tulips that are to be potted metime next month, chilled out- ors for a month or so, and ought into indoor bloom in Feb- ary and March. (For the other nds of bulb plantings timely this onth and next, outdoors see page 6.) And when you do make up e indoor order, be sure to order ose kinds and varieties that omise to do well in pots. These e not necessarily the ones noted asterisks, in many catalogues, "suitable for forcing." Any rdy spring bulb is suitable for e proper kind of forcing—horti- lturally, that is. Esthetically— ell, that is another subject. There , for example, no more spectacu- r tulip than the brilliant Darwin ybrid, 'Gudoshnik.' But in a owded 8-inch bulb pan? Heaven rbid. Even the less statuesque ut bigger flowers of the fosteriana ybrids tend to become shapeless unches of color in small con- iners. Better to stick with the ngle and double earlies (among lips), the handsome but overly ivilized 'Silver Star' and 'King lfred' and 'Mrs. Krelage' (among e daffodils). These and their ke, with big flowers, sturdy but odest stems, healthy foliage, and n absolutely incorruptible ability bloom under the greatest range f conditions, are the most satis- actory kinds for a window sill. he great lily-flowered tulips, the ewest of the large-cup and trum- pet narcissi require either staking to keep them upright or absolutely flawless culture, or both, to bring out their best. The old dependables will fill a winter window with beauty at bargain prices and for an ordinary citizen's efforts.

Fourth weekend

Cover crops. Whatever became of winter rye? For that matter, whatever became of the home vegetable garden? Show us the latter and we will gladly sing the praises of the former. This is largely rhetorical, of course, because there still are and always will be a band of durable diehards for whom the charms of a well-grown hill of beans (pole beans, maybe?) will always be irresistible. Even for the devotees of sweet corn transferred instantly from stalk to boiling cook-pot, of fingerling carrots drowned in butter, of a tender 'Bibb' lettuce leaf cut down before its prime, of cole slaw made from the crispest of heads of 'Red Acre' cabbage, of a succulent 'Big Boy' tomato just because boy, is it big —even for such as these, the necessity for replenishing the harvest-depleted soil may not seem sufficiently urgent. Hence the admonition, long since urged by county agents' pamphlets and yellowing guidebooks on home food production, to sow a crop of winter rye with and following the final vegetable harvest of the year. When the last bean rows come out, sow winter rye in the ground tilled by pulling the old plants. As you harvest that big cabbage plant, scatter some rye seed in its place. If you started some late spinach between rows of summer beets or carrots, sow rye between the spinach rows now that the intermediate rows are empty. A hasty scratching with an iron rake or potato hook is all the tilling the soil will require to give winter rye a chance to catch.

The payoff comes in late November or early December, when a chill Saturday may be warmed by your labor as you spade in the 6 lusty inches of rye. Or it may come in late March, when, perspiring more freely in the spring sun, you turn under a foot or two of handsome green cover. If you spade in the autumn and leave the turned land rough, winter will break down the buried rye, put the ground in plantable tilth for the earliest spring sowings. But winter rye, remember—not rye grass.

HOW TO BUY PAINT

Pointers on obtaining the colors you want, the types you should have, and the correct amounts for your particular job

If you are about to embark on a painting project—whether you are having the whole house painted or just one room—you will find there are distinct advantages to be gained from buying the paint yourself. You can be sure of getting a good quality. You can be sure of getting the best type of paint for each surface to be covered. Above all, you can be sure of getting exactly the right color.

There are three different kinds of paint colors today: ready-mixed, painter-mixed, and formula-mixed. Ready-mixed colors are the standard hues that each manufacturer puts out already mixed in the can. You can buy them at any hardware store, but the selection is somewhat limited out of four blues on the color card, for instance, you might not find one that comes anywhere near the blue you have in mind. At the other extreme are the colors a painter mixes on the job by adding pigment to basic white. But today the old-fashioned craftsman who could magically, with a drop of this and a drop of that, conjure up any color you asked for is a vanishing breed.

The most modern type of paint color is the formula-mixed variety. For these the pigments are precisely measured out according to formulas supplied by the paint manufacturer, and whipped up with the basic white in a big machine. By this system the manufacturers can offer you a choice of as many as a thousand colors, which to all practical purposes means any color you want. All H&G Colors are formula-mixed.

WHERE TO BUY PAINT

Do not, however, count on finding formula-mixed colors at every store that sells paint. You will have to go to one that is equipped with the necessary mixing machine and formulas—a paint dealer who specializes in paint, painting accessories, and possibly wallpapers. And be prepared to wait until your paint is properly mixed. If he tells you it will take twenty minutes, don't rush him, because at least that amount of time is necessary for the machine to turn out a smooth blend.

WHERE TO FIND H&G COLORS

If you decide on an H&G Color, your paint shopping will be greatly simplified. The first step is t tain a set of H&G Color Chip a copy of H&G's Pocket Colo rectory (you will find the blank for both on page 232). you have made your color s tions, consult the directory fo names of the paint manufact who produce them. Then through the Paint listing in yellow pages of your local phone book to find the name paint dealer in your locality carries the products of one of t manufacturers. When you g the store, it would be a good to ask for the paint by brand n as well as by the name of the H Color.

HOW TO MATCH OTHER COLOR

If you are trying to match a c that is not on the H&G pal you will have to go to the store comb through the manufactur sample books. Your own sampl the color you want to ma should, if possible, be in the fo of a scrap of wallpaper or a bi painted wood since fabric or car samples, because of their textu tend to look deceptively differ from painted surfaces that are actly the same shade. If you w to duplicate a color already on wall, detach a light switch, a b plug, or even, if you must, a clo shelf to use as your sample. But low for the fact that the paint w have darkened—from either dirt oxidation or both—and that a v bold color will have lost some of intensity.

When you are adventuri with a color you have never liv with before, it is a good idea to b one quart to try out before you vest in ten gallons and discover y don't like it. Paint a small inco spicuous area such as the inside a closet door. Let it dry thoroug ly, then check the color at the tim of day when the room is used t most. And don't forget the lightin A dining room, for instance, is a to be seen most often by candl light, a kitchen under a flood daylight or fluorescent light.

WHAT TYPES OF PAINT TO ASK FO

There are three major types paint: oil base, latex or acryli and epoxy. Oil paint is soluble turpentine, mineral spirits, or odo less thinner, and most profession painters still prefer it because the amiliar with its properties. eur painters, on the other are almost unanimously in of latex or acrylic paints, of which are soluble in water. are easier to work with and to clean up after. A room ed with a water-soluble paint be used as soon as the last stroke is completed.

Both oil base and water-so- paints are available in ver- specially designed for indoor or outdoor use. Once the use ater-soluble paints was limit- indoor surfaces where not scrubbing would be neces- but today there are excellent and acrylic paints that can ed in bathrooms and kitchens ell as living rooms. In fact, for iors, latex paint is now con- ed preferable because it athes"—that is, it allows mois- to escape, which retards blist- , cracking, and peeling.

Whether you are buying paint indoor or outdoor use, and her you decide on the oil or the water-soluble type, you also have to decide on the h. All oil paints come in matte flat), semi-gloss, and gloss hes; all water-soluble paints, matte and semi-gloss. Choose finish most suitable for each ace to be painted. A white ceil- for instance, will be an impor- light-reflector, so it should be n a matte finish. Acoustic tile ld always be painted with te paint, thinned according to dealer's recommendations. On room and kitchen ceilings, ever, semi-gloss finishes are erally more desirable because can be washed and are mois- -resistant. Plaster walls and lboard can take a matte, semi- ss, or gloss finish, but most dec- ors prefer the matte except for hen or bathrooms. For wood- k you can use either semi-gloss in an oil paint only, a matte sh, but the semi-gloss is really ter on trim and doors because it ists marring and can be washed eatedly without losing its orig- l color.

You can get H&G Colors in h oil base and water-soluble nts, for either indoors or out- rs, and in any finishes. Some G Colors are also available in nsparent wood stains, but these uld be used only on the wood which they are recommended e on other woods the color ef- t may turn out to be something ite different.

The third major type of paint epoxy or polyester—is a new d of hard-surface enamel with a ish that is almost like porcelain. signed for surfaces that need extremely durable glossy paint, is wonderful for refinishing the tile walls of bathrooms or kitchens when the tiles have become crazed and the grout darkened. Immediately before using epoxy paint, you have to mix the contents of two separate cans—a catalyst and a reactor—for epoxy hardens by chemical reaction rather than evaporation. It is soluble only in its own special thinner (don't forget to buy a supply of that along with the twin cans of the paint) and comes in a limited range of colors suitable for the purposes for which it is intended—white, pastels, and black.

HOW MUCH PAINT WILL YOU NEED?

The amount of paint required for a given job depends to some extent on the type of surface to be covered, its present condition, and the colors involved. It takes more paint to cover a dark color with a light one than vice versa, and to cover any color with yellow takes the most paint of all. But before you can make even a rough estimate, you will have to take careful measurements and calculate the number of square feet involved. To estimate the wall surface, measure the perimeter of the room and multiply by the height. Do not deduct for windows unless they measure more than 100 square feet. If the ceiling is to be painted, don't forget to measure its area, too. The label on the paint can usually tells how many square feet each gallon of the paint should cover, but since you must go to the store to read the label, it might be best to enlist the dealer's help in figuring out how many gallons or fractions thereof you will need.

It will pay you, in fact, to have a heart-to-heart talk with the dealer on every aspect of your paint-buying project. Not only will he help you with your arithmetic, he can tell you exactly what kind of paint you will find most satisfactory and how much extra you should allow for your particular job. Be sure to mention the color of the paint you have to cover. If its present condition is terrible, cast away false pride and tell him that, too, so that he can judge whether you should plan on one coat or two. Be sure to order enough, but don't go overboard, because once the paint is mixed to formula, it is yours. On the other hand, if you run out unexpectedly, you can order another gallon or even another quart. (Be sure to make note of the manufacturer's name and exact color number.)

Surfaces that have not previously been painted will also require a base coat or primer. Ideally, new plaster walls should dry and age for at least three months before being painted. If you don't

What good is a dishwasher detergent if it's no good in your water?

Every dishwasher detergent manufacturer knows that no one dishwasher detergent works equally well in all kinds of water. Yet nobody does anything about it — except the makers of FINISH. They have developed special formulas of FINISH for different types of water. Before they send your Special Formula FINISH into your area they test it in various types of water prevalent in your area. They make sure that your Special Formula FINISH washes dishes cleaner and shines glasses brighter than any other detergent.

It stands to reason that the world's largest producers of dishwasher detergents wouldn't go so far out of their way to give you a better product if it weren't important. Nor would the manufacturers of all 28 makes of dishwashers approve it. Do you consider it important enough to try your Special Formula FINISH in your dishwasher?

FOUR PRETTY ROSES FOR NEXT YEAR

Pink is the prettiest color for roses and the word is pink for the 1967 selection of a score of All-America test-garden judge

'Lucky Lady' rates in modern rose terminology as a grandiflora type, with many clusters of pink bloom, but also many flowers borne one-to-a-stem.

'Bewitched' is a more graceful and dignified hybrid tea rose than its name suggests. Its big blooms are clear pink, produced on sturdy plants.

'Gay Princess' has much of the vigor of its parent, 'Spartan,' but is a much gentler rose, with typical floribunda clusters in two tones of clearest pink.

'Roman Holiday' ignites in splashes of orange-red. It is a well-named seedling of the cluster-flowered floribunda, 'Circus.' Modest perkiness is perhaps its chief characteristic.

Who's afraid of a pattern on the floor? You won't be when you see how easy, how practical decorating can be with this luxurious Alexander Smith carpet of nylon.

In-the-know women discovered it years ago: a dull floor is about as stylish as last season's hemline. There's a spirited excitement in patterned carpeting on the floor—especially when it's a timeless design from Classic Flair, Alexander Smith's Fine Arts Collection.

Blue Rhapsody (above) is one of many patterns in this collection, which ranges from the daringly vivid to the softly muted. And long-wearing nylon makes each one as practical to live with as it is beautiful to look at.

One was created with your room—and your decorating ideas—in mind. At about $12.95 a square yard. Also available in beautiful fringed area rugs in sizes from 3′ x 5′ (only $39.95) to 15′ x 18′8″.

New booklet tells you how to have a cleaner home

(with less work)

The only book of its kind out . . . because it covers a whole new concept of cleaning the air in your home.

Did you know . . .

- That the Honeywell Electronic Air Cleaner removes up to 19 times as many particles as the ordinary filters you see in most warm air furnaces and air conditioning systems?
- That your home contains millions of airborne impurities—pollen, soot, smoke, bacteria, industrial waste—90% of which you can't even see?
- That it's these invisible particles which do most of the real damage?
- That the Honeywell unit traps particles so tiny that it would take about 7000 of them to stretch across this dot (·)?

Startling facts!

This booklet will surprise most people because they can't see the particles, and aren't aware of the problems caused by dirty air.

Does your house have any of these tell-tale signs of dirty air?

- Soil on furniture and draperies?
- Dingy haze on mirrors and windows?
- White areas lurking behind pictures?

New booklet shows you how and why the New Honeywell Electronic Air Cleaner can relieve these problems

Your family will breathe cleaner air . . . and may find relief from discomfort due to airborne irritants. You won't throw away your dust cloth, but dusting will be reduced, and you can save on cleaning bills.

Can fit any home

The Honeywell Air Cleaner fits into the return air duct of any forced air heating-cooling system. If you don't have forced air, a portable model is available.

Introducing H&G COLORS for 1967

Color is often compared to music, each color a precious gift that can be woven into a delightful tissue of harmony. The basic colors are our notes; the graduations from pale to deep, our octaves. And the louds, the softs, the shrills, and the mellows give us a symphony orchestra's almost limitless tonal variety. But like music, color can also be clashing or tiresome—if either the elements or their combinations are not what they should be. Deeply concerned about the excellence of both, H&G presents in this issue, for the twentieth consecutive year, a rounded palette of thirty-six glowing colors along with the newest, freshest ideas on how to use them.

H&G Colors are no arbitrary selections plucked from the rainbow at an editor's whim. Based on months of intensive research in collaboration with our color research consultant, Faber Birren, they constitute an up-to-the-minute reflection of our ever-changing tastes in color—trends that evolve slowly but surely year by year and decade by decade. Each year's palette contains a number of hues which have already become familiar, plus a limited group of new ones that indicate the direction in which we are moving. All of them are colors you will find in generous supply when you shop for any kind of furnishings or decorative materials—paints, wallpapers, fabrics, furniture finishes, floor coverings, decorative accessories, china, table linens, even appliances and utensils for your kitchen. And because you can be confident of finding the exact shade you need to carry out a cherished idea or match something you already have, you can complete your color schemes exactly as you planned them. No compromising this way or that to fit what you happen to run across in the stores. Your own personal preferences can have free play, too, since every year H&G's palette includes at least two or three members of each color family.

In the twenty years since we started the H&G color program, color has burst out like a dancing kaleidoscope in every facet of our lives (see page 132). Home furnishings colors, which in the early postwar days ran an uninspiring gamut from battleship gray to muddy dubonnet, have become clean, clear (clearer, even when slightly muted), and exhilarating to work with. And countless other objects in our lives—utilitarian devices that never knew color before—have blossomed into hues as radiant as a bouquet of anemones. The number of manufacturers who match their products to H&G Colors has mushroomed from a modest ninety-six (the year we started) to a current total of over 400. And the number of leading stores that are headquarters for merchandise in H&G Colors has grown from fifty-seven to nearly 200 (see the list on page 160). To expedite your search for these colors when you go shopping you can take along a set of pocket-size samples—H&G Color Chips—as well as H&G's Pocket Color Directory, available this year for the first time, in which you can look up the manufacturers who match H&G Colors in the products you need. You will find an order blank for both these planning aids on page 232.

Our kaleidoscope of color...

Color is more than hue. Every shade or tint in the rainbow (natural or man-made) has a character of its own—intense or muted, bold or shy, blaring or subtle. But colors in combination have a character, too, which sometimes leads to surprising paradoxes: two colors pitted against each other in sharp contrast may seem far bolder than either color alone, while a subtly blended company of fairly intense hues will sometimes turn out to be unexpectedly quiet and serene. How the twofold character of color changes from year to year and decade to decade is the theme of H&G's continuing color story.

This year you will see only a modicum of change in the character of the colors themselves. Of the five new hues on our 1967 palette, opposite page, two—Pompeiian Red and Tawny Olive—are rich, deep, and slightly muted, continuing the trend toward gentler, quieter colors that started a year ago. Two others—Parrot Green and Goldfinch—are fresh additions to our clean, clear family of brights, both of them somewhat more vivid than their counterparts of last year, but far lighter than the bold hues of five years ago. The fifth newcomer—Forget-Me-Not—is on the light side, too, but like our new deep tones, slightly muted.

Far more apparent, this year, than the slight shift in the character of the colors themselves is the change in the way we are using color in our rooms. As H&G predicted a year ago, we are moving away from weird contrasts and shock effects toward a more serene mood. Color schemes are becoming simpler, composed of fewer colors. Sometimes a whole room will contain only two colors plus wood tones, and often one of the two colors will be white. Whenever three or more hues are combined, one of them as a rule is decidedly dominant, while the others play distinctly subsidiary roles. The newest way of all to use color—although by no means the only way—is to create an effect of super-saturation, an opulent one-color look. From the room-of-many-colors of half-a-dozen years ago we have come full cycle.

A one-color theme has numerous advantages. You can be as lavish as you like with your personal favorites, go all out with a rich red, a tangy yellow green, or a soft blue. For it doesn't matter what kind of color you pick—deep or light, muted or bright—as long as you play it to the hilt. Which does not, of course, mean that every surface and object in the room must match. A light-handed use of bright accents including bright white often helps to emphasize the impression that the room is drenched in a single color. So does a liberal use of black which, being no color, underlines the dominance of the hue that plays the leading role. Yet, as bold as this concentration on one color may sound, the visual result is unexpectedly serene. Painting large areas of a room the same color tends to blank out disturbing details such as awkward beams and jogs that distract the eye and create a restless mood. It is sharp contrasts, rather than sharp colors, that make a room seem jumpy. When the eye can rest on large areas of the same hue, even comparatively intense shades seem pleasantly calm, as you can see in the five rooms that follow, each of which achieves similar ends by somewhat different means.

POMPEIIAN RED

One major color for all the painted surfaces plus fabric in a secondary color was the simplified scheme that interior designer Tom Britt chose for the living room of his own family's apartment. Although Pompeiian Red and Jade are both strong colors, the over-all effect is serene because the eye travels across window, wall, and ceiling undistracted by architectural details, and scans with ease the chairs and sofas all covered alike.

The true color character of a muted tone comes to light when it is lavished on large areas, as in the Ben Grauers' library—then sparingly accented by two or three bright contrasts. Mrs. Grauer—interior designer Melanie Kahane—confined Pompeiian Red and pale yellow to small, scattered touches, and stepped up the dominance of Tawny Olive by covering overmantel with black burlap and floor with white vinyl.

TAWNY OLIVE

PARROT GREEN

One color in varied textures supported by other members of the same color or family preserves the serenity characteristic of the one-color room, even when the major hue is as sharp as Parrot Green. Black and white in almost equal measure deftly accent the color opulence of this entrance hall repeated from our cover.

FORGET-ME-NOT

One gentle, lighter color takes on unexpected strength as a solo hue when combined with bold intricate patterns and off-black. In the bedroom designer Tom Britt created for Christopher Chodoff, he chose Forget-Me-Not for walls, curtains, bedcovers—as background for Coromandel screens, French iron bed.

GOLDFINCH

Even a clear bright light can take the lead in a "one-color" room if it is used in two or three gradations of value. Interior designer Charles Dear, in his own apartment, repeated the Goldfinch hue of the curtains and daybed in a lighter value on the walls and in a still paler tint on the ceiling. For his one large departure from yellow he chose a related, muted hue—the soft Fern of the velvet-covered lounge chair.

Should I use color to play up my upholstered furniture

Yes, if you want to emphasize deep-seated comfort or prefer to keep your walls subdued.

Two hues for two sofas of different design give them equal importance in the living room that John FitzGibbons designed for Mr. and Mrs. John Seskis of New York. Although one sofa echoes the yellow of the walls, it stands out as prominently as its red companion because of the white rug and the white at the windows.

One bold hue for the deepest chairs and the curtains balances the bold pattern of a zebra rug—a room-sized mosaic of nine patched pelts—in a living room designed by John Vesey. But he played down the big sofa and quartet of chairs at the game table by covering them with more subdued upholstery of natural leather.

A concentration of color or matching pair of sofas in the John Clarks' l York living room—the largest furniture in the roo firmly establishes yellow in the leading role of a c scheme planned by interior designer John FitzGibb Since walls, floors, and curtains are quiet off-white, clear glow of the upholstery spreads over the whole ro

The color of the wall is the logical choice for furniture fabrics if you want to achieve a one-color or mostly-white look like that of this living room designed by Barbara D'Arcy of Bloomingdale's. She varied the textures—ribbed fabric on the chaise and sofa, suedecloth on the walls, smooth lacquer finish on shelves and cabinets, a shag rug—then chose the year's newest accent for white: dark brown, close to black.

What colors can I use with an oriental rug?

↑ The predominant colors in the rug—red and blue—suggested the over-all color theme for a living room designed by William Pahlmann. The red he transposed to a somewhat lighter, clearer tone, then spread it dramatically on the walls. The blues he repeated in a minor way in the pattern on the sofa and pillows, then accented the whole with a few strokes of sharp green.

One vivid color missing from the rug was the same designer's choice for a large dining room. Since the Sarouk's pattern was more intricate than the Keshan, above, and its colors more dispersed, he surrounded the rug with great sweeps of vibrant green, repeating the green on the chair seats to establish a visual link between the walls and the rug.

If one color is dominant, as in the room above, you can change the effect by introducing other colors and rearranging the furniture as H&G did in the versions below and opposite page. If your room already includes two or more hues, you could reverse our strategy and work back to a one-color theme. Sectional cabinets and upholstered furniture by Henredon.

How can I change my color scheme without changing everything?

↓ You could reduce the dominance of the yellow, but give it more tang, by replacing the mellow gold area rug with a room-sized rug of sharp black and white checks, and introducing blue and white in sofa pillows. Moving the pair of cabinets across the room, together to form one large piece and separating the sectionals also breaks up the monochrome effect of the room.

Or you could introduce → a vivid contrast by exchanging the gold area rug for a larger one of orange and hot pink and repeating the pinks in sofa pillows. To step up the brilliance, add a few more accents of purple and sharp green. Here we concentrated the yellow upholstered pieces (inserting a corner link between the sectionals) in order to emphasize contrast with the rug.

THE GREAT COLOR EXPLOSION

In the twenty years since the birth of the H&G color program, color has exploded all around us with the brilliance of a Mardi Gras. Surrounded as we are today with glowing hues in almost everything we use or wear or see, we tend to forget how dun things used to be. The airplane, once so staid and gray, has become a flying peacock. The brown paper bag, mousy poke that it was, now rivals Joseph's Coat. Royal blue computers are operated with bright orange switches. Elevators are lined with coral, emerald, ruby red. The lowly garbage can sports its vivid vinyls like racing colors. Refrigerators, linens, floors, even exercise machines—are taking part in the color explosion. Here, for example, are sixteen new furnishings and materials you would not have recognized two decades ago.

Leisure furniture, and outdoors, by Knoll tes. Quarry tile by Stylon.*

Small families are often torn between the appeal of a house comfortably scaled to an intimate pattern of daily living and the longing for one where their hospitable impulses can have free play. Even if large parties are only blue-moon events on the family agenda, it is pleasant to feel that guest lists do not have to be pared down to the number of chairs at the dining table or the seating capacity of one modest living room. The hospitality quotient of a house affects the children's activities, too, and determines whether two age groups or two generations can entertain happily at the same time. But H&G is convinced that an increase in enclosed square feet is not the only answer. Even in a small house you can entertain on any scale you like, if the rooms can be opened up, literally and figuratively, to the outdoors. To prove it, we furnished and decorated a house on Massachusetts' Cape Cod at New Seabury, a modern community frequently cited as an example of progressive planning. Working closely with the developer, Emil Hanslin, landscape architect Deane Laurence, and outdoor lighting consultant William J. Locklin, we planned a series of outdoor terraces that expand the scope of every main room. And to step up the expansion visually we made use of three devices—lighting, color, and the indoor-outdoor repetition of furniture, fabrics, and building materials.

A one-story design, sheathed in rough-sawn redwood plywood, the house consists of a center section with a cedar-shingled gable roof and two flat-roofed wings. Since it was designed for an average family of four, we planned the furnishings for a hypothetical couple with a seventeen-year-old son and a five-year-old daughter —a rather large age gap, but we wanted to show that our plan could work for children of any age. MAN-MADE MOONLIGHT FOR GALA EVENINGS

One of the most important steps in opening up the house—both for family-at-home pleasure and after-dark entertaining—was to make the night usable outdoors as well as indoors. This maneuver, a kind of magic realism, we accomplished with a system of low-intensity outdoor lighting—an artificial moonlight that can be turned on before sunset, but is not actually noticeable until dark. Soft enough to flatter, strong enough to play games by, this pleasant glow would fade, of course, if it had to compete with brilliant indoor lighting. To obviate this possibility the principal house lights were equipped with dimmer controls so that they can be turned down to a complementary level when guests move out to the terraces. Softly floodlighted by the outdoor lighting, the planting is greenly effulgent. You will find additional details on the planting and lighting of this house in Gardener's Month, page 234. (Continued)

LANDSCAPE COLORS CARRIED INDOORS

To establish a daytime link between indoors and outdoors and open up the rooms visually, we used color: lichenaceous hues of the Cape Cod landscape—driftwood browns, green-golds, and gray-greens nipped with cranberry and bittersweet. We wove them in and out of the house—in fabrics, woods, and plant materials—so that when you go outdoors, you feel you are simply walking into another room. Coming in, the feeling is the same, although tempered with a sense of shelter. And since nothing makes people happier than elbowroom, we took pains, in furnishing the house, to keep rooms uncluttered. (Continued)

IN THE LIVING ROOM, which is partitioned from the kitchen trafficway by a low, partial wall, we passed up conventional sofas for wall-hugging banquettes—comfortable cushioned platforms that leave plenty of space for guests. Strawberry Bank fireplace

THE RECTANGULAR PLAN lends itself particularly well to our strategy of expanding every major room by opening it to a terrace. You approach the house from the street by a lattice-and-glass sheltered walk along one end of the dining terrace. The front door opens to a little foyer which leads straight past the basement stairs and kitchen, then down two steps to the living room. The quieter rooms are all at the rear of the house, paralleled along the front by the more active areas, kitchen, dining room, little girl's bedroom.

All bulbs and a yard wide

With one sweep of the gardener's special brush, you can spread spring all across your garden. You do it, of course, with hardy flowering bulbs, and you arrange your palette this autumn. We have a plan for it, sketched about the way it will look, say, around the beginning of May next year. The scope of such a springtime gesture as this is suggested in the more specialized bulb gardens, opposite page, where an almost reckless lavishness is the watchword. Whether with grape hyacinths, or daffodils, or tulips, or all three (not to mention a host of others), it is the dramatic effect that counts. You can make the gesture with a thousand of one kind of bulb or a thousand of a score of different kinds (quantities modified, of course, by the exigencies of time, space, and budget). You can extend this riotous planting straight across the yard in front of a fence, weave it before a shrubbery border, curve it along a slope or across a meadow. The headliners are best supported by a variety of seasonal "filler" plants. For the basic 4-by-40-foot plan, turn to page 232.

Nature abhors straight lines almost as much as artists d so our spring-bulb garden, dominated by a score of colorful da fodils, hyacinths, and tulips, avoids the blighting curse Euclidean geometry. But it could be straight—either front o back or both—if it were to face down a wall or the foundation of a building, and in plan (see page 232), it is straight. Man early bulbs, mostly used as fillers among and behind fore edg of alyssum, candytuft, and pansies, precede May's bloom peak

Grape hyacinths (1,000 of them, and what a job for a Saturday morning) flank wood-timbered steps in the garden of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Eaton, Scarsdale, N. Y. A saucer magnolia shines overhead.

Basic daffodil colors, below, in every combination, lend themselves as those of no other flowers would to the yard-wide sweep of white and gold in the Edward Dane garden in Brookline, Mass.

Tulips, first white, then, out along the borders, every color, dominate the spring plantings at Old Westbury Gardens, Westbury, N. Y. Their handmaidens: pansies, daisies, candytuft, and alyssum.

Bulbs and their spring companions, above, lend themselves to a two-sided border in the garden of Mrs. Abbott Payson Usher, Salem, Mass. Low springtime perennials cover the fading early bulbs.

The art of stenciling

A stencil brush is a magic wand that makes coaches out of pumpkins, personal triumphs out of plain-Janes. If you have the urge to embellish furniture or other surfaces with decorative motifs, but have serious misgivings about your freehand skill, stencils are the answer. And they are adaptable to a far greater diversity of styles and patterns than the all-too-familiar provincial motifs. After only a little practice, you can give a room trompe-l'oeil architectural details—reproportion a high ceilinged room with a stenciled dado, transform a door with stenciled molding, enhance a hall floor with a delicate but durable pattern. Or you could match a fabric and wallpaper by stenciling the same design on both, repeat a ceiling garland on a cabinet or chair, or print a wallpaper motif on window shades, lamp shades or a folding screen.

Stenciling is surprisingly quick, yet long-lasting—witness the eighteenth-century patterns that have come to light, unharmed, under layers of wallpaper and linoleum. Supplies and techniques are simple too. See the instructions on page 233.

All the patterns on these pages were designed and executed by Bishop & Lord who have prepared a kit for reproducing them. In addition to see-through plastic stencils that make it easy to do multicolored work, the kit contains paints, brushes, instructions.

Stenciling with an accordion-fold pattern in H&G's new Forget-Me-Not and Parrot Green transformed a worn wood floor in Stephen Gusick's house in Woodcliff Lake, N.J. Window shades were stenciled with the same pattern in a smaller scale.

HOW TO BUILD A QUIET HAVEN ON A NOISY CORNER

Long-established suburbs, endowed with trees planted half-a-century ago, lawns that have been rolled for decades, and services and utilities that are going concerns, have undeniable attractions for families in search of a building site. But today such sites are few, and when they are to be found, almost certain to be lacking in privacy or marked by other shortcomings that have led previous searchers to pass them by. The charming old Houston, Tex., suburb of River Oaks, for instance, was the place where Mr. and Mrs. Milton E. Loy had set their hearts on building a house. But the only practicable site they could find there was at first glance unpromising—a corner lot, with a highway on one side, an entrance drive to River Oaks on a second, and neighbors hard by on a third. Yet in the house designed for them by Preston M. Bolton Associates, the Loys enjoy a quiet privacy that seems light years away from honking horns, shifting gears, and neighborly stares. A two-story house stretching almost the entire length of the lot, it turns windowless walls of buff-colored Mexican brick to the streets, but on the other side, its glass walls overlook a quiet courtyard and pool terrace, green with fern-filled planter beds and flowering potted plants, and screened by a 6-foot-high wall. Although sizable in square feet, the house is, by design, intimate in character. Since the Loys' only son, a Navy lieutenant junior grade, is now married, they needed only one bedroom plus a "sometimes" guest room. And instead of a flock of smaller rooms, they wanted a few large ones. It was, in fact, their determination to have one huge room with a stupendous ceiling that ruled out buying an old house and inspired the design of their 20-foot-high garden room, which along with the courtyard is the center of their quiet private world.

The courtyard, which fits into the angle of the L-shaped plan, is the outdoor counterpart of the garden room it adjoins. Living room at right, and master bedroom above it, also have glass walls facing the court, over which a venerable live oak spreads its foliage like a canopy. Painting by Betty Watson.

The tree house, right, a wooden platform on stilts directly across the court from the living room, helps to screen the court from the neighbors. Louvers in fence permit passage of summer breezes.

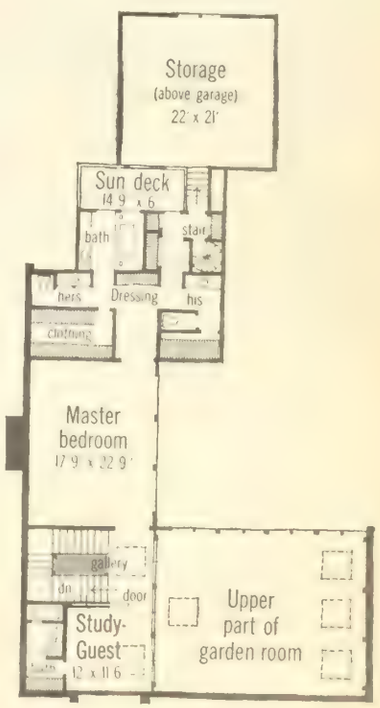
The two-story garden room is a wonderful blend of indoor comfort and outdoor airiness. At one end, above, a white-painted brick wall accented by wood pilasters makes a patio-like background for an old French iron fountain and a pair of planters. At the other end, opposite page, a triple tier of pierced wood panels screens the entrance hall and the study above it. Panels of top tier are hinged shutters that provide privacy when study is used as guest room. Raised skylights at both ends of the garden room balance light from the window wall, and cast an ever-changing pattern of light and shadow on the gleaming white terrazzo floor.



Stone doorway of heroic scale accents front of house, frames double doors and fixed wood paneling above.

The L-shaped plan makes it possible for the main rooms on both floors to open onto the courtyard. Windowless walls on street sides, garage at one end, and brick wall along inner boundary of lot assure privacy in spite of glass walls. Even the bedroom on the second floor has glass to the floor (protected by a railing outside). The study-guest room next to it is filled with light and a sense of space from the adjoining garden room.

The dining room is small because the Loys prefer the intimacy of a small room when dining alone. But sliding glass doors opening to the pool terrace keep the room from seeming confined, and space-saving furniture—a round Victorian table, a wall-hung slate serving shelf—keep it uncluttered. When there are more than four guests, small tables are set up outdoors or in the garden room. Mrs. Loy discovered the eighteenth-century brass chandelier in Paris, shipped it to Texas in seventy-five carefully numbered pieces.

The pool court is marked off from the courtyard outside the garden room by a pair of planter beds. Both areas are easily served from kitchen through dining room doors at right. Cedar board and batten walls on this side of house are stained a pale beige to blend with buff-colored brick on the two streetside façades.

HOW TO WORK WITH AN INTERIOR DECORATOR

BY COLETTE O'CONNOR RICHARDSON

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in H&G's series on the four professionals whose design talents may be enlisted in creating a home—and on how you can best work with them and benefit from their collaboration. Last month we focused our attention on the architect, and in subsequent issues we will evaluate the roles of the kitchen planner and the landscape architect. This month's article surveys the contributions and working methods of the men and women who, as the writer explains, are known officially and with good reason as interior designers. But since "decorator" and "interior decorator" are perhaps more familiar titles to most people, the three terms have been used interchangeably.

Anyone can furnish a room; there's no trick to that. To decorate a room is something else again, and the difference is not one of esthetics alone. Comfort, suitability, individuality must all be inherent in a room to make it really satisfying. Achieving that is no easy feat, but a skilled interior decorator knows how to do it. To integrate shapes and materials, colors and patterns, light and shadow, in such a manner that they create a livable and personal environment for the client is the decorator's goal. But he can reach it only if you know how to work with him in the right way. That way begins long before you actually sit down to discuss your wants. First, you need a knowledge of what these professionals can do for you, how they differ, and what they cost. The next step is to find the decorator who can best interpret your wishes at your price, because you cannot work the right way with the wrong person.

What a decorator can do

A trained interior decorator (and no others are worth discussing) is more accurately an interior designer—a definitive title you should be aware of, whether you use it or not. Many house painters, furniture salesmen, and managers of slipcover workrooms call themselves "decorators." But interior designers are professional men and women, qualified by education and experience to create interiors, and they have named their two national organizations accordingly: the long-established American Institute of Interior Designers (A.I.D.), and the National Society of Interior Designers (N.S.I.D.). Both have exacting membership requirements, so either set of initials after a decorator's name already gives you some clue to his competence, although many non-members are highly proficient, too.

An interior designer can assemble and put together all or part of the furnishings of any room and interpret all periods of design, although he (or she) may personally prefer one to another and be better known for his favorite. He can begin with empty space or make the most of your favorite possessions by giving them a new setting, redesigning furniture that warrants it, having other pieces refinished or reupholstered. He can design furnishings to meet specific situations or create special effects. And his designing ability is not limited to furnishings alone. A professional interior decorator is competent to design closets, bookcases, vinyl floors, and other installations. He can alter or add imposed architectural elements such as mantels, trim, doors, and so on. He can design the lighting for a room—anything from the strategic placing of electrical outlets for lamps to the design of built-in lighting to create special effects.

An interior decorator can save you endless footwork because he knows exactly where to find anything you want. Furthermore, his field of choice is much broader than yours because some of the most distinguished furnishings are available only through decorators. You cannot buy them on your own. You cannot even walk into many of the showrooms where such furnishings are sold unless you are accompanied by an accredited decorator or show his card at the door.

In addition to the established professional sources, an experienced decorator has dozens of his own, including out-of-the-way antique shops, auction rooms, cabinetmakers, and he probably makes frequent buying expeditions to Europe and Asia. When it comes to special craftsmen, he invariably knows a "little man" who can carve a missing chair splat or copy an old steel fender in a size to fit your fireplace. A decorator also knows which are the reliable workrooms, some of which cater exclusively to the decorating trade. You can rarely, on your own, get the same quality of labor and service that is available to professionals.

Because a conscientious interior designer is concerned with the "long haul" as well as the immediate effect, he can save you future disappointments and replacements. He is knowledgeable about colorfast wallpapers for sunny rooms, rug weaves and patterns that will stand up in heavy traffic areas, and sparky color schemes that won't grow tiresome. You may make good guesses, but lacking concrete experience you can't be sure.

Finally, a reliable decorator makes himself responsible for everything connected with your job. If the curtains arrive too short or the tile floor is badly laid, it is his headache. When it comes to insisting on good workmanship, he can get results where you might not. Such assurance is worth a good deal.

What a decorator cannot do

A decorator cannot, however, read your mind. As a result of experience and observation, he may deduce that you prefer cool elegance to informal charm, or Georgian to Louis XV, but that would be only an educated guess. He cannot be sure of the way you and your family like to live, and he most definitely needs to be clued in on personal idiosyncrasies such as a dislike for all oriental design or an aversion to pink.

An interior designer cannot see your bank account and decide how much you can afford to spend. Nor, halfway through the job, can he advise you about splurging on an unplanned purchase. He can truthfully assure you that a certain Waterford chandelier will look magnificent in your dining room; he can guarantee that it is an excellent value and a fine investment, but he cannot assess whether or not you are financially justified in buying it.

An interior designer cannot foresee the possible snags that may come up in connection with a job. He may take the greatest precautions, but events and incompetence beyond his control can upset the most carefully calculated timing. Deliveries may be delayed; items you want may no longer be available; workmen may blunder. Your decorator is as eager as you are to complete your job on schedule, but he is indirectly dependent on dozens of other people.

The two categories of interior designers

Before you start looking for a decorator, you should understand the distinction between an independent and one who is affiliated with a large department or furniture store, because each offers certain conveniences.

An independent interior designer may work entirely on his own with only clerical assistance, or he may be the head or a member of a decorating establishment. These establishments vary in size, and the larger ones are apt to be the best known, but size itself is no criterion of excellence. You work with the individual partner or decorator who seems best equipped to handle your type of job. He or she goes to your house or apartment to size up exactly what you need and want, and to supervise the job until its completion. He works out floor plans, assembles color schemes, obtains fabric samples. He takes or sends you to decorator showrooms, antique shops, and other places to look at furnishings he thinks will be suitable, or he helps you make selections from pictures in catalogues.

An independent interior designer may also own a small decorative specialty shop. But, as one of his decorating clients, you will not be obligated to buy anything in the shop, nor need shop customers become decorating clients. Quite naturally, however, the two branches of the business tend to supplement each other.

Among the independent decorators, a one-man or one-woman operation is usually highly personal and often outstandingly good, but be very sure of your choice before you use a decorator who has no office at all and is not a member of the A.I.D. or N.S.I.D. In some communities it is still all too easy for a rank amateur to assume the title, "interior decorator." The profession is working hard to put through legislation that will eliminate pretenders, but as of now they do exist.

The department store or furniture store decorator

The decorating department of a very large store may be staffed with as many as thirty accredited interior designers, plus draftsmen, shoppers, and other assistants. The decorators work exactly as they would in an independent decorating establishment, and use outside-the-store resources at will. In addition, the decorating department in a big store offers certain conveniences: First, a limited amount of free advice is available—the kind that can be given right in the store. No obligation at all is involved on your part. Second, you can take advantage of any payment plans the store may have (you are billed by the store for everything —consultation fees, renderings, all furnishings including those from decorator sources, and labor). Third, a store decorator can sell you any furnishings the store carries, many of which may be modestly priced and not available to independent decorators because they are sold only through department and furniture stores, at retail prices.

When a smaller department or furniture store offers a decorating service, it is likely to be somewhat restricted. The "decorator" may be a glorified furniture salesman who is most helpful, but not a professional interior designer. He may or may not be allowed to go to your home. Frequently he can sell only merchandise that the store carries or is able to order from its regular suppliers, although he may be able to use outside resources for categories of furnishings not sold in the store, such as rugs or fabrics. Each store establishes its own policy, however, so if you like the furniture in a particular place, investigate its decorating service.

What a decorator costs

Neophytes may work for experience, and amateurs for fun, but all established professionals expect to make money. You pay for an interior designer's technical knowledge, taste, and services, even though they may not be listed as such on your bill.

The independent decorator makes his profit in one of three ways: the first and most customary way is to buy everything at a discount and charge you the retail prices. Two other billing procedures are based on the exact cost of everything to the decorator plus either a prearranged percentage of that cost or a flat fee for the entire job. Such cost-plus arrangements, however, are more usual in public-building work than they are for private jobs.

You also pay: a decorator's out-of-pocket expenses for travel and so on; any sales taxes, shipping, trucking, and storage charges; the price of blueprints, renderings, and models; the costs of any revisions or changes you may make in your order after it is placed; and fees for supervision beyond the amount the decorator deems reasonable for the success of the job. But a number of these expenses may never (Continued on page 230)

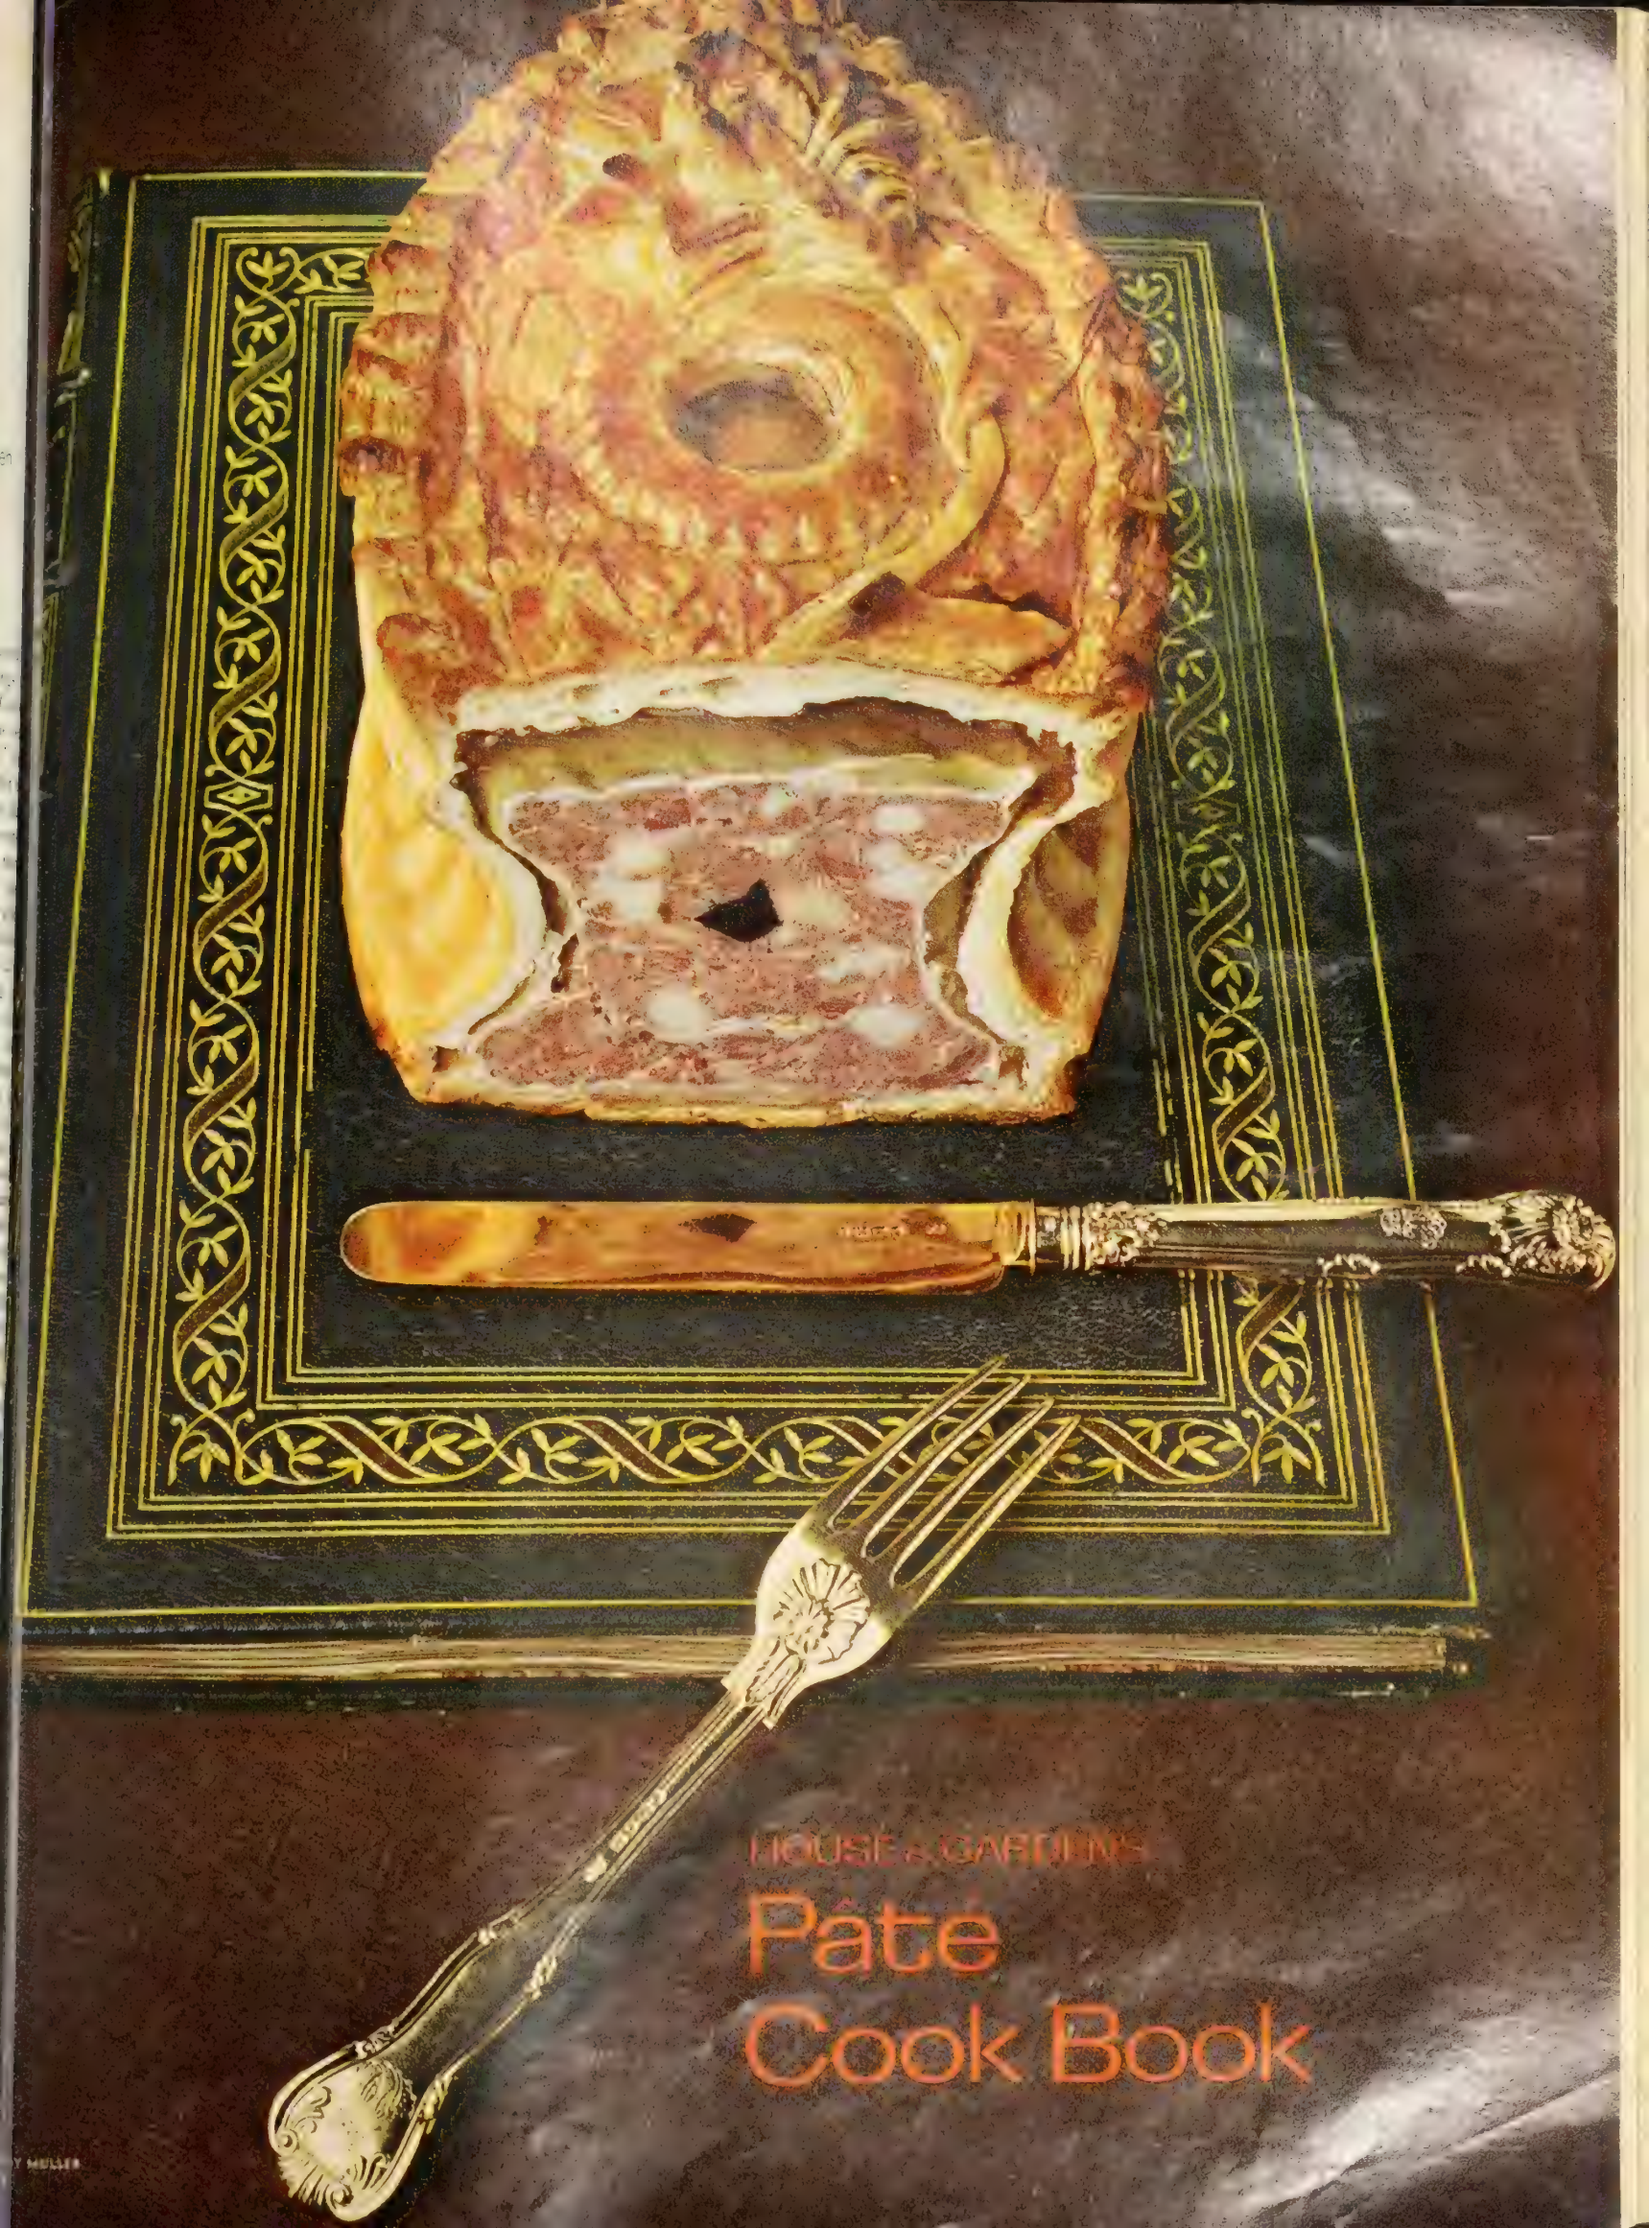
MINERAL WATERS AND MIXERS

So you don't want to drink the water? Then harken to this briefing on the bottled alternatives.

BY PHILIP S. BROWN

If you have changed your brands of whiskey time and again, trying to find one without a slightly medicinal taste, it's probably not the Scotch or Bourbon that is at fault, but the water that you mix it with. Because of the pollution of most of our water these days, it is treated with chlorine and other chemicals to make it safe to drink. Safe it may be, but often not too tasty, which accounts in part for the reawakened popularity of bottled spring or mineral waters.



Spring water is called "mineral water" because in passing through the earth it picks up a certain mineral content. Varying amounts of bicarbonates, sulphates, chlorides, calcium, magnesium, and iron are absorbed, according to the region. The water may be still or sparkling, pungent or tasteless. Waters with very strong mineral flavor are usually not bottled, but are consumed at the various spas from whence they flow. Very flat-tasting waters are usually picked up, when bottled, by the addition of a small amount of salts of one sort or another. (Even our bottled club sodas and/or charged waters have certain minerals added to compensate for the dull taste of the distilled water they are made from.) Some spring waters bubble naturally, the gas having been acquired on its way to the surface, but many of them are artificially carbonated—that is, carbonic acid gas is introduced when they are bottled.

Since the earliest times, mineral waters have been highly valued for their healthful qualities, whether justifiably or not. Ancient Roman and Greek temples to Aesculapius were frequently placed i the vicinity of mineral springs, t make things easier for the God Medicine. Down through the cen turies, "taking the waters" ha been believed to be a cure for al most every ailment known to ma and, generally speaking, the wors the taste of the water, the mor efficacious the remedy was pre sumed to be. Along in the eight eenth century, it became fashion able to spend a week or two at a spa, and great hotels sprang up around many of them. The fac that the health of the patrons im proved at such places was prob ably due to the substitution o water, however obnoxious, for ex cesses of wines and spirits, plus a controlled regimen of exercise and rest. As bottling procedures im proved and shipping facilities be came better, the waters were sent far and wide, and the need for pro tracted "cures" at the source di minished. However, the French (who have always been concerned with the state of their digestions and livers), and to a lesser extent the Italians, still patronize cura tive spas, and they are the world's greatest consumers of mineral wa ters, bottled and otherwise.

Another reason why bottled water appears on many tables in the world's capital of gastronomy is that the knowing Frenchman may rely on the alkalinity of the water to offset the acidity of the wine he drinks. Elsewhere, espe cially in out-of-the-way places, Eu ropean diners will ask for bottled water rather than risk the perhaps dubious local water. In this coun try, imported bottled waters are

Pâté Cook Book

By James A. Beard

Despite their elegant names, pâtés and terrines, these superior, savory Gallic cousins of the American meat loaf are among the most practical of dishes, dating back in culinary history to the days when meats, notably pork and goose, were cooked down and preserved in their own fat. Although you find the terms pâté and terrine used interchangeably, properly speaking a terrine (which takes its name from the dish it is baked in) is always served cold. On the other hand, a pâté (the French for pie) may be served hot, frequently encased in a crust, when it becomes a pâté en croûte or, in England, a raised pie (raised because the dough is molded or "raised" by hand). In the country of its origin, a pâté is generally sliced and eaten with a knife and fork, perhaps accompanied by toast and butter. In America, however, pâté means to many people the kind of soft mixture that is spread on crackers or bread at cocktail parties. This type of pâté is usually constituted of cooked meat, chicken, or game, blended with seasonings and molded.

Although pâtés and terrines frequently call for a lengthy list of ingredients and are not inexpensive, they are relatively easy and rewarding to prepare—excellent as a first course or luncheon dish, on a cocktail buffet table, or for a picnic spread. In variety they range from the hearty pâtés found in French villages and country inns to the rich, refined preparations of haute cuisine.

Infinitely adaptable, these wonderful, well-seasoned loaves of meat, fowl, game, or fish acquire new twists from cook to cook or from region to region, with each household, restaurant, or province contributing its own specialty. Some pâtés and terrines are coarse enough in texture to leave the main ingredients quite visible; others are almost puréed, while still others are a mixture of coarse and fine. Some contain, in addition to the basic forcemeat, large pieces of duckling, chicken, turkey, or pheasant, whole truffles, or a whole foie gras. When it comes to making a pâté, just about the only limitations are your purse and your palate.

PRINCIPLES OF PÂTÉS

Equipment

Terrines—the baking dishes that give their name to the meat and fish loaves cooked in them—vary extensively in size and shape. The majority of French and English terrines have a capacity of one or two quarts, and there are also smaller ones holding less than a pint that are ideal for making individual pâtés. Many terrines, however, are made in in-between sizes that can only be described loosely as large or small. You can find long oblong ones of heavy white porcelain from France; others made of earthenware, with and without covers; some heavily glazed inside and out; some glazed inside only. The more elaborate terrines are molded to simulate a pastry crust, and the lids are decorated, often with the head of a hare or a game bird.

There are terrines made of glass (it is interesting that those produced in Europe under American trade names are more varied, imaginative, and functional than their American counterparts) and of metal which, while some people do not care for them, are also popular. For pâté en croûte, metal molds are eminently practical. They are constructed with hinges that can be locked before baking and released afterwards, making removal of the baked pâté quite simple. Pâté en croûte molds range in length from about 6" to 12" or 14". Some have removable bases; others are intended to be used on a baking sheet.

Preparation

For a loaf-type pâté, the terrine or baking dish should first be lined with strips of salt pork or its equivalent. Bacon can be substituted, but if too much is used, it will give the pâté an excessively smoky flavor. After lining the dish, pack in the filling. The base for most of the recipes given in this cook book is a farce of pork or veal or a combination of both, to which liver, game, fowl, or other meats are added. Pork gives fatty, juicy qualities, while the veal binds the mixture and yields a gelatinous quality, as well as a delicacy of flavor.

To test a pâté or terrine for seasoning before baking, take a small amount of the forcemeat, mold it into a patty, and sauté in butter or oil until it is cooked through. Taste after it has cooled for 15 or 20 minutes. This will give you an approximate idea of the finished product and save you the disappointment of an inadequately seasoned dish.

After the pâté or terrine is assembled, it is baked in the oven, sometimes in a bain-marie. Usually you must cover it during the baking, and in some instances further seal it with a flour-and-water paste. To tell when it is cooked, check the fat and juices bubbling up around the loaf. If they are cloudy, more cooking is needed. Continue to check until the fat and juices are clear. It is better by far, in this instance, to overcook a little than to undercook. You will discover that cooking times for pâtés and terrines can vary even with the same recipe.

After the pâté is cooked, remove it from the oven and allow to cool for a short time. At this point certain pâtés should be weighted down, to firm the texture, while the cooling continues. (You might cut small boards to fit into the tops of pâté molds and place weights from a kitchen scale, a brick, or cans of food on them.) Other pâtés are cooled without weighting, and in some cases the liquid is siphoned off, added to a rich stock, and incorporated in an aspic used to garnish the pâté when served.

Storage

Pâtés will keep well in the refrigerator, providing they do not have too much liquid or jelly surrounding them—in which case they are apt to sour rather quickly. If they are to be stored for a few days or longer, remove excess liquid or jelly and cover the pâté or terrine with melted pork fat. In general, pâtés and terrines [illegible] be frozen without losing texture, flavor, and their essential character in the thaw[illegible] is a common error in this country to confuse âté with foie gras. Although foie gras is made nto purées and pâtés or incorporated whole in âtés, it is itself the liver of a force-fed goose.

PÂTÉ AND FOIE GRAS

Many French recipes call for foie gras, especially in fresh form. As good foie gras is expensive, it may be necessary to make substitutions. anned parfait of foie gras, purée of pâté de foie ras, and pâté de foie (variety of liver unknown) ll make extremely good stand-ins. Homemade âtés can be used if they are fairly fine-textured. nd if there is a good Wurstgeschäft in your eighborhood that turns out the delicious goose iver sausage so dear to the German palate, this an be used as well.

Ways to use Pâté

1) For stuffing a filet of beef, when the recipe alls for foie gras and whole truffles. Use a good âté that is not too soft. Chill pâté in the refrigerator beforehand and cut into small cubes, then nake a cavity in the filet and insert.

(2) For Filet of Beef Wellington. Spread any good pâté on the cooled filet before adding the layer of duxelles.

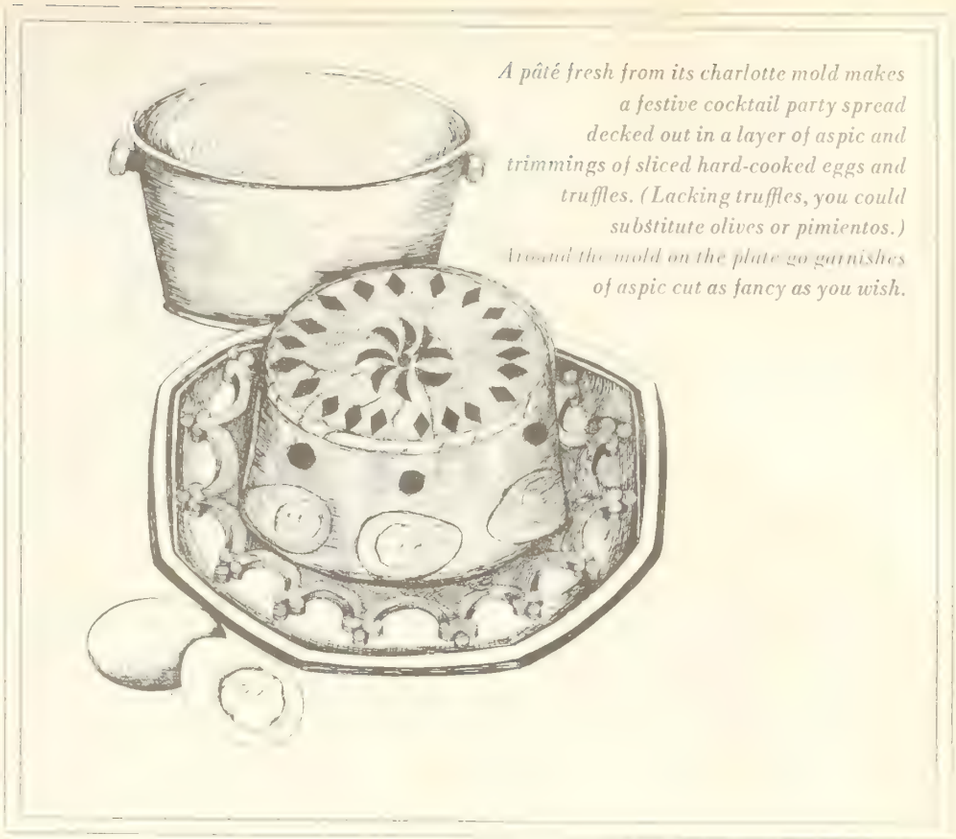
(3) For stuffing a truffled squab. Use any homemade or commercial pâté. Encase truffles in the pâté, which may be combined with a little pork or veal forcemeat, and stuff the boned or whole squab with them. Often thin slices of truffle are also slipped under the skin of the bird.

(4) For recipes for individual filets or tournedos, such as the Vera Cruz version in which the filet is placed on toast spread with pâté, or the Rossini in which foie gras is used. (Homemade or canned pâté can be used instead of foie gras.)

(5) For roast pheasant, partridge, or quail. Serve on buttered or fried toast spread with pâté, combined with the chopped cooked giblets.

(6) For cold birds. Pâtés are used in such dishes as Breast of Chicken Jeannette for stuffing the breasts and filets of cold chicken and other birds, which are then masked with a mayonnaise collée or chaudfroid.

(7) In tiny sandwiches and brioche. Spread bread with a pâté of your own making or with the canned variety. The sandwiches are delicious with tea or with champagne if the bread is good, the slices paper-thin, and the sandwiches cooled. Tiny brioche may be stuffed with pâté by cutting a bit from the bottom and removing some of the crumb to make a cavity. After stuffing with pâté, replace the bottom crust.



(8) In tiny hot biscuits. Break biscuits in half and spread with pâté. This is an excellent tea-time or cocktail accompaniment.

(9) On English muffins or crumpets. Spread toasted muffins or crumpets with a good pâté. Top with poached eggs, and mask with hollandaise or mousseline sauce. This makes an excellent first course or main course at luncheon. Allow one egg for a first course, two for a main course.

(10) In chicken or ham sandwiches. Spread toasted and buttered bread with pâté, add thin slices of white meat of chicken, good Virginia ham, or thinly sliced tongue, and top with another slice of toast.

(11) For a quick cocktail pâté. Beat some cognac into a mixture of canned pâté and German goose-liver sausage, and add chopped pistachio nuts and some chopped truffle. Spoon into a decorative bowl and garnish with cut-out truffle and aspic.

(12) For pâtés chauds. Hot pâtés are usually served at large dinners, sometimes as a game course. To make: line a shallow 8″ or 9″ square or oblong pan with pâte brisée. On this put a layer of basic pork and veal forcemeat, and add a few finely chopped truffles. Stuff 8 boned and trimmed quail, partridge, or woodcock breasts with a good pâté and arrange on top of the forcemeat. Fill the spaces between the breasts with additional forcemeat. Salt and pepper the breasts well and sprinkle with cognac. Cover with a layer of puff paste, and decorate with stems and leaves of pastry to outline the shape of breasts underneath. Brush the top with 1 egg yolk and 3 tablespoons cream, lightly beaten together, and bake in a 425° oven for 15 minutes. Reduce the heat to 375° and bake until golden brown and flaky. Serve warm.

A pâté fresh from its charlotte mold makes a festive cocktail party spread decked out in a layer of aspic and trimmings of sliced hard-cooked eggs and truffles. (Lacking truffles, you could substitute olives or pimientos.) Unmold the mold on the plate so garnishes of aspic cut as fancy as you wish.

Basic Pork Forcemeat for Pâtés

Mix equal parts of finely ground pork and pork fat from the siding (fresh bacon), and season with salt, pepper, and quatre épices (if this is unavailable, substitute Spice Parisienne).

Basic Veal and Pork Forcemeat

Finely grind ¾ pound veal, ¾ pound pork, and 1 pound pork fat together and season with salt, pepper, and a pinch of quatre épices or Spice Parisienne. Add to this 2 lightly beaten eggs and ⅓ cup cognac. Mix thoroughly. Makes approximately 2½ pounds.

Note: Both of these forcemeat mixtures are best if ground twice and even better if forced through a sieve or pounded in a mortar. However, they will do if they are merely ground finely.

Basic Chicken or Game Forcemeat

Add finely ground chicken meat or game flesh to the veal and pork forcemeat in the following proportions: 1 pound chicken meat to ¼ pound each veal and pork, 1 pound pork fat cut very fine, 2 eggs, and seasonings. Grind meats and fat twice to make a fine paste.

Basic Pâte à Pâté

4 cups flour
⅔ cup butter
⅔ cup lard
½ teaspoon salt
2 egg yolks

Combine all ingredients, adding water if necessary to make a fairly stiff dough. Roll the pastry dough in small pieces with the heel of the hand and then form it into a single firm ball. Chill for several hours before using. Use for pâté en croûte. Makes enough pastry for a loaf-sized pâté.

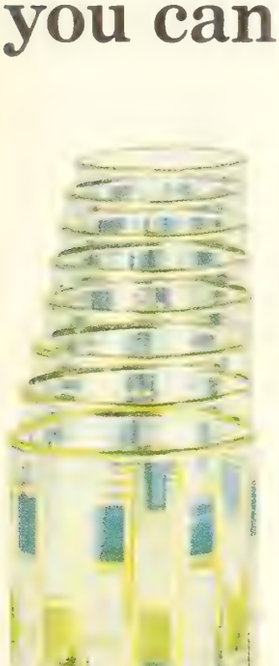
Aspic Jelly

3 envelopes unflavored gelatin
1½ pints clarified veal, beef, or chicken stock
¼ cup white wine

Soften gelatin in ¾ cup cold water. Heat broth and wine to the boiling point and combine with the gelatin. Stir until thoroughly melted. Chill. If aspic is to be used for chopping, add another envelope of gelatin and pour it into a large platter or flat pan to chill.

MOLDED PÂTÉS

Quick Pâté I



½ pound chicken livers
Butter
2 hard-cooked eggs
2 ounces cognac
½ pound cream cheese
1 truffle, diced

Sauté the livers in 4 tablespoons butter and cool. Whirl in a blender with the eggs and cognac, and then mix with the cream cheese. Place in a bowl or terrine, add the diced truffle, and cover with a thin layer of melted butter. Refrigerate.

Molded Tuna Pâté with Cognac

3- or 4-ounce can chopped mushrooms
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1 tablespoon cognac
2 6½- or 7-ounce cans tuna
¼ teaspoon Tabasco
½ cup Green Goddess Salad Dressing or mayonnaise
3 small truffles
¼ cup parsley leaves

Drain the liquid from the mushrooms into a blender container. Sprinkle gelatin over the liquid and allow to soften. Heat ½ cup water to boiling and add to the blender. Rolled Chicken Pâté

This is an Italian recipe, thoroughly delicious, easy to do, and a delight for summer menus when a pork and liver pâté might be too heavy.

3 tablespoons butter
1 medium onion, thinly sliced
1 stalk celery, cut in julienne
1 carrot, cut in julienne
1 tablespoon salt
¼ teaspoon Spice Parisienne or quatre épices
2 large chicken breasts
1 pork chop, about 6–7 ounces
¾ pound sweet butter, softened
½ cup cognac
2 tablespoons shelled pistachio nuts
1 pound prosciutto, sliced

Combine the 8 tablespoons butter, onion, celery, carrot, salt, and spice in a heavy saucepan. Add the chicken and pork chop. Cook, covered, over medium heat until tender. Do not overcook. Remove the chicken and pork from the saucepan and cool. Trim away skin, fat, and bone. Grind the meats using the finest blade. Beat into the softened sweet butter, adding the cognac and pistachio nuts as you beat. It is a good idea to use an electric mixer with a paddle attachment, if you have one.

Taste the pâté for seasoning. Turn out on a piece of waxed paper.

On two other pieces of waxed paper or plastic wrap arrange overlapping slices of prosciutto, forming two 10" squares. Divide the chicken-pork mixture and form into two rolls. Place one roll on each of the prosciutto squares. Roll tightly, without squeezing, so the pâté is completely enveloped by the prosciutto. Place in polyethylene bags and refrigerate for 24 hours before serving. Cut in slices about ½" thick and serve with toast and perhaps some greens.

BAKED PÂTÉS

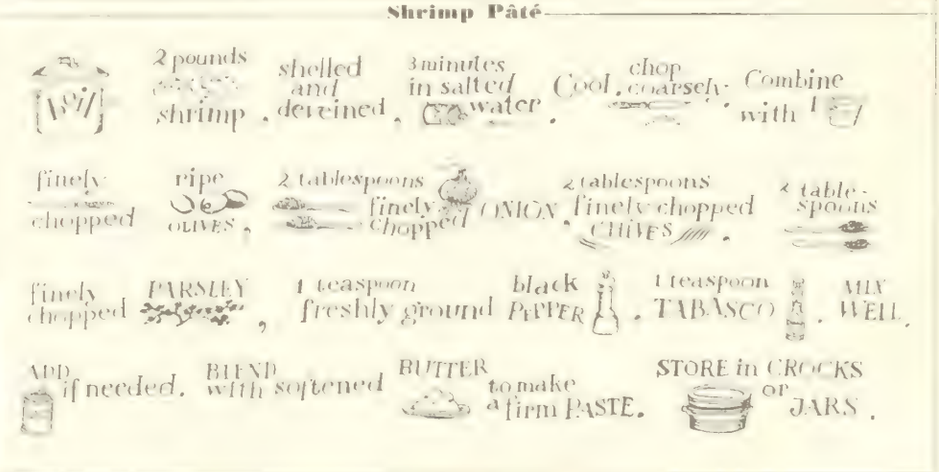
Country Pâté I

2 pounds lean pork
1 pound fresh side pork with fat, diced small
2 pounds ground veal
1 tablespoon basil
1¼ tablespoons salt
1 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
½ teaspoon Spice Parisienne or quatre épices
1 pound pork liver
6 cloves garlic
2 eggs
½ cup cognac
Salt pork strips
2–3 strips bacon

Cut half the lean pork into ½" dice and grind the rest. Blend with the diced pork fat, veal, basil, salt, pepper, and spice. Divide the pork liver in half and whirl one half in the blender with the garlic and the eggs, the other half with the cognac, adding a trifle more cognac if the mixture doesn't completely cover the blender blades.

Mix all together thoroughly with your hands or with a heavy wooden spatula. Line a large round earthenware dish with strips of salt pork. Mound the mixture in it, top with bacon strips and bake in a 350° oven, uncovered, 1½–2 hours, or until the fat runs clear. Cool and chill.

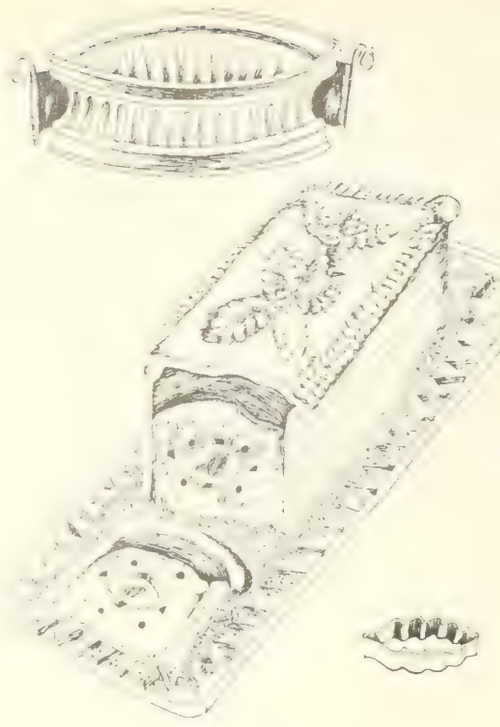
Country Pâté II



Salt pork strips
3 pounds basic veal and pork forcemeat
1½ pounds thinly sliced ham
½ cup chopped parsley
½ cup chopped chives or shallots
½ cup pistachio nuts
½ cup cognac

Line a 3-quart terrine with strips of salt pork. Alternate layers of forcemeat and sliced ham, generously sprinkled with parsley, chives or shallots, and pistachio nuts. Finish with a layer of the forcemeat. Pour cognac over all. Press down well and top with two or three strips of salt pork.

Cover and bake in a 350° oven for 2 hours. Remove cover for the last 20 minutes. Cool for 20 minutes. Weight the pâté and cool thoroughly.



H&G's REBUS RECIPE

Shrimp Pâté

Molds for pâté en croûte, whether rectangular, oval, or round, are hinged so the baked pâté can be removed without disturbing the pastry crust—such as this one with a fluted edge, decorated with pastry leaves made with a leaf-shaped cutter.

In aspic-garnished loaf like this, served with a salad, would make a fine snack at the end of a late party.

Veal and Ham Pâté

1½ pounds ground veal
1½ pounds ground pork
1 pound pork fat, diced
2 cloves garlic, finely cut
1 teaspoon thyme
¼ teaspoon Spice Parisienne or quatre épices
1 tablespoon salt, or more
½ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
3 eggs
½ cup cognac
1½ pounds ground smoked ham
1½ teaspoons Dijon mustard
Pinch ground cloves
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
¼ cup Madeira
½ cup pistachio nuts
Barding pork
Salt pork strips

Combine the veal, pork, and pork fat with the garlic, thyme, spice, salt, pepper, 2 of the eggs, and cognac. Mix thoroughly. Combine the ham with the mustard, cloves, nutmeg, remaining egg, and the Madeira, and blend well. Put pistachio nuts in center of the ham mixture and roll into a sausage. Wrap a piece of barding pork around it. Line the bottom of a terrine with salt pork strips and cover with a layer of the veal and pork forcemeat. Place the roll of ham in the center and enclose with additional forcemeat. Top with one or two strips of salt pork, cover, and bake in a 350° oven for 2–2½ hours, or until the fat runs clear. Cool for 20 minutes. Weight and continue cooling.

Chicken Liver Pâté

½ pound chicken livers
4 tablespoons butter
2 eggs
½ cup cognac or Bourbon
1 onion, chopped
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
½ teaspoon allspice
1 tablespoon salt
1 teaspoon rosemary
½ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
1 pound ground pork (sausage meat may be used)
¼ cup flour
Salt pork strips

Sauté the chicken livers lightly in the butter until they are just firm enough to handle. Trim them and whirl in a blender with the eggs, cognac, onion, garlic, and seasonings.

Blend this mixture with the pork and the flour. Pour into a bread tin or pâté mold lined with salt pork strips and cover with a lid or with foil. Bake in a 350° oven 1½–2 hours, or until the liquid in the pan and the fat are clear. Cool for 15 minutes. Weight and cool thoroughly.

Pork Liver Pâté

This is one of the simplest forms of pâté. It may be used for hors d'oeuvres and sandwiches.

2½ pounds pork liver
4 eggs
2½ pounds pork
1 pound pork fat
2 onions, finely chopped
4-6 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1 teaspoon thyme
1½ tablespoons salt
1½ teaspoons freshly ground black pepper
½ cup cognac
cup flour
Salt pork, thinly sliced

Grind the liver very fine, and mix with the eggs, or whirl a little at a time with the eggs in a blender. Grind the pork with a bit of the pork fat. Cut the remaining fat into small dice.

Line the meat, liver, and fat. Mix well with [illegible], garlic, seasonings, cognac, and flour. Line two large or several small terrines or casseroles with thin slices of salt pork. Fill with the mixture. Seal with foil and then cover with the [illegible] in a pan containing boiling [illegible], and bake in a 350° oven, allowing 2–2½ hours for large terrines, 1½ hours for small terrines. Cool 15 minutes. Remove covers and weight down the terrines while they cool thoroughly. To keep, cover with a layer of melted pork fat.

Simple Pâté en Croûte

2 pounds cooked tongue, in one piece
½ cup cognac
1 bay leaf
Pinch Spice Parisienne or quatre épices
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
1 recipe chilled pâte à pâté
2 pounds veal and pork forcemeat
1 truffle, sliced (optional)
Beaten egg
1 egg beaten with 3 tablespoons cream

Cut the tongue in fingers about 5" long [illegible] about ½" square. Marinate in the cognac, bay leaf, spice, and parsley.

Roll out the chilled dough and line a pâté mold or a loaf pan, allowing the dough to overhang the sides of the mold about ½". Reserve enough dough for the top and a few decorations.

Place a layer of the forcemeat at the bottom of the mold. Arrange the tongue fingers along the middle of the forcemeat, add another layer of forcemeat and a few slices of truffle if desired, then a final layer of forcemeat. Pour the marinade over all, and top with the bay leaf. Roll out the top crust and fit it over the pâté. It should meet the overhang of the bottom crust. Pinch both crusts together well to make a decorative edge around the pâté. Cut out and decorate with small rosettes and leaves of pastry, attaching them with a little beaten egg. Brush the crust with the egg and cream mixture. Cut a hole in the top crust and insert a funnel of paper.

Bake the pâté in a preheated 375° oven for 1½ 2¼ hours, or until the fat showing in the funnel is clear. Cool.

Note: After cooling, you can, if you wish, pour aspic jelly through the funnel to cover the pâté. Allow the aspic to set before serving.

Pâté en Croûte de Volaille

⅓ cup cognac
⅓ cup sherry
4 tablespoons chopped parsley
¼ teaspoon Spice Parisienne or quatre épices
2 chicken breasts, boned
1 pound ham, cut in thin strips
1 truffle, cut in thin strips
½ cup pistachio nuts
1 recipe chilled pâte à pâté
1 recipe chicken forcemeat
1 egg beaten with 3 tablespoons cream

Prepare a marinade of the cognac, sherry, parsley, and spice, and marinate the chicken breasts, ham, truffle, and pistachio nuts. Meanwhile, roll out the pastry. Reserving enough for the top, line a pâté mold or loaf pan with it, leaving an overhang of ½" on all sides. Place half the forcemeat in the mold, then the drained chicken breasts (fitted together carefully and trimmed so they will appear to be one solid piece when the pâté is cut), ham, truffle, and nuts. Add the marinade and cover with the remaining forcemeat. Press a few pistachio nuts into the top.

Roll out the remaining pastry and fit it over the pâté to meet the edge of the bottom crust. Pinch crusts together neatly to seal. Cut a hole in the center of the crust and insert a paper funnel. Decorate the top with pastry leaves or rosettes, if you wish. Brush with the egg and cream mixture and bake in a 375° oven for 1½–2½ hours, or until fat runs clear in the funnel.

Pâté in an Envelope

2 cups flour
cup butter ggs lt water pound rather fat pork pound veal pound fresh siding or pork fat loves garlic mall onions
ablespoons chopped parsley teaspoon thyme
teaspoon Tabasco bay leaf, crumbled cup cognac
ard-cooked eggs, halved gg beaten with 3 tablespoons cream

epare the pastry: blend the flour and butter ll. Add 1 of the eggs, ¼ teaspoon salt, and just ough ice water to make a ball of dough. Chill pastry for 2 hours.

Grind the meats, fat, garlic, and onions to- ther, and combine with the remaining egg, 1 olespoon salt, parsley, thyme, Tabasco, bay leaf, d cognac. Form into an oblong loaf.

Roll out the chilled pastry into an oblong ge enough to encase the loaf. Place the loaf in e center. Press the halved hard-cooked eggs to the center and corners of the loaf.

Make triangular folds of all four sides of the stry and bring them up to neatly cover the pâté d meet in the middle. Pinch the seams together mly. This should resemble a well-filled en- lope. Brush the crust well with the cream-egg ixture. Place on a baking sheet, and bake in a 5° oven for 1 hour. Cool.

TERRINES

Veal and Ham Terrine

his favorite is attractive to look at and delicious eat.

ult pork or bacon slices pounds veal scaloppine, pounded very thin
-2½ pounds thinly sliced ham or Canadian bacon tablespoon (approximately) salt teaspoon freshly ground black pepper cup chopped parsley shallots, finely chopped teaspoon thyme
bay leaf
cup (approximately) white wine

ine a 9"-long loaf-shaped terrine or casserole ith thin slices of salt pork or bacon. Beginning nd ending with veal, alternate layers of veal caloppine and ham or Canadian bacon. (Taste ie bacon or ham before cooking to gauge the salt ontent as this will affect the seasoning.) Sprinkle ach layer with salt, pepper, parsley, shallots, and hyme. Place bay leaf on top and pour white wine ver all. Cover the terrine or casserole and bake a 325° oven for 2–2½ hours, or until the juice the terrine runs clear.

Weight the terrine well as it cools. Unmold efore serving and cut in medium slices.

Variation: Alternate layers of veal, ham, or Canadian bacon with thinly sliced calf's liver, which gives a very rich flavor and produces a most interesting change in the terrine. Substitute Madeira for the white wine.

Farmer's Terrine

¾ cup white wine
½ cup cognac
1 teaspoon Spice Parisienne or quatre épices
1 teaspoon tarragon
½ teaspoon thyme
1 bay leaf, crushed
1 clove garlic, finely chopped
4 shallots, finely chopped
2 tablespoons salt
1 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
½ teaspoon Tabasco
6–7 pound turkey
1 pound lean pork, cut in 1" dice
1 pound veal, cut in 1" dice
1 pound ham, cut in ½" dice
1 pound fresh side pork, cut in ½" dice
2 pounds basic veal and pork forcemeat
4 eggs, lightly beaten
Salt pork slices
Flour and water paste

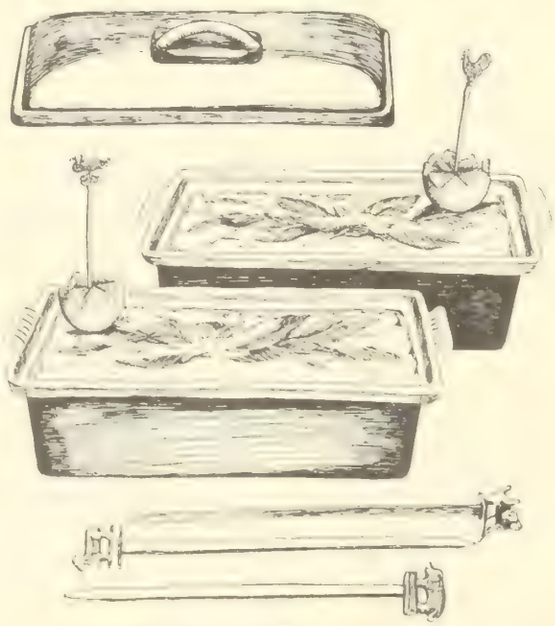
Prepare a marinade by combining the first 11 ingredients. Bone the turkey, being careful to keep the skin intact. Remove the two filets from the breast and place in the marinade with the skin and the diced lean pork, veal, ham, and fresh side pork. Marinate for 3 hours.

Grind the meat from the turkey thighs and combine with the veal and pork forcemeat and the eggs.

Remove the skin from the marinade and dry thoroughly. Line 1 very large terrine or 2 smaller terrines with a few slices of salt pork and then the skin. Remove the turkey filets and diced meats from the marinade. Reserve the filets. Blend the diced meats and the forcemeat well with the hands or with a heavy wooden spatula. Add a few tablespoons of the marinade to this mixture. Take a small bit of the mixture, mold it into a patty, sauté it, and taste it for seasoning. Place half the mixture in the terrine, arrange the turkey filets on it and add the rest. Press down well.

Pull the turkey skin over the mixture. Top with a slice or two of salt pork. Cover, and seal the terrine with flour and water paste. Place in a pan of boiling water and bake in a 375° oven, allowing 2½–3 hours for large terrine, 1½–2 hours for smaller terrines. Test by removing seal and observing the fat. If it is clear, the terrine is done. Cool for 30 minutes. Weight the terrine until thoroughly cold.

Terrine of Rabbit



4–5 pound rabbit
2½ pounds basic veal and pork forcemeat
1 cup red wine
½ cup cognac
1 onion, finely chopped
1 clove garlic, finely chopped
1 teaspoon rosemary
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon Spice Parisienne or quatre épices
Barding pork
1 bay leaf
Flour and water paste
Diced or sliced truffle, if desired

Remove all the meat from the bones of the rabbit and cut into strips, except for the filets along the saddle; leave them whole. Grind and blend the smaller bits, the liver and kidneys with the forcemeat.

Prepare a marinade of the red wine, cognac, onion, garlic, rosemary, salt, and spice, and marinate the rabbit pieces for several hours. Line a 2-quart terrine or casserole with barding pork. Place half the forcemeat mixture in the bottom. Remove the rabbit pieces from the marinade and arrange on the forcemeat. Cover with the remaining forcemeat and press down lightly. Top with the bay leaf.

Place lid on terrine and seal with flour and water paste. Bake in a 350° oven for 2–2¾ hours. Test at the end of 2¼ hours by removing seal and observing the fat in the terrine. If it is clear, the pâté is done. Cool.

If you wish, you may cut only the filets of the rabbit into strips and grind the rest of the meat with the forcemeat. The filets can be wrapped in a very thin piece of barding pork for pattern. Diced or sliced truffle may also be added to form a pattern.

Two terrines, served cold in the cast-iron rectangular molds they were baked in, make an elegant first course. You might garnish them with bay leaves and top each one with an attelet, stuck in a lemon half, announcing the terrine's contents—duck, pork, etc. —an idea borrowed from the Grand Vefour restaurant in Paris

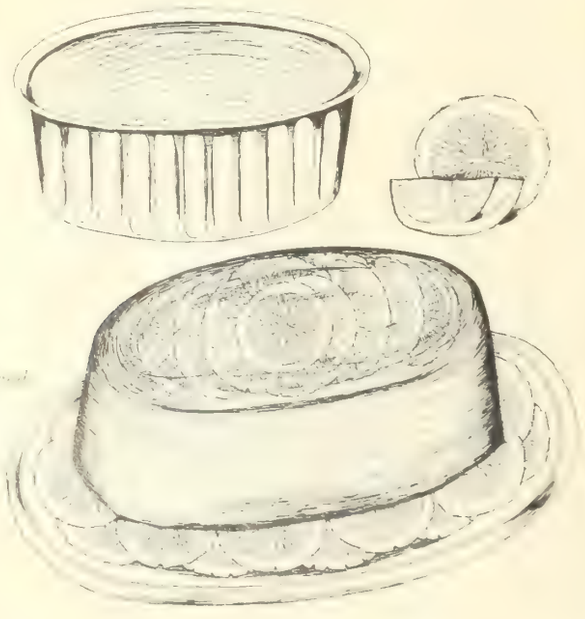
Terrine of Duck with Orange

6-pound duck
¼ pound baked ham
¼ pound pork, cut
Salt
¼ teaspoon Spice Parisienne or quatre épices
⅔ cup Grand Marnier
½ pound veal, cut
½ pound veal
½ pound fresh pork siding or fat pork
2 cloves garlic
2 teaspoons tarragon
1 bay leaf, crushed
½ teaspoon Tabasco
2 eggs
Salt pork strips
2 cups aspic (see page 215)
Juice of 1 orange
1 orange, thinly sliced

Bone the duck completely, remove the breast meat, and save the skin. Cut the breast, the ham, and the pork fat into ½" cubes. Add 2 teaspoons salt, the spice, and ⅓ cup of the Grand Marnier. Marinate for 2 hours.

Grind the lean pork, veal, fat pork, and the rest of the duck meat with the garlic, 1 tablespoon salt, tarragon, bay leaf, and Tabasco. Beat the eggs lightly and add to the mixture. Combine with the cubed meats and the marinade, and mix thoroughly. Line a terrine with a few strips of salt pork, add the meat mixture, and cover with the duck skin. Bake in a 350° oven for 1½–2 hours, or until the liquid and fat are completely clear. Cool 15 minutes. Weight the terrine and let it cool until the next day.

To serve: remove the weight and unmold the terrine. Carefully remove all the fat from the terrine and the pâté. Save the natural jelly. Replace the pâté in the terrine. Add the jelly to the aspic with the orange juice and remaining ⅓ cup Grand Marnier. Cover the pâté with orange slices, and then spoon the aspic over it. Chill thoroughly. Serve from the terrine or on a platter decorated with orange slices which have been dipped in aspic and chilled.



Terrine of Livers with Ham

1 pound chicken livers, trimmed
⅔ cup port or Madeira
1 tablespoon salt
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
1 bay leaf
¼ teaspoon Spice Parisienne or quatre épices
1 pound chicken hearts, chopped
½ pound cooked ham, chopped
1 pound good sausage meat or pork forcemeat
½ cup soft bread crumbs
1 egg, slightly beaten
Thin slices of barding pork
Flour and water paste

Marinate the chicken livers in the port or Madeira and the seasonings. Combine the chicken hearts, ham, sausage meat, or pork forcemeat, and the bread crumbs. Blend with the egg. Remove the chicken livers and bay leaf from the marinade and add the marinade to the forcemeat mixture. Mix well. Line a 2-quart terrine with the thin slices of barding pork. Alternate layers of the forcemeat mixture and the chicken livers, ending with forcemeat. Top with a piece of barding pork and the bay leaf from the marinade. Cover and seal the terrine with flour and water paste. Bake in a 375° oven for 1½–2 hours. Cool. Serve from the terrine.

Terrine of Duckling

5–6 pound duckling
1 pound chicken livers or duck livers, if available
5 eggs
6 shallots
1 clove garlic
½ teaspoon Spice Parisienne or quatre épices
1½ teaspoons basil
1 tablespoon salt
½ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
1 pound pork forcemeat

1½ pounds tongue, cut into ½" wide strips
Thin strips of barding pork
Truffles

Terrine of Duckling makes impressive party fare unmolded, decorated with sliced orange, and served on a bed of aspic-glazed orange slices on a platter. Or it can come to table in its oval white porcelain mold. For shopping information, see page 224.

Split the skin of the duck down the back carefully remove skin and meat from the bo being careful not to pierce the skin. Remove filets carefully and grind the rest of the meat v a little of the fat. Grind the gizzard and the h as well.

Whirl the chicken livers in a blender w 2 of the eggs, the shallots and garlic.

Combine the livers, the ground duck m and the seasonings, and either beat in a bowl w a wooden spoon or pound in a mortar, adding remaining 3 eggs, one at a time, the forceme flour, and cognac. Test a small amount of t farce for seasoning by sautéing it in butter a cooling it, then tasting.

Line a large terrine with the duck skin, side up. Make a layer of about half the far On it lay one of the filets of the duck. Add a th layer of farce, then strips of tongue wrapped thin strips of barding pork, and one or two wh truffles, judiciously placed. Next make anot layer of the farce, add the other filet, and fini off with the farce. Top with thin strips of bardi pork. Bake, uncovered, in a 300° oven for 2 hours.

Cool for 20 minutes. Weight and cool th oughly. You can unmold the terrine from its co tainer in order to remove all fat, then replace the container and cover it with aspic made wi the duck bones, seasonings, and a veal knuck This can also be made in small 12- or 16-oun terrines, for which the baking time is about hour in a 300° oven.

Terrine aux Aromates

1 pound bacon
3 pounds spinach, or 2 packages frozen chopped spinach
3 tablespoons chopped parsley
1 medium onion, finely chopped
2 large or 3 small cloves garlic, finely chopped
1 tablespoon finely chopped fresh basil or 1 teaspoon dried basil
1 cup small Italian or French black and green olives (pit before measuring) 1½ pounds coarsely ground pork, ¾ of it lean, ¼ fat
Salt, freshly ground pepper
2 eggs
½ teaspoon each thyme and rosemary
Dash of nutmeg
Dash of Tabasco
⅓ cup cognac
½ pound uncooked ham, sliced
2 large bay leaves
Flour and water paste

Line the bottom and sides of a large terrine with strips of the bacon. Cook the spinach just until wilted. (If frozen spinach is used, merely thaw and press water through a sieve. Do not cook.) Chop spinach very fine and combine with half the chopped parsley, onion, garlic, and basil, and half the pitted olives.

Combine ground pork with salt, freshly ground pepper, eggs, the remaining herbs and seasonings (except the bay leaves), and the cognac. Place half the pork mixture on the bottom of the terrine, cover with thin slices of ham, then with half the spinach mixture. Next add a layer of pork, about half the remaining amount, then ham, spinach, and finally the rest of the chopped pork. Press down well and place the two bay leaves on top.

Cover with foil, place the lid on top and seal with flour and water paste. Place the terrine in a pan of boiling water and bake in a 350° oven for 1½ hours.

ght mainly by people who have them in Europe and have de- ped a liking for their peculiar eral flavor. Some are drunk ly because of their taste, some ne basis of their reputation for th-giving properties, some for purity. Nearly all mineral wa- by the way, are best when ed, for chilling minimizes their hy flavor, or their lack of it.

In addition to imported wa- there are a number of well- blished brands of American eral spring water, and the de- d for them is increasing. Every e in the Union contains mineral ngs and the water from many iem is bottled for regional use. vever, the most famous Amer- water—that from Poland ing in Maine—is sold all over country. It is non-sparkling neutral in flavor, making it an l water for table use. Another ular domestic water, widely , is Mountain Valley Mineral er from Hot Springs, Arkan- It is also non-sparkling, with int taste of minerals, although very low in salt content.

Literally scores of mineral wa- are bottled in all parts of the ld, but here are the major ones orted to this country:

llinaris. This naturally carbon- l water from Germany's Rhine- l is one of the oldest bottled ers to be shipped. It has a live- lavor and is refreshing at any e of day by itself, or as a mixer.

hy-Célestins. There are several ings at Vichy in France, of ch Célestins is the only palata- table water. Far and away the t-seller among bottled waters, it a distinct mineral flavor, even en chilled. The other Vichy wa- are so strong as to be medi- es, and are taken in limited es. The Vichy springs are ned and operated by the French ernment; over eighty million tles of Vichy-Célestins are pped annually.

rrier. Another French water, s one is strongly effervescent, not strong in flavor. It is ideal highballs, and is widely used France in place of club soda. freshing to drink upon arising the morning, it is equally so be- e retiring at night.

n Pellegrino. An Italian spar- ng water, pleasantly brisk, with narked mineral taste.

tel. This non-sparkling, slightly aline water from France is used principally as a table water. It should be well chilled.

Evian. A sweet, pure, still water from the Cachat Spring in France, its taste can best be described as innocent.

Garci-Crespo. This is one of several waters bottled at Mexico's largest spa, and by far the most popular. It is slightly effervescent, and although it contains traces of a dozen or more minerals, it has no strong flavor and is an excellent mixer.

While many sparkling mineral waters mix well with spirits, club soda is of course still the most widely used. Next in popularity as mixers are ginger ale and quinine water. The former originally was made by a brewing process, like beer, and the bubbles were the result of natural fermentation. Now a ginger-flavored syrup is combined with carbonated water to produce this tangy drink. For some reason it is especially popular with servicemen. Sit at a bar in any airport, and the chances are that the soldier next to you will ask for a "gingerball" or "ginger and . . ."

Quinine water, or "tonic," was first used by Colonials in the hot countries as a sort of specific against the ever-present threat of malaria. Although not very effective for that purpose, it made a good excuse for having a drink. Now tonic is mixed with everything—gin, vodka, rum, even whiskey—and consumed in every season. Its curious bittersweet flavor seems to have an almost universal appeal, despite the fact that it pretty well conceals the flavor of whatever spirit is mixed with it. Some people drink it straight and consider it most refreshing, especially on a hot midsummer afternoon. Often a twist of lemon is added, or a quartered lime, to give a little piquancy. In recent years it has even been bottled pre-flavored with lemon and orange.

Carbonated water (club soda, effervescent mineral water, or other beverages containing carbonic acid gas), besides adding sparkle and zest to mixed drinks, also has the peculiar property of getting the alcohol into the blood stream faster than when plain water is used. So if you are in a hurry for alcoholic exhilaration, use a sparkling mixer.

Just about everyone knows how to make highballs, Collins, and rickeys, but the average home bartender is apt to get into a rut, making the same drinks time after time. If you would welcome a change of pace, here are a few suggestions. In the recipes that use club soda, you can substitute carbonated mineral water just as well.

Modern Maid and Gas give you outdoor flavor with indoor convenience in a Double Oven and Combo Grill®

Even the newest bride's a good cook with Modern Maid's new Gas built-ins. Separate burners and controls for each oven allow baking in both ovens at the same time. Or, if you prefer, you can broil or rotiss in the upper oven while baking in the lower. All at different temperatures, too! Broiling and rotissing are quicker, cleaner and tastier with exclusive Gas Infra-Ray®, the new radiant heat that gives meats outdoor flavor.

Gas programmed cooking lets you go shopping while the meal cooks and automatically turns down to lo-temp for keeping foods serving-hot. And for steaks with the flavor of all outdoors, but no outdoor bother, you can have Modern Maid's Combo Grille® with permanent ceramic coals. See these new Modern Maids at your dealer or Gas company.

Fizzes

Fizzes are rather like cocktails with club soda added. You shake the spirits and flavorings with ice, strain into small highball glasses (over ice cubes or not), and fill with well-chilled club soda.

GIN FIZZ

Shake well with ice: 3 ounces of dry gin, a tablespoon or less of bar sugar, and the juice of ½ lemon and ½ lime. Strain into a glass, and fill up with club soda.

SILVER FIZZ

Same as Gin Fizz, but add 1 egg white before shaking.

GOLDEN FIZZ

Same as Gin Fizz, but add 1 egg yolk before shaking.

RAMOS FIZZ

For this classic New Orleans eye-opener, the glass should be frosted with lemon juice and sugar (rub a cut lemon around the rim of the glass, then spin it in fine sugar). Shake well with ice: 3 ounces of dry gin, 1 egg white, 1 ounce of cream, 3 or 4 dashes of orange flower water, and the juice of ½ lemon and ½ lime. Strain into the prepared glass and fill with club soda.

HONOLULU FIZZ

Shake well with ice: 3 ounces of light rum, 1 tablespoon (or less) of bar sugar, 2 tablespoons of pineapple juice, and the juice of ½ lime. Strain into a glass, and fill up with club soda.

Puffs

Puffs may be made with gin, rum, or whiskey, but brandy is the classic base. They are pretty to look at and most salubrious to drink. In a highball glass put 2 or 3 ice cubes; add 2 ounces of brandy and 2 ounces of milk, and fill with chilled club soda. Stir lightly and serve.

Other effervescent drinks

There are countless other drinks that are made with charged water, ginger ale, or some similar carbonated beverage. (We don't include champagne here, but it is probably the best mixer of all.)

Here are a few somewhat off favorites:

MAMIE TAYLOR

(Who was she, to be so immo ized?) Put a slice of lemon highball glass with ice cubes; 2 or 3 ounces of Scotch whisky with ginger ale, stir, and serve

GIN BUCK

In a highball glass with ice cu put the juice of ½ lime, a cou of twists of lime peel, and 3 our of dry gin. Fill with ginger ale, lightly, and serve.

DOCTOR FUNK

(Another mysterious personal but a benefactor of humanit Squeeze a lime into a shaker drop in the skin. Add 3 ounces dark rum (not a Jamaican, but more on the order of a Martini rum), a teaspoon of Pernod, a t spoon of grenadine, ½ ounce lemon juice, and a little sug Shake well with cracked ice, p into a tall highball glass, and with club soda.

SHANDYGAFF

This old British libation is alm too easy. Fill a tall glass w equal parts of chilled ale and g ger ale (or ginger beer).

MOSCOW MULE

In a tall highball glass put t juice of ½ lime and the peel. A ice cubes, 2 or 3 ounces of vodk and fill with ginger ale or ging beer. Stir and serve.

AMERICANO

Very popular in Italy as an apé tif, but drunk mostly by Italian In a highball glass with ice cub put 3 ounces of Italian (swee vermouth and 1½ ounces of Ca pari. Add a twist of lemon pe fill with club soda, stir, and serv

SINGAPORE GIN SLING

Shake well with ice: 2 ounces dry gin, 1 ounce of cherry brand a teaspoon of sugar, a dash Angostura bitters, and the juice ½ lemon. Strain into a tall glas add a couple of ice cubes, and fi with club soda. Twist a lemon pe over the top, stir, and garnish wit mint.

RUM FLOAT

In an old-fashioned glass put couple of ice cubes and fill almos to the top with club soda. Lay th bowl of a tablespoon on top, an carefully pour in medium-dar rum so that it runs over the su face, but does not mix. The liquid combine in your mouth. Brandy i also good for a float.

Upstairs, the study-guest room shares the airiness and view of the two-story garden room

The stairway makes three short turns around a plant-bordered reflecting pool off the entrance hall. Through the skylight above, the whole stairwell is flooded with sunlight that keeps the plants flourishing. Pierced wood panels like those at the end of the garden room form a balustrade for the stairway.

At the top of the stairs, a sliding door leads from the gallery overlooking the garden room to the study which also opens wide to the room below. But when it becomes a guest room, pierced panel screens (see page 202) can be closed without cutting off too much light. The door at the right of the convertible sleep-sofa leads to a dressing room and bath.

From the study, the Loys can survey the whole garden room with its plants and burbling fountain – and through the 20-foot-high glass wall, the courtyard.

Ever see a purple PIANO ???

WE ARE real proud, here at Story & Clark, that our instruments are being featured in House & Garden's Color Program: it emphasizes the fact that we love doing special finishes to match your color chip or finish sample.

● (We happily match anything you have in mind, whether distressed natural-wood finishes, or House & Garden colors, or decorated French or Oriental effects, or just plain unconventional!)

● You see, we do many unique and wonderful "inside" things, which you can't even see, to provide superior acoustics. So why not take a little trouble with the outside, too?

● Also, we know for sure that beautiful exteriors do increase the delight that children get out of learning to play. This actually makes it easier to learn—helps open up to them the lifetime pleasures of playing. And we're all for that, too.

● Ask your dealer for the beautiful full-color Story & Clark brochure—or send $1 to Story & Clark Piano Company (Decorator Department), 1214 Central Avenue, Wilmette, Illinois 60091.

arise, and some, at the decorator's discretion, may not be billed.

Apart from such standard practices, however, you may still discover that one interior designer will give you an estimate of, say, $5,000 and another name twice that price. The difference more often lies in the quality of the furnishings than the quality of the taste. A clever decorator can use such elements as color, scale, and surprise to great effect; you pay for only average furnishings and the priceless ingredient of invention is thrown in for free. If you want a few or many beautiful things, however, you must be prepared to pay for them. As a rule, decorators who are known for distinguished or lavish interiors tend to think in rather high-priced terms, whereas those who have made a success of moderately priced jobs find them a challenge.

In paying a decorator's bill, installments are usual. You pay a third at the beginning, after you have decided what you want and your decorator has drawn up an itemized estimate (not a contract, as many prices cannot be guaranteed at this time). You pay another third a little later after the furnishings have been ordered, but before delivery—and the balance on completion. But arrangements for payment differ, and the one way to be sure is to ask.

Assuming, however, that you are green as grass about decorating expenses, begin by making up your mind how much you can spend at this particular time. Then get a rough idea of how much that will buy by shopping around in magazines, newspapers, small shops, and large stores. If y plans and your budget are way of line, either tailor your taste your available funds or cons one of the following solutions house or even a single room be decorated in stages, each p for as completed. In the inter of coordination, the basic p should be made at the start, but execution may be spread out o two or more years. Or you mi finance the job through your ba or work with the decorating partment of a store that has advantageous financing plan.

The benefits of a consultati

To get a more accurate idea costs than shopping on your o will give you, consider investing a consultation. Many independe decorators and store decorati services give professional advi for a fee based on the time volved. It is money well spent you want to ascertain an interi designer's customary price brack and get a knowledgeable opini about probable expenses. Shou you subsequently decide to gi the consultant your job, the fee f the first discussion will be credite to your account.

A consultation is also an e cellent beginning if yours is small project and you want a pr fessional steer before going ahea on your own.

How to choose a decorator

To avoid wasting time, do you homework about costs before yo start thinking about any specifi interior designer. You may fin at your field of choice is, of necessity, limited. It would be pointless to discuss the details of a ,000 job, for example, with someone who thinks in terms of a 0,000 minimum.

If you can, track down possible candidates through their work. ou may see examples you like in ends' houses, furnished model artments or houses in new building projects, design centers in rge cities, settings in stores, pictres in magazines. Failing all ese, you can write to the A.I.D., 3 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y., 022, and the N.S.I.D., 157 West th Street, New York, N. Y., 019, for names of members in ur area, or look for interior degners' names in the classified secon of your telephone directory. r you can go to the decorating partment of a dependable store id make an appointment. How- er you proceed, be sure to see ther pictures or actual examples the decorator's work before aking a decision.

When meeting any interior esigner, try to sense whether the o of you are basically on the me wave length. If not, look far- ier. If you have the least doubt, ie consultation is an excellent ay to find out more about a degner's personality and taste, as ell as his professional spending abits. Should you like him and is work, but discover that it's out f line with your budget, don't be mbarrassed; simply say so. Conersely, should a decorator's estiates suit you a good deal more an his taste, don't go ahead on ie basis of cost alone.

If yours is a very special project such as a one-room apartment o be done on a shoestring, try to nd a decorator who specializes in hat because it may not be everyne's forte. If he turns down the ob, be grateful for his honesty and sk him to suggest someone else. And remember that the decorating departments in large, well-known tores are usually equipped to handle a job of any type at any price within reason.

How to work with your decorator

If you are building a house or remodeling, bring your decorator into the planning as early as possible so he can work right along with the architect or builder. Decisions such as the design of built-in storage, the location of electric outlets, the material or finish of floors should be made during the construction stage; they become more costly later. If you are moving to another house, it will be much easier to paint, paper, refinish floors, and make other changes before you move in. If you are redecorating rooms in which you are living, the timing is mostly a matter of your convenience, but do not underestimate the amount of time it will take. Furniture, for instance, often requires two to three months for delivery.

The first conference generally takes place in the decorator's office. Begin by telling him how much you intend to spend and what you hope to get for that sum. He may disenchant you right away, or suggest various compromises, but he cannot proceed at all without an honest statement first from you.

Once the two of you have worked out the broad approach and defined the limitations, your decorator will want to know a lot more—the kind of life you live, the size of your family, the amount and nature of your entertaining. An experienced decorator will ask you many leading questions, and is entitled to thoughtful answers. He will want to know about your tastes: what you like and dislike. Immediate elimination of the latter will save time. Above all, describe the mood you want—quiet or dramatic, old-world or newminted, sophisticated or informal.

Before you become involved with a decorator, make as many basic decisions as possible with your family. But early in the project, arrange to have the decorator meet your spouse, since an experienced decorator finds it helpful to talk to a couple together about their needs and wants. One such meeting is usually sufficient. From then on, the most satisfactory and efficient procedure is for one member of the family to work with the decorator, and talk over the various developments with the other in private. Be careful not to impose on the decorator's time. Indirectly, you are paying for it; the more minutes you waste, the less he can give to service and selection. Do not pester him with unnecessary telephone calls, and stick to the subject when you talk to him.

Try not to vacillate. Make firm decisions and do not change your mind unless you are prepared to pay for it. A skilled decorator will not allow you to make mistakes provided you listen to him. He may show you three or four materials for a given sofa, all of which would be suitable and effective. He will tell you which one he prefers, but if you like another better, rest assured that it is a good choice, or he would not have shown it to you in the first place. There is no such thing as the one rug, color, or anything else that is right for a particular scheme. Several are right; hundreds are wrong, but a conscientious decorator will not even consider any of the latter unless you insist on it.

It goes without saying that there is no point in working with an interior designer unless you have confidence in him. You don't need to be knowledgeable about decorating; that is his profession. But you should be honest with him about yourself and what you want. You should also make yourself responsible for the small touches that will put your signature on your room or house. Every interior designer worth his salt wants to express his client's personality, which means that he needs you as much as you need him.

ave that much time to wait, be sure to apply a lime- or alkali-resistant primer. Otherwise, you can use a regular primer or merely a thinned first coat of the same paint that is to be used as a finish. When it comes to supplies of standard products such as primers and thinners, you can be generous in your quantity estimates, for the dealer will probably agree to refund the price of any unopened cans you may have left when the job is completed.

Don't stint on the quality of paint you buy. Whatever type of paint you need for whatever purpose, be sure to buy the best you can lay your hands on. A less than perfect paint job can almost always be touched up or cleaned up if you catch the flaws immediately, but the most meticulous work of the highest skilled craftsman will not stand up if the paint is poor. It may change color within a week, develop streaks, or even peel off the wall. In any case, the cost of the paint is nominal compared with the cost of the labor and time involved in dismantling a room (or porch or terrace) and putting it back together again. The average price of a top-grade formula-mixed product is around $6.75 a gallon for interior paint (some very deep shades may cost as much as $8), and $8 a gallon for exterior. You may find variations of twenty or thirty cents one way or the other, but a difference of a few dollars should be highly suspect. Good paint goes on more easily, keeps its color, can be cleaned more often. It will last you a long time.

ALL-SPRING, ALL-COLOR, ALL-BULB PLAN FOR A 40-FOOT BED

A plan, however tentative, is always helpful when you are about to fill a whole long border with spring bulbs. For one thing, there are so many kinds to choose among that pre-selection becomes virtually essential. For another, while all spring colors seem to riot harmoniously together (if that is a permissible thought), a certain logical progression from blossoming period to blossoming period, from color to color, from height to height, makes for more satisfying results. Nevertheless, while this advice holds true in general, the starter plan above for a mixed bulb border some 4 by 40 feet suggests a special fillip—the sprinkling, like sugar plums on a cake, of some of the very tallest and most spectacular tulips almost at random through the garden (big black dots on plan). Tulips, daffodils, hyacinths should average 6 inches apart each way (4 per square foot). Filler bulbs (cross-hatching)—puschkinias, snowflakes, grape-hyacinths, snowdrops, scillas, crocus—drift among the mainstays 2 or 3 inches apart.

The art of stenciling

Decorating with stencils calls for only a few simple materials and easy-to-learn techniques

ing goes quickly, dries y, and is a tidier job than ight imagine. It would be however, to plan your work lay when you expect few in- tions and to wear old clothes nock.

your supplies on a table d with newspapers or a sheet. You will need: ruler, pencil, japan paints, tur- e, old saucers for mixing palette knife or old spoon ixing, a cylindrical stencil (preferably two—one for colors, one for dark), mask- pe, stencils (your own or pre- paper towels and tissues for up, perhaps brown paper al prints, foil to cover saucer. following instructions are on the recommendations of l artists Bishop and Lord.

u prefer to cut your own ils, first draw a design on il paper. Or, with a pencil, a design laid over a piece of n paper placed face down on tencil paper. When the print s through on the stencil pa- se a razor blade or mat knife t out the parts to be painted. ır pattern requires more than olor, cut a different stencil for color. To be sure the second ird stencil will lie in the same ion as the first, stack together encils a given pattern requires carefully cut a dot-sized reg- mark in the upper right and r left corners of all of them at . Each time you set the first il in place, make a pencil through each register hole the surface of the furniture, , floor, or whatever you are ciling. Then match the register s of each subsequent stencil to e pencil marks before painting.

sure the surface to be stenciled lean, free of any wax, grease, ld varnish. Before decorating furniture or floors or high-gloss dwork, you must either remove finish, or pre-paint with flat nt to achieve a smooth working face. For unfinished furniture, a preliminary stain or antique sh (without glaze) or a coat of paint. Do not try to stencil slick faces such as ceramic or vinyl or glass.

asure carefully when planning position of your stencils. On all jobs use light pencil marks indicate where the stencils are to begin and end. For a large project such as a wall or floor with an all-over pattern, the plotting will go faster if you use a blue-chalked carpenter's plumb line which you can get at a hardware shop or lumberyard. With the help of a partner, stretch the plumb line taut between measured pencil marks, pluck it so that it snaps and leaves a chalk guideline which you can erase after the paint is dry.

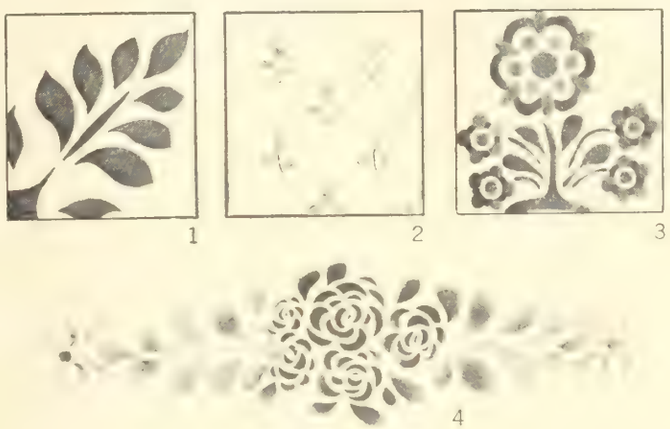
Tape your first stencil in place with two or three short pieces of masking tape.

Mix japan colors to get the shades you want. Add turpentine until paint is the consistency of cream. Remember that a little paint goes a long way and one dip of the brush, wiped on paper towels until almost dry, will be enough for three or more stencils. One saucerful is enough for the average project. If interrupted, cover saucer with foil. For a large project such as a floor, it's wise to mix all the paint you will need and put all but a saucer's worth in covered jars. Thoroughly washed cold cream jars are ample.

Hold the brush as if it were a large crayon. Dip brush in the saucer, then blot on paper towels until it is all but bone dry. Now tamp your brush in a circular motion over the design, brushing from the outer edges inward where possible. Avoid letting paint pile up at edges because this causes running-under and will spoil the clarity of line. The finished effect can be dappled or opaque. You can shade dark to light by the heaviness or lightness of your touch.

Move the stencil to its next position and secure with masking tape. If you picked a design with more than one color and therefore more than one stencil, paint the entire surface with your first stencil before starting with a second stencil.

Don't be afraid to lift up a stencil corner to see how things are going. If you discover that you have somehow miscalculated a position or made a messy print, tape off the surrounding area with masking tape and wipe up this print with tissue barely moistened with turpentine.



Paint must not be allowed to cake on brushes. At the first sign of this, stop and clean your brush with turpentine and paper towels. Give brush bristles time to dry or blot them thoroughly before reusing. Caking may indicate that your paint needs thinning with a little more turpentine.

When the job is done, rinse brushes in changes of turpentine until the final rinse is clear, then wash with liquid detergent and warm water and dry thoroughly.

To protect the stenciled surface of furniture, wait forty-eight hours and then antique-glaze it or brush on one coat of low luster, polyurethane varnish. Use a good quality brush and follow directions on the can. For floors, use two coats and re-varnish after a year or when floors begin to show wear. You will not need to wax this floor, ever. For other surfaces, you don't have to do a thing. Wait at least three weeks after stenciling plaster walls before you clean them. After that, when cleaning is necessary, use mild soap and a sponge.

Additional tips: borders and large repeats are the easiest to do; small all-over patterns like the challis or calico the hardest. Curved surfaces such as table legs are quite tricky because of the difficulty of getting stencils to lie flat. Large curved surfaces such as lamp shades are not too awkward if the stencil is well taped and also held down firmly with your fingers. Japan paint can be used to stencil fabrics, but if you plan to have them washed or dry-cleaned, use textile paints instead and follow the special instructions for them.

Four Patterns for Large Areas

Stencils especially suited to over-all repetition: (1) Over-scaled Leaf, 16 inches square (can be flipped to compose a giant tile pattern); (2) Floral Calico, 4 inches square; (3) Provincial Bouquet, 7 inches square; (4) Flower Garland, 1 foot long.

Four Border Patterns

Stencils to border walls, doors, ceilings, beams, floors, windowshades, lamp shades, furniture: 1) Beading, ½ inch wide; 2) Grid, 2 inches wide; 3) Rope, 1 inch wide; 4) Floral, 2 inches wide. All eight patterns were designed by Bishop and Lord.

Shopping information on furnishings on pages 198-199, see page 224. For further information on the stenciling kit being prepared by Bishop and Lord, write H&G's reader Service, 420 Lexington Avenue, New York, N. Y., 10017.

PLANTING AND LIGHTIN EXPAND LIVING SPAC

A rectangular concrete fountain, created on the spot by landscape architect Deane Lawrence, flanks the entrance path, provides a featured accent to be enjoyed from the dining terrace (page 186). From the golden shower of Warminster broom in the background to the garland of mountain-andromeda and saucy herb planter in the foreground, the planting is part decoration, part architecture, part gardening.

Two of the most important factors contributing effectiveness of the terraces in the house that outward, pages 186-195, were the choice of plan terials and the new low-voltage lighting systen doors.

For the planting, H&G and landscape arch Deane Lawrence chose, for the most part, indige species, because on Cape Cod, as in any area, are the easiest to care for, and planted areas in mony with the surrounding natural landscape easier on the eye. They also tend to carry the outward, just as the repetition of colors and n rials, indoors and outdoors, tends to carry the outside the house.

Furthermore, the climate of Cape Cod (ar most insular climate like that of the British Isle the Cape's own satellites, Nantucket and Mart Vineyard) holds two hazards for any plants that not indigenous: wind and sandy soil. The on-sh southern winds are also the strong winds, and sand that makes up the bulk of the growing ea makes plants work hard for their sustenance.

others, although more familiar, perhaps, to the Appalachian uplands, are nevertheless native to this part of the country: red osier dogwood, Cornus stolonifera; mountain-andromeda, Pieris floribunda; Leucothoe catesbaei. The rest grow readily and abundantly all over the Cape. Of all the shrubs and trees, only the dogwoods and blueberries lose their leaves in winter. Both are fine foils in structural beauty for the curiously endearing scrub oak, which at New Seabury may reach a height of 10 feet or more near the ocean, twice as much in sheltered swales.

The scrub pines, all native (although other pines do well here, too), and such existing and persistent groundcover plants as bearberry (Arctostaphylos uva-ursi) and wintergreen or checkerberry (Gaultheria procumbens) were already abundant on the site, and actually set the tone for the added plantings. All on the roster impart a sense of belonging that is part of the charm of the house; all grow in the lean, weathered, acid soil of the region without problems. Only a few of these plants require artificial shelter, which we provided by planting them near fences or house walls. Those that grow best without continual sun are partly shaded by the grape-stake arbors overhead.

The outdoor lighting was designed more to make the darkn pleasantly visible than to floodl the countryside. No garish bea from high-power flood or spotlig will harass family or guests eit when they have moved outside the terraces and decks or wh they remain inside looking o Rather, a pleasant glow surrou the house, coming for the most p from above, but here and the picking up a branch pattern or t line of a walk or the fall of wat from a fountain.

All the outdoor lights in t system developed by Loran, In consist of low-voltage (12-vol bulbs powered by transforme and a variety of weatherproof fi tures produce many different lumination effects. The plasti covered wires that we used coul be strung as casually as w wanted; no conduits or unde ground installations were require either for safety in use or to sati fy a building code. The transform ers are located in the house nea the main circuit board, and th lights are all controlled by fou standard switches mounted in th conventional manner in the fron hall. Trial and error after dark and considerable ladder work were required to perfect the placement of the fixtures, with Loran's William Locklin climbing into the trees alongside the landscape architect and H&G's arboreal staff.

Although the disposer involves minimal costs in electricity (about three cents a day on the average), it requires a separate 115-volt (normal house current), 15 ampere A.C. circuit, equipped with a time-delay fuse or circuit breaker. Installation is a routine professional job done in compliance with local codes, but is definitely not a do-it-yourself project.

Who may have a disposer?

If your house drains its wastes into a municipal sewer system, your plumber will know your local code and can tell you whether or not you may install this convenience. If you have your own septic tank that meets the Minimum Property Standards of the Federal Housing Authority (the U.S. Public Health Service can give you details if you cannot learn them locally), you can use a disposer, although you may have to have your tank cleaned more frequently. In houses where drains empty into a cesspool, disposers are not advised since the added waste material may clog the soil.

When a plumbing system includes a grease trap, the plumber must either remove or bypass it.

VOL. 130 NO. 4

TOM LEONARD

On the cover: The Queens' Study in the White House was planned by architect James Hoban as a dressing room—one of four that [illegible] bedrooms designed for each corner of the second floor. It is still a dressing room, should a distinguished lady guest feel like dressing in it, and it is also a sitting room and study for Mrs. Johnson, who finds it a snug hideaway for everything from interviews to a quiet cup of tea. Redecorated during the Kennedy tenure, the room is hung and its furni[illegible] extravagantly patterned in the French classic style with medallions and garlands. All the furniture came from the White House Collection or was purchased with funds donated to the refur[illegible] lacquer daybed, the gold-embossed papier-mâché tables (there are three), the slipper chairs, the lacquered side chairs. The little Victorian chair in front of the dressing table—delicately spindled and utterly charming—was the gift of a White House doorman who thought it deserved a little glory in its old age. ...if you agree to accept only four selections or alternates over the next two years

EVER SINCE it was first published, this monumental encyclopedia has been recognized the world over as the supreme authority on food.

Compiled more than 25 years ago by the master chef and gastronome, Prosper Montagné, it was first printed in Paris by the ublishing house of Larousse. In over a mil- s and 15,000 entries, it details all mankind's knowledge about food, and its preparation ment.

the book was reprinted in France no less imes, until recently it was available only in o create an English-language edition, a staff d experts and two noted editors spent four slating this vast wealth of information.

the first American edition appeared, it went t $20 a copy and quickly became a nation- -seller at that price!

ow—in an introductory offer unprecedented in osity—you can obtain this extraordinary vol- ugh The Cook Book Guild at the special new- s price of only $1.89.

t is the scope of this huge 1,100-page encyclo- almost defies description. It is, in fact, several definitive books combined into a one-volume library on food. It is . . .

—the one master reference work that experts turn to first to check any fact, any ingredient, any secret in the whole world of cuisine. It's the book to settle every argument over culinary questions!

—a fascinating history of food through the ages, highlighted with myriad facts on the origins of foods, wines and other edibles.

—a gourmet's travel guide, with gastronomic maps and descriptions of the 25 provinces of France; recipes for regional specialties and for those of other lands.

—a manual on fine wines, providing a thorough education in their selection and serving.

—a catalog to the world's great cheeses, with 125 of them listed and described.

—a do-it-yourself handbook on everything from canning and freezing to making wine and beer.

—a sparkling omnibus of anecdotes, legends, odd facts and tales about food and famous gourmets.

It is, of course, a master cook book uniquely valuable alongside your other cook books and reference works. With its 8,500 priceless recipes, it brings you the culinary secrets of many of the world's best cooks.

Now, in this remarkable $1.89 offer, The Cook Book Guild invites you to discover for yourself the many adventures in food that Larousse Gastronomique can help you enjoy.

If you take special pleasure in preparing and sharing unusually good food, The Cook Book Guild will add much to your life. For here is a club devoted exclusively to seeking out the world's great cook books and making them available to you at guaranteed savings of at least 30%.

As a member, you'll learn what great chefs look for when selecting ingredients . . . how impressive menus are planned by famous hostesses. You'll discover budget-stretching tips . . . family and regional cooking secrets . . . delicious ways to diet . . . how to save time, effort and money.

Forthcoming selections are described in the free monthly bulletin, The Cook Book News, which also includes a "recipe of the month." You may take as few as four selections or alternates within two years, or as many as you wish. With every fourth book you buy, you may choose a Bonus Book from a list of books on cooking, homemaking, etc.

Fall-in-Love colors

Captured: that flaming moment when the leaves melt into the tawny, glowing tones of fall.

In Dorothy Gray's moisture-rich Liquessence lipsticks and nail enamels:

TAWNY LEAF, an autumn coral, more feminine than blushing.
RUSSET ROSE, wild and dusky as a woodland flower.
FIRST FROST, lipgloss with a hint of snow pink.

To highlight your eyes...velvety Brush Stroke in EVE'S LEAVES, or BLUE HAZE.

You'll fall (he'll fall) for 'Fall-in-Love' colors.

Antiques Questions & Answers

AMERICAN SHERATON SIDEBOARD

I would appreciate your opinion of the approximate age of this buffet which my family has owned since about 1920. Our understanding is that it was made in Danvers, Mass., between 1800 and 1840. I do not believe the brass pulls are original. S.H.V.D.—Louisville, Ky.

The workmanship on your sideboard of the Sheraton period is an excellent example of American cabinetwork. It was probably made between 1800 and 1820. The four reeded pilaster legs and the placing of the drawers mark it as a unique piece.

ROYAL DOULTON JUG

From these sketches, can you identify my small pottery jug in the form of a soldier or a peddler? There is another figure under the glaze on the side of the jug.

K.Q.—Geneva, Switzerland

Your jug was made by Royal Doulton Potteries, Burslem, Staffordshire. RD No. 436948 indicates the design was recorded in January, 1904.

LATE VICTORIAN BABY CARRIAGE

Could this baby carriage be called an antique? We bought it in a used-furniture store. It is all wood with metal rims on the wheels and S-shaped metal springs. A.E.B.—Houma, La.

Your American baby carriage was made about 1880–1890. (After 1895, they had rubber tires.) It is not a true antique.

After you carpet the floor,

do you have to carpet the carpet?

There are two emotions you feel when you first see your new carpet in place.
The first is pure joy. It's caused by the clean, elegant look of the spotless new carpet.
The second is fear and trembling. It's caused by the thought that people will actually walk on your new status symbol.
Your first instinct is to protect the innocent, young carpet. To cover it with runners, throw rugs. Almost anything. But that defeats the whole purpose of the new carpet, doesn't it?
When it's a World Carpet you never have to carpet your carpet. Protection against wear is built into it with tougher, stain-resistant, wear-resistant fibers. Plenty of them, too. More than enough to crowd every square yard with deep, lush pile. More than enough to cushion every footfall from stampeding children and dancing friends.
When it's beautiful and tough, it's out of this World.

Some overweight Sterling looks and feels "clubby." Actually awkward in the hand. Lunt Sterling is never merely heavy. We employ this extra weight for fuller, richer relief, for finer detailing of ornament, for a more dimensional and graceful form. This is the difference—the added luxury you really see in Lunt heavyweight Sterling. For a limited time you may save $65 on a 44-piece Service-for-8 including mahogany chest. At finer silverware stores.

Richard Ohrbach, 27, and already one of New York's "hottest" and most unconventional young designers, says: "The young today have a no nonsense point of view . . . design today is based on life today . . . geared for function and use." He's combined three Fiberglas textures at the windows and covered the walls with this beautifully "no nonsense" fabric.

Elegance without upkeep... Fiberglas* draperies.

Give young American designers the potential of Fiberglas and anything goes—as long as it's beautiful. No color is too fragile . . . no texture too delicate . . . no print too wild, if it's Fiberglas.
Fiberglas sets you free from all worries, all the effort, all the cleaning bills. Neither city smokestacks nor seashore sun can hurt Fiberglas.
It will never shrink or stretch or sag or burn. You never need to iron it! If that's not elegance without upkeep, what is?

When in New York City, visit the Fiberglas Fabric Center at 717 Fifth Ave.

The Salton Hotray® will keep meals hot before you serve them, as you serve them after you serve them, so you can come back for seconds that taste like firsts

Hot foods should be eaten hot. But seldom are because food cools off too swiftly. So not only do seconds always taste different than firsts—but sometimes, even firsts don't taste like firsts if you don't serve them instantly right out of the oven.

Putting foods back in the oven doesn't help. Because then they overcook. And dry out.

Then there are other problems with hot foods. Such as people coming late. Or people eating the same meal at different times—at breakfast, for example, when people rise at different times.

The Salton Hotray will relieve you of all these problems. And many more. Once and for all. Three meals a day. Every day in the year.

How the Salton Hotray works:

Hot foods lose their flavor in two principal ways. Overcooking. Or cooling off and drying out. Either way, they lose most of what they ever had. A Salton Hotray prevents both of these because the heat of its exclusive radiant heat, shatterproof glass panel is thermostatically controlled to point right under the cooking point. So t food on it neither continues to cook, nor stand around growing cold.

The most accurate way to explain the S ton Hotray is this: Th Salton Hotray puts food into a state of suspende animation. Thus, the neither progress. Nor r gress. But stay exactly a they were when the came off the stove.

If you're the one wh prepares the food at you house then, hopefull the information you now possess will add years t your life. Enjoy them.

Shown, 'Fiesta,' $19.9 Hotray electric food warmers from $5.95 t $59.50. EARN BIG PAY IN AN EXCITING CAREER!

Easy to learn even if you've never taken shorthand before!

STEP UP from routine office work into a glamour job where the pay is far above the average. Sit beside top corporation executives at board meetings and big conferences. Even cover conventions and courtroom trials!

With Stenotype, the world's fastest shorthand, you can qualify for one of today's top-level secretarial positions. This modern machine shorthand is a synonym for highest speed and accuracy in thousands of executive offices and important places everywhere. Your Stenotype machine uses only 22 symbols...types an entire word at one stroke..."takes" in plain English letters...provides clean, easy-to-transcribe records for permanent future reference.

Even if you've had trouble with ordinary shorthand, you can quickly become proficient in Stenotype. Notes are so much easier to take and read. You learn at home, in your spare time. The cost is remarkably low, and the machine itself is included with your course. Take the first step toward an exciting high-pay career today. Send the attached mailer for free booklet. LaSalle, 417 S. Dearborn, Chicago, Illinois 60605.

STENOTYPE MAKES ORDINARY SHORTHAND OUT OF DATE

- Stenotype is a machine shorthand. It is not a pen-and-pencil system that forces you to memorize thousands of hooks, circles, and special signs.
- Stenotype types an entire word at one stroke. Ordinary handwritten systems may require many strokes for a single word.
- Stenotype "takes" in plain English letters. This provides employers with a permanent, easily-transcribable record that is simple for any Stenotypist to refer to at any time in the future. Notes never grow "cold."
- Stenotype has no speed limit but the experience of its operator. Trained Stenotypists attain speeds of more than 200 words per minute. Complicated push-pencil systems can't compete.
- Stenotype is a small, compact, portable machine that is easy to take to courtrooms, conventions, or outside conferences at offices other than your own. This use of Stenotype—in a variety of unusual situations—is just another of the important advantages the skilled Stenotypist has over ordinary shorthand secretaries.

FRENCH JEWEL CASE

Where and when do you think my glass jewel case with metal frame was made? M.G.—Gary, Ind.

It looks very much like other glass panel jewel cases made in France in the last half of the nineteenth century.

My parents' chest of forks and knives with ivory handles are marked RFM+S. The date on the chest is 25th Jan. 1888. Can you trace them?
R.J.D.—Safford, Ariz.

They were probably made in Birmingham, England, in 1888, but the full name of R.F.M., who made them, can't be traced further.

ENGLISH CUTLERY

LOUIS PHILIPPE ANDIRONS

Can you date these gilt-on-bronze andirons? They are 13 inches tall and weigh 4 pounds.
R.G.D.—Anaheim, Calif.

From their style, we believe they are French andirons of the Louis Philippe period, 1830–1848.

The inscription on the face of our clock reads "Champion br. du Génie, Rue de Feuillade, Paris." It is bronze or brass covered with gold and is 20 inches high. How old do you think it is?
H.A.—Toronto, Canada

Your clock is a typical piece of the Napoleonic period. The maker, Champion, worked in Paris between 1807 and 1825.

Which reminds me, I must buy an anniversary present for my sister-in-law. Considering her well-stocked china closet, it should be something unobvious—perhaps that set of pots de crème cups and tray I saw at the Quai Voltaire in New York. They look like old soft-paste Leeds ware—little flutings, braided handles, etc.—but they're actually Vista Alegre Porcelain from Portugal. Could be used to serve coddled eggs, too, or small shrimp cocktails. Or they would be charming filled with tiny mixed bouquets—one at each place setting of a dinner party.

There is nothing new about dried flower arrangements, but recently I have been mixing them with fresh flowers with very gratifying results. Six or eight freshly cut roses, for instance, can be arranged to far greater effect when mixed with a cloud of dried baby's breath (gypsophila). Fresh greens can be perked up with dried bachelor buttons and straw flowers, and yellow snapdragons or daisies look wonderful twined with bittersweet. It doesn't hurt the dried flowers a bit to stand in water, I've discovered (although I wipe the stems off carefully when I take them out). But often it's not necessary to put them in the water if the stems are short—I just tuck them in between the fresh flowers and they stay in place.

Stainless steel is so handsome these days that most of us have got into the habit of using it to supplement or stand in for our good silver—in a vacation house, for instance, or at a large outdoor party that calls for several dozen forks and spoons. Still, there are times, even in such situations, when only the white gleam of silver seems to have the right look. For such contingencies, one wise woman I know has laid up a few dozen extra place settings in a handsome silver plate. Hers is 1847 Rogers Bros. "Reflection" pattern. Looks elegant, wears well, and is low enough in price so that a purchase-in-multiple doesn't cost a small fortune.

Every so often it happens that former neighbors or old friends come back for a visit and just don't have enough evenings for everyone who would like to entertain them. Last month when the Doyles were here, three of Mae's closest friends solved that problem with a traditional progressive dinner party. The Hinkleys started it off at their house with cocktails and rather elaborate hors d'oeuvres since there was to be no first course. The Corbetts had the heartier main course at their house, and we all ended up at the Clarks' for coffee and dessert. It gave the guests of honor the fun of one big evening in place of a hectic round of "dropping by for a drink."

If a drink tray is big enough to hold everything that should go on it, I am not big enough to carry it. On the other hand, I dislike the idea of an out-and-out bar in the living room almost as much as the up-and-down dash to the kitchen. But the bar I saw at the Hotel Spain last time I was in New Orleans is such a good-looking piece of furniture, I would like it even if it ran a temperance establishment. It is walnut, Spanish in feeling, with a latticework top that holds the wine rack, and handsome doors on the cabinet below. The kind of design that would go with almost any kind of furniture.

ut no. Gregor wasn't happy unless he was mak- a mess. She was glad they'd chosen a carpet of ycrest olefin.

You can't buy a more stain-and-wear resistant pet fiber than Polycrest," she reflected aloud.

"Ahh, yes," pondered Gregor, "I get inspired every time I look at it. Those artistic patterns. That warm color. That deep, lush, lofty pile. Look how Harry digs his toes into it."

"Shhh, I'm thinking," said Harry.

"And Polycrest," she said, "costs only about half what you'd expect to pay for such luxury."

"An important consideration for struggling young sculptors like myself," he agreed.

"Yeow!" cried Gregor, dropping his mallet into the deep Polycrest pile.

"Another inspiration?" she asked.

"No," he said, "I think I just broke my thumb."

Here is the most superb home library ever assembled—Great Bo

It may not be popular to admit it, but all people aren't created equal. Not with equal intelligence, anyway. And the longer they live (and learn), the less equal they get.

You were probably born with a bigger share of intelligence than most of your fellow men . . . and taught how to use it.

Chances are, the records you own play a more sophisticated brand of music. The books in your library offer more nourishment. The home you live in is equipped for a more gracious way of living.

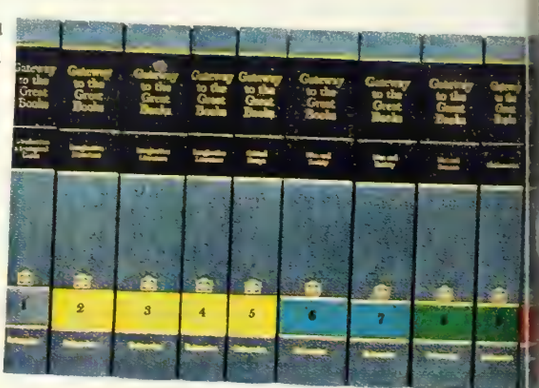
Most of all you appreciate the difference.

Certainly, you are not ashamed of having brains. You enjoy using them.

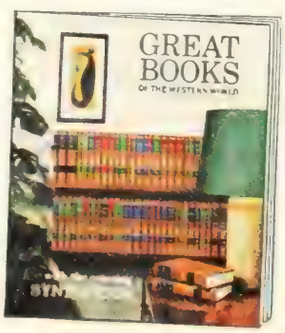
For this reason alone, Great Books belong in your home. These are the writings of Plato, Homer, Cervantes, Tolstoy, Dostoevsky, Freud, Rabelais, Aristotle, Shakespeare and many, many more. They contain just about every important thought of Western man for the past 3,000 years! The Great Books were published in collaboration with the University of Chicago, by Encyclopaedia Britannica. A set of 54 beautifully bound volumes containing 443 masterpieces by 74 of the greatest geniuses who ever lived. A library you couldn't duplicate at any price.

The $1,000,000 Syntopicon included

With the Great Books (and available only with Great Books) is a unique reference work called the Syntopicon. An amazing index that required 8 years and cost more than $1,000,000 just to write.



Unlike a dictionary that indexes words, or an encyclopaedia that indexes facts, the Syntopicon indexes i every one of the thousa topics and subtopics the Great Books.



In minutes, the Synt enables you to look u idea in the Great Book find what each of the thinkers thought about i

Also included with the Books are the handsom volume reading plans. An may also get a remarkable 10-volume set called Gatew the Great Books as well.

Tudor Manor the sign of distinction in your home

Is this Lord Quincy Beavonbrook's Tudor Manor—exactly as it looked in the 17th Century? It has the look of it—strong, solid furniture with massive leg turnings, deeply mitred panels, oversized true dovetails. But it's not Lord Quincy's. It's Globe's Tudor Manor, a furniture collection that so faithfully duplicates this sturdy magnificent look that even Lord Quincy would be hard pressed to tell it from the real thing. He'd find the warmth of age-old scars in its sturdy oak (actually, a master job of distressing by Globe's expert craftsmen). And he'd find every other fine detail he loved—because when Globe sets out to reproduce authentic replicas, they don't stop until every last detail is accounted for. NEW BUILDING FOR THE WHITNEY MUSEUM on New York's Madison Avenue. Architect Marcel Breuer describes his provocative design as a big sculpture in the form of an inverted pyramid, faced in warm gray granite. Separated from the sidewalk by a sunken sculpture court, the building is reached by an entrance bridge. The simplicity of the exterior is matched by the gray walls and floors of the interior, where the museum's permanent collection of twentieth-century American art will be displayed along with changing exhibitions. The opening show, Art of the United States, includes some 400 works spanning the period from Colonial days to the present—the inclusion of the historic examples representing a change of policy for the museum. A restaurant and cafeteria are located in the sculpture garden. Admission 50 cents. Hours: 11 A.M. to 5 P.M. Location: 945 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y., 10021.

Y., 10022. The public is invited to see examples of students' work at the studio between September 26 and 30, 11 A.M. to 4 P.M.

A MINI VALET for travelers. A small plug-in gadget called the Steam/Press Valet will steam-crease trousers, ties, skirts between two Teflon-coated pressing plates—no ironing board needed. Steam is released by a touch of a push button. The Valet measures 5 by 4 by 1¾ inches, comes with its own traveling case, $19.95. By Westinghouse Electric Corporation, 200 Park Avenue, New York, N. Y., 10017.

PREFABRICATED MULTIPLE HOUSING. "Habitat '67," a complex of apartments to be part of Expo '67 in Montreal, will become permanent housing at the close of the upcoming World's Fair. Covering a large city block overlooking the St. Lawrence River, this super-building will include 158 one- to four-bedroom apartments. The prefabricated concrete sections are made in a factory right on the site, then assembled in a stacked and staggered fashion similar to adobe communities. Each apartment has its own landscaped garden, and all walkways are protected by plastic canopies. For the duration of the Fair, many apartments will be decorated and open to the public; others will house visiting dignitaries. Expo '67 opens next April 27. Habitat '67 designed by Moshe Safdie & David, Barrott, Boulva, Associated Architects.

CONNOTATION BY DREXEL... is "in"—like informality refined to a turn. For leisure rooms in the city. For pleasure homes at seashore or mountains. Designed with the whole family in mind—a total collection. And full of fun pieces—like brass-railed bar units, poker tables, gun cabinets. Even the prices know how to take it easy! The Butler-Tray Cocktail Table is about $119, for example.

Just about all the pieces, including the functional wall units are happy-go-anywheres in the house. Here it's a private world where boys can be boys while a well-groomed look prevails. The Trundle Bed, as example of the easy-going prices, about $169. Plastic tops on many pieces.

Connotation

It had to happen.

t's a new breed of furniture for today's Leisure-Living ns and homes. A savoir-faire for aware people. The people ry of clichés—tea caddie coziness or beer-barrel ruggedness.

Connotation is casual furniture come of age.

With clean, decisive lines and an easy elegance, a tinge of anity, a sporting nonchalance.

t cannot be pigeon-holed by "look." Nor does it dictate
-track treatment. It can blend with Modern, if the spirit our house is modern . . . with Traditional, Early American, diterranean, or English. Its great simplicity of design umes your decorating thought.

A totally new concept. To satisfy the longing for comfort well as the yen for sophistication. In a full-scale Drexel lection. With two worldly colors—Briar and Brandy—as ls for distinctive brass ornamentation.

For people with a talent for setting trends and discovering em. Aren't you?

by Drexel®

...the most trusted name in furniture

See how Connotation brass strikes up the handsome finishes on oak veneers and solids . . . and how smartly Briar and Brandy can be mixed. Many door-cabinets like the one on the back wall have removable shelves for "building in" your TV and Hi-Fi. And dinner is served on a card table that opens to 68" for dining. Very versatile for only about $149.

JIG FLOOR PUZZLES for children's rooms, game rooms, terraces, decks. These are, in fact, rugs-in-pieces that come either permanently assembled, or unassembled for people who enjoy putting together and taking apart a puzzle. Designed by Betty Thomson, they are made of Vectra's Ozite, a tough indoor-outdoor carpeting that comes in sixteen colors. You can also get floorcoverings of Masonite, wallboard, or laminates in jigsaw puzzle patterns. Puzzles Inc., 322 Seventh Ave., New York, 10001.

SALTY DECORATING. At a new nautical antique and accessory shop in New York—The Captain's Quarters—you can get an architecturally trained designer to coordinate the construction and installation of a boat interior, from furniture and fabrics to antique accessories. Or if you are land-bound, he will design a marine-theme study or office. The shop is also a good place to browse for new and old nautical accessories. Hours: Monday through Saturday, 10 A.M. to 6 P.M. Captain's Quarters, 967 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y., 10021.

SACHET DISKS whose scent you can change or renew at will. Made of absorbent, pressed powdered metal, the disks are about the size of a quarter and come scent-less. You pour your own perfume on them—about thirty drops—and place the disks in a drawer or hang them in a closet where they will exude their fragrance for a long time. When you wish to renew or change the scent, you place them on a warm surface to hasten evaporation and then start afresh. The disks come either solid or with a hole for suspending them on a ribbon. $3.50 each postpaid; $4.50 gift wrapped. Available by mail from Disk O'Scent, 207 East 66th St., New York, N. Y., 10021.

THE LEATHER LOOK IN UPHOLSTERY: one new fabric, one new pattern.

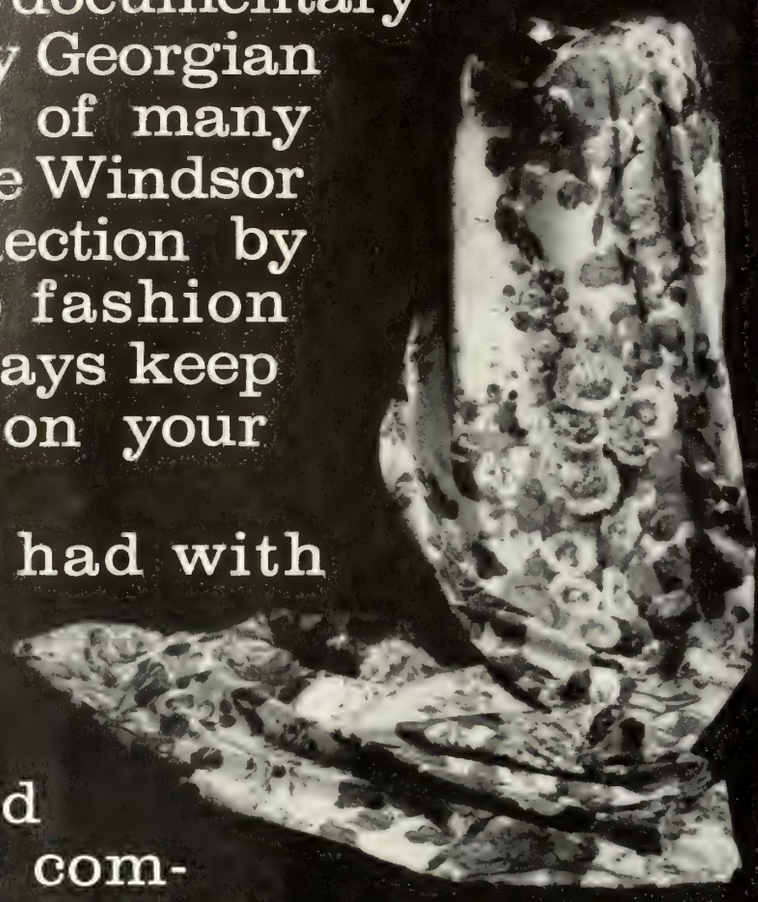
- Cavlon, a stretch fabric of Caprolan nylon with foam-cushioned backing, comes in Morocco-grain and alligator patterns as well as several others, and in sixteen colors. Feather-light and dry cleanable, Cavlon fits smoothly over any cushion with ease of snapping a rubber band. Made by Guilford Mills, Greensboro, N. C.
- Naugahyde is now available in a basket-weave pattern called Dover. This expanded vinyl comes in eleven colors. By United States Rubber Company, Rockefeller Center, 1230 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N. Y., 10020.

DECORATIVE STREET LIGHTS for residential areas. A classic four-sided lamp finished in flat black and trimmed with brass trim is now available to replace any standard pole street light where power lines are underground. It is 10 feet tall (much shorter than ordinary street lights), and its shatterproof refractor panels shed a warm glow instead of glare. General Electric calls it the "Town and Country" lamp. To brighten your neighborhood with these lights, discuss them with your local utility company or the appropriate municipal officials.

Your every day china can be so fine, most people will think it came from rich Aunt Hattie.

The trouble with the china that does come from rich Aunt Hattie is you hardly ever get to use it. It's so expensive, you're scared to death you'll break a plate. So you secret it away in some nook or cranny where nothing can happen to it, and look for something you can use.

We understand all that at Royal Doulton (we've been in the fine china business for a long time), so we've made a fine English china that looks good enough to be the china in the closet, but doesn't cost much more than plain old everyday dishes. It's called Royal Doulton English Translucent.



We have 25 patterns in all. They cost from $9.95 to $16.95 for a five-piece place setting. And you can tell from the one here, our $13.95 Tapestry, how fine a china it is. Every plate, cup and saucer is hand circled in pure gold.

We think it makes a beautiful second set of china. And if you decide to make it your one and only, we think it's fine enough for that too.

If you'd like to have our lovely brochure, so you can see all the Royal Doulton English Translucent patterns, send 10¢ to Doulton & Co., Inc. Dept. HG, 11 East 26th Street, New York, N.Y. 10010.

So very, very English.

And so favored in interior decoration these days. This authentic documentary print of 18th Century Georgian vintage is just one of many from the new Royale Windsor Garden Import Selection by Bloomcraft . . . top fashion innovators who always keep a considerate eye on your budget, too.

The print can be had with coordinated fabrics such as rich silks and velvets, as well as plaids and solid colors, so you can compose just the ensemble that you've been dreaming of. So have a smashing good time at your favorite drapery counter with Royale Windsor Garden fabrics . . . they'll make you happy for a long, long time.

EES ANCIENT "KNOSSOS." IN MODERN KNYLON.

reat Greek idea of a rug. Only 5,200 drachmas.

anslated into U.S. currency, a little less than a hundred and ty-five dollars. Which is a lot an a round trip to Crete, e we got this ancient design. e retold it in strong nylon. So an treasure it without having to watch every step you take. You can even hang it. For a rug, it's quite a tapestry.

Knossos has a primitive personality.

Right down to its heavy knotted fringe. But we left out the folksy flaws. When we tag a rug Lees, it has to be as close to perfect as we can get it.

Knossos comes in cool Aegean Sea blue and green tones. Warm Tangera rust and bronze tones. And other ancient colors. In a number of sizes.

Did you ever think about a little Greek accent to go with your Danish, English, French, Early American or Oriental?

For a lot of good, down-to-earth reasons, "those heavenly carpets by Lees."

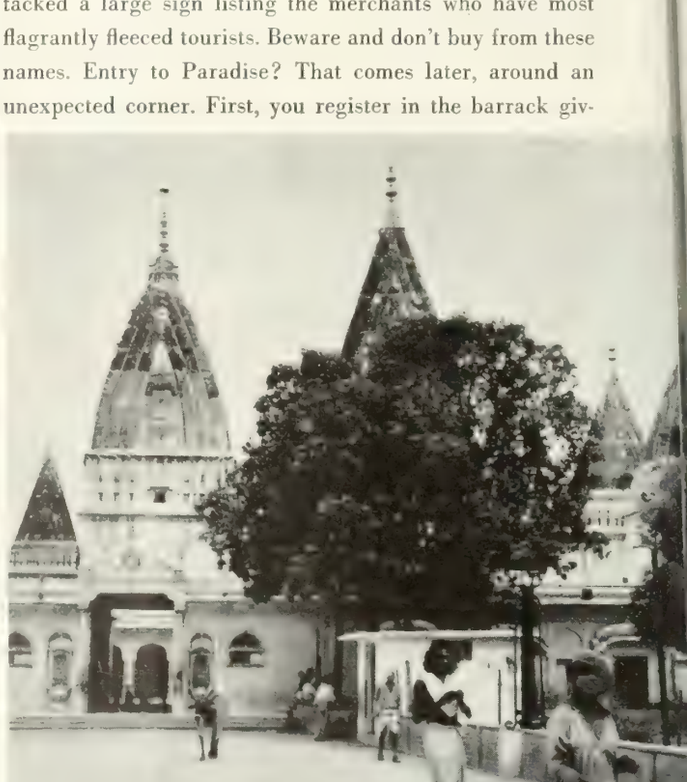
KASHMIR



BY NAOMI BARRY

EDITOR'S NOTE: A Paris-based columnist for the European Herald Tribune, Naomi Barry frequently scouts the world for newsworthy material of interest to her readers. Her viewpoint on Kashmir is as fresh and lively as it was in her insider's guide to the City of Light, "Paris Personal."

There are names that spell wonder. You say them, incant them, and up comes the spell: Samarkand, Cathay, Mozambique. From the time I could read a map, Kashmir was the place where Beauty dreamed, bedecked in flowers. My childhood image was a simple conviction, uncluttered by a single fact or detail. That was the picture I wanted. That was the picture I found.

I love the airplane for it drops you in a new place, unprepared, without easy stages to discovery. Whatever is in store, you get the deliciousness of shock.

My cousin Steve and I took the daily Indian Airlines plane from Delhi. The airport outside of Srinagar, the capital city of the province of Jammu and Kashmir, is a flat and dusty joke. A barrack welcomes passengers and shelters the paper-working personnel. On the porch is tacked a large sign listing the merchants who have most flagrantly fleeced tourists. Beware and don't buy from these names. Entry to Paradise? That comes later, around an unexpected corner. First, you register in the barrack giving your name, where you have come from, where you are going. India loves forms and signatures.

Graceful Hindu temples, a sacred cow casually cruising the street at Jammu are two exotic sights to be found in the fluid Eastern medley of Kashmir.

In time, plenty of time, the bus appeared that was to jolt us to town. There were only five Westerners on the plane and we were calmed by the patience of the others.

Srinagar flanks the curving Jhelum River and the nine bridges that span the river are your landmarks. You arrange to meet someone at, say, the third bridge. Handcraft workshops line the banks of the river; the silversmiths and the wood-carvers are located between the fourth and fifth bridges. There are a few broad promenades along the river. The two- and three-story houses on the streets behind have sloping roofs, for this is high-altitude country with snow in the winter. The rectangular wooden mosque of Shah Hamadan has a roof that aspires to a peak, suggesting the proximity of Tibet.

The streets of Srinagar are a medley of costumes, as befits a bazaar town of Central Asia. Hindu women float about in brilliant saris. The girls of the Punjab show off their willowy waists with form-fitting horizontal-striped tunics. Under them, they wear baggy pantaloons of white sateen caught tight at the ankle. (The Punjabi garb in little-girl sizes is one of the nicest souvenirs you can buy in the Government Emporium in New Delhi.) Also in the Srinagar throng walk discreet pairs of Moslem women. They are more than veiled; even their eyes are hidden behind grilles like fly protectors.

The bearded Sikhs wind up their heads in 5 yards of lime, yellow, pink, green, or blue fabric. Lengths of fabric for turbans flutter from lines stretched before a shop. Choose the color and the pattern from the bright streamer floating in the air. You see men with embroidered calots and men with astrakhan caps. Some are in Western clothes and some in white dhotis. The over-all crowd impression is fluid, flapping, or droopy—and loaded with color, color, color. Just to look at the costumes of India is to become drunk with seeing.

Srinagar has four so-called "European" or "Western-style" hotels, but there is no question where to stay for your $10 a day (which includes three meals and afternoon tea). You stay at the Oberoi Palace Hotel, once the palace of the Maharajah of Kashmir, which sits in regal splendor on vast terraced lawns overlooking spring-fed Dal Lake, a few minutes outside of town. The hotel is its own domain with a series of shops a few hundred yards away across the lawns. The shops are well-stocked (Continued on next page)

A houseboat on Dal Lake offers a choice of delights—swimming, sunning, and buying from vendors who sell their wares from gondola-like shikaras.

"Please take care of my sister..."

TAICHUNG, FORMOSA—Two-year-old Su Ying, her parents dead, waits for her brother who will never return.

Little Su Ying was abandoned in the alley behind our Babies' Home in Formosa. She was frightened, cold and hungry.

But as you can see in the picture, someone had tried to make her look pretty. Her hair was combed and her dress, even though torn, was clean.

In her hand she clutched a note written by her brother:

"Please take care of my sister. Our parents are dead for many weeks. I am twelve and can no longer find food for this small sister. To my ears came news of your House, so I bring Su Ying to you."

Will you help us give Su Ying —and youngsters equally as needy —a chance to grow up in an atmosphere of love?

For only $10 a month you can sponsor such a child and receive his or her photograph, personal history, and the opportunity to write letters.

Your child will know who you are and will answer your letters. Correspondence is translated at our overseas offices.

(And if you want your child to have a special gift—a pair of shoes, a warm jacket, a fuzzy bear —you can send your check to our office, and the entire amount will be forwarded, along with your instructions.)

Since 1938 thousands of American sponsors have found this to be an intimate, person-to-person way of sharing their blessings with youngsters around the world.

And your help is desperately needed. Overseas, our staff reports boys and girls still search garbage dumps for food . . . babies abandoned in the streets . . . blind children locked in cellars . . .

Little Su Ying and children like her need your love. Won't you help? Today? Thank you.

Sponsors are urgently needed this month for children in Korea, Formosa, India, Brazil, Japan and Hong Kong. (Or let us select a child for you from our emergency list.)

annexes for merchants in Srinagar. It is very hard to give a look-see and think you can get away without buying. The tenacious shopkeeper will go so far as to send you a car to take you to his main place of business in Srinagar.

The Oberoi Palace is the most agreeably luxurious hotel I know, thick with fine carpets and thick with attendants wearing a bewitching variety of turbans. Actually, most are hotel turbans, which means they are prefabricated and plunked on the head like a hat rather than wound around with savant artistry. But the effect is still dazzling and all that Hollywood ever led you to expect.

Kashmir's maharajah evidently lived big. There are a number of card rooms, salons, sitting rooms and grand staircases at the Oberoi which are still more palace than hotel. Meals give you a choice of Western and Indian cuisine, and there is a delectable buffet table to which you can make uncounted trips. A string trio plays for lunch and dinner.

The shikara, a boat whose lolling ease makes a Venetian gondola seem like a tub, is your transportation across the waterways of the Jhelum, around Dal Lake through the passage to Nagin Lake.

Until then, I did not know that the Gardens of Shalimar border Dal Lake. The Moghul Emperors who swept into India from Persia took control of Kashmir in 1587. Like a true potentate, the Emperor Akbar and his successors ordered a wealth of palaces, gardens, and pleasure grounds. Lake is fringed with such fantasies, and Shalimar is b

What makes "that Thomasville look" so important in decorating today? It's the way we design and craft our furniture with all the skills and artistry we have learned in 63 years. We know that the beauty of a sofa, for example, starts with what's inside (and we have a world of fabrics to cover it in beauty, too).

Making furniture with "that Thomasville look" is a matter of pride with us. After all, we want you to be proud of it, too!

Chatham's Fiberwoven fluffy blankets are for women who aren't quite re

Let's be frank. Our Fiberwoven skinny blanket isn't for everyone. Not yet.

Even though it's warmer and stronger than ordinary blankets. And it doesn't shrink (not at all). Nor shed. Nor pill. And it looks the very same after 50 washings as it does the day you buy it. (You know that's not true for any other blanket.)

Still, some women won't have the courage to buy it. They're used to the fluffy blankets their mothers taught them to love and cherish. They're just not ready for the skinny blanket with its sculptured look. No matter how handsome it is.

If that's you, consider our Fiberwoven fluffy blanket. The same Fiberwoven process means it's warmer and stronger than ordinary blankets. And it shrinks only about half as much. With a lot less shedding and pilling.

So it's pretty unusual too. And a whole lot better than those other fluffy blankets it looks like. It's just not quite as good as our Fiberwoven skinny blanket. But then, nothing is.

P.S. If you are ready for the skinny blanket, ask for it by name. Chatham's "Forecast". And in crib blankets, where washing is so important, ask for Chatham's "Tuffy".

And look for the Good Housekeeping Seal that tells you everything we've said about them is true.

at home in a sylvan setting.

I felt a skipped beat of emotion. Seated on the grass pouring tea from a slender, curve-spouted pot were seven women and children who must surely have come from Tibet—you cannot keep the phrase of Forbidden Tibet from crossing your mind.

"No," corrected Majid. "They are from the Kashmir province of Ladakh on the frontier of Tibet where the trouble is."

I continued to make conversation with Majid, asking the names of trees and flowers, and he stopped regarding me as a Western curio. From the change in his tone, I guessed he was accepting me as a human being.

"Would you like tea?" he inquired. "My cousin is inviting us." At this moment, my experience with the valley of Kashmir really began.

Majid's family was planted under a chenar tree. It is a royal tree. The fruit is not edible, the wood is of no use, but its shade is a monumental umbrella. The chenar was a gift of the Moghuls who brought it to favorite spots around the lake.

Two large printed Kashmir shawls were spread over the grass. I politely jumped out of my shoes to climb aboard. The cousin was an engineer, trained in Sweden, and he spoke excellent English. The men's heads were covered with astrakhan caps, of which the most prized come from Afghanistan over the mountain. The women, crouched at a far end of one of the shawls, tending a brazier and boiling water, giggled shyly. Their veils were timidly pulled to one side. The children were free to romp and be adored.

"Would you like your tea or our tea?" graciously asked the engineer cousin.

"Yours," I replied promptly.

"It is very refreshing," he said.

The tea was strong but lightened with milk and ghee—a clarified butter which can be preserved for a long time without refrigeration. I drained the cup with obvious appreciation but I could not bring myself to accept a second.

As we left the tea party, dusk was softly creeping over the garden. I wanted to go back to the Oberoi, but Majid was determined to drive the full long circuit around the lake. We passed another car. There was a joyous greeting between Majid and his friend, Habib, in the other car. We stopped.

Habib was with a covey of middle-aged American ladies. His light gray astrakhan cap was a splendid foil for his dark good looks. He insisted I visit his shop at the Third Bridge in Srinagar on my way back to the hotel. Resistance was useless. The two cars rushed through the night to Habib's shop, called Wali Mohamed.

The main floor was full of walnut furniture—end tables, nests of tables, cocktail tables, whatnots. It was beautifully crafted and of horrible design. I didn't even pretend to like it. Habib's dark liquid eyes gave me a knowing look. He stopped talking and led me up to a low-ceilinged room on an entresol.

"Only for special people," he said.

It was a dimly lit den of treasures. There were fine samovars, intricately wrought lanterns, brass pots, exotic jewelry, fabulous rugs, hammered copper temple ornaments. I can honestly say I wanted almost everything.

"For years, my father bought from the caravans," explained Habib. "You don't find such things anymore. The French ambassador bought much from me."

(This French ambassador is a mysterious person of marvelous taste. I came upon his traces in Cambodia and Thailand, as well. Whenever I expressed my appreciation before some rare and beautiful object, I was told by the merchant that the French ambassador had bought something like it the week before. I wish I knew his name and in what country he ambassadors. Only the best is attributed to his collections.)

Habib called for tea.

"Not now, Habib," I pleaded. "It is too late. I promise I will come back."

(The memento of my later visit to Habib is now in my apartment in Paris. It is a dark wooden bowl, quite shallow, decorated with stylized copper mountings studded with turquoise. In the center is a curious copper motif, like a sun face. He had several of them in graduated sizes. "Made in Kashmir," said Habib, "but such bowls are used in Tibet to measure rice.")

Crafts of Kashmir

The villages and hamlets of the eighty-mile-long valley of Kashmir are inhabited by thousands of superbly skilled craftsmen. The most famous article of the valley, of course, is the embroidered woolen Kashmir shawl, which has been prized abroad for years. Sometimes the embroidered wool is made up into dresses which couldn't be worse in both styling and cut. The sensible thing—provided you have a dressmaker in Paris, Rome, or Hong Kong—is to buy a length of the wool and have it made up elsewhere. The same is true for the embroidered silks for the saris. For instance, I have seen a magnificent evening coat made in Paris by Pierre Balmain which was lined with embroidered silk for a sari.

The pile carpets of Kashmir show unmistakable Persian and Central Asian influence. The most typical product, however, is the namdah—a rough white felt rug with bright wool embroidery and imaginative designs. The namdah, which varies from a bedside rug to a room-size carpet, has acquired popularity around the world.

Another important craft of the valley is papier-mâché. The designs of birds, chenar leaf, Persian rose, almond and cherry blossoms, tulip, and hyacinth are delicately conceived and minutely detailed. The colors extracted from stone and minerals never fade. The work is particularly successful in trays. At a store on the grounds of the Oberoi, I found a charming little boat-shaped container whose pattern included the four principal birds of Kashmir. The container is lined with brass, and at home I use it to hold a handful of crystallized violets or the like. If I had thought of getting half-a-dozen, they would have made perfect dishes for presenting the condiments for a buffet dinner of curry.

The jewelry can bring out every latent covetous instinct one has. There was a ring—a transparent milky moonstone encircled by small sapphires—that was the prettiest I have ever seen. The jeweler wanted $50—opening price.

The next day, my cousin and I set out for Gulmarg (Meadow of Flowers), about which we knew nothing. Twenty-four miles of jouncing in the regular bus brought us to Tangmarg, where the bus stopped, and so did the road. We and the other passengers, most of them Indian tourists from the hot cities of the plain also making the excursion to Gulmarg, got out of the bus. We wondered, what next?

Suddenly we were faced with a boil of commotion—a corral, worthy of a John Ford production, milling with at least fifty horses and ponies. In a triumph of organization, despite the shouting, all the bus passengers were mounted within ten minutes. Nearly all the Hindu women wore the Punjab pantaloons, now the official gym bloomers of India.

A troop of grooms on foot accompanied the caravan. It was four miles more to Gulmarg, winding uphill through a forest of evergreens to a huge grassy bowl 8,500 feet above sea level. Gulmarg was a surprise. There were three golf courses, seven hotels, and a number of pretty wooden chalets, despite the fact that all supplies must be brought up on the backs of bearers or by occasional jeep.

We discovered we could go on another four miles to Khilanmarg, 10,500 feet above sea level. There were only a few of us now, for most of the crowd either were absolutely terrified of horses or quite unused to physical exercise. Occasionally we passed barefoot bearers coming down from the mountains with blocks of hard-frozen snow on their backs, primitive refrigeration for the hotels down below.

Khilanmarg was Central Asia, evoking images of Alexander the Great and Genghis Khan. We were above tree line here. Flocks and herds of animals grazed on these last upland pastures, more stony than green. Above us was the steep 14,500 foot ridge of Apharwat. The slight wind was chilly, but seemed permanent. There were a few weathered-white canvas tents and a few ovens fashioned from piled rocks. The tents belonged to enterprising restaurateurs who advertised teas and curries. An occasional chicken hurried around until caught for the pot.

Here there was the curious atmosphere of a crossroads of the ancient world. Time was off its track. The people on the heights of Khilanmarg were dressed in robes and rags whose style I am sure has not changed in 1,000 years. They could as easily have been men from the year 1500 or the year 900 as of today.

That evening we dined at the Capri, the smartest restaurant in Srinagar. Upstairs off a long veranda, it was not only bright and modern but boasted both a dance band and a jukebox. The orchestra was from Goa and very good. They had picked up their rhythm from the Portuguese. Almost no one danced, for lack of partners. While there were many men, there were only a few Hindu and European women.

The next afternoon we decided to leave the hotel for a houseboat on Dal Lake. There are many luxury hotels in the world, but a chance to experience life on a houseboat is rare.

"We will put the luggage in a shikara," suggested Steve, "and float around until we find a houseboat you like." The move was easy because there is a shikara stand below the grounds of the Oberoi.

The shikaras have wild names: The New Jacqueline, My Sugar Daddy, The Leaping Lena, Heaven's Rest. The central portion of the boat is fitted with a full spring mattress covered with Kashmir shawls or carpets and an overhead awning. A backrest partitions you in privacy from the boatmen, or shikara wallahs. (Everybody who does something is a wallah.) It is not possible to sit in a shikara. The best you can do is to stretch sybaritically at three-quarter length. In no time, you are convinced that reclining is your natural position.

There are hundreds of houseboats on the Jhelum, on Dal Lake, on Nagin Lake. They are categorized into different classes according to the boat, the furnishings, the size, the food, the running water. The top grade have flush toilets with septic tanks. We liked the location on Nagin best but there was not one houseboat available. The foreign colony of Kabul in Afghanistan had moved over to Kashmir for vacation.

With our shikara, we now went houseboat hunting. We turned down four proposals on Dal Lake. The location was poor, too close to other boats. The sanitary facilities were insufficient. The interior decoration was sad. Then we found The Princess Margaret, moored in isolation near a grassy bank. A thick field of lotus flowers grew in the water around her. Geraniums livened the front porch and the upper veranda. The windows were shaded with snappy striped awnings.

The Princess Margaret had a living room, a dining room, a serving pantry, and two bedrooms each with a complete bathroom. The living room was furnished with an English-style suite of "cozy" furniture you might not want to duplicate at home, but it was comfortable and agreeable enough and the floor was thick with carpets. A kitchen boat was tied up behind so that the big house was free of cooking odors.

Abdul Ahmed Badyari hoped we would like his poor and humble boat and grace it with our presence, and he would be most honored if we would pay him a small fortune. Abdul was tall and portly. His big body was layered with nondescript droops of material. A yellow chiffon turban was wound about his head. His bare feet had marvelous large toes with a slight impudent tilt.

When he talked of his poor and humble boat, you knew he thought it was the greatest thing around—except perhaps for his other boat, The New Shabash on Nagin Lake, but that was rented. The Badyari family were established in business since 1862 and nobody's word, he assured us, was more reliable in the entire valley.

I have no heart for bargaining and do it badly. Steve has great talent for he does it gaily without damaging the dignity of his opponent. As a result, he gains respect as he whittles down the price.

Life on the Princess Margaret must have been real, but in retrospect it seems hard to believe. Abdul had a son named Ghulam who did the cleaning, and his nephew Ali did the cooking. When we wanted washing done, they called in the laundry wallah from the lake.

Water-borne Shopping

By morning, all Srinagar knew we were on the Princess Margaret. We looked up from our breakfast tea and saw a string of shikaras waiting their turn under the dining room window. There was the general store wallah who offered "fillums," "lipestick," razor blades, hairpins, Kleenex, soap, writing paper. He was followed by the candy wallah, who even had fudge and penuche he had learned to make from the English.

The shikara of the flower vendor was filled with blooms from stem to stern. I bought the whole floating garden for about $4 and spent hours arranging them. The gift of flower arrangement is much admired by the Indians, and I wanted to earn the approval of Abdul.

Everyone everywhere has his double. At the window appeared the carbon copy of Gjon Mili, the

When your Allen finally comes, you'll be glad you waited

You'll look admiringly at the way the graceful lines of the cabinetry complement your other fine furnishings. You'll touch the inviting keyboard.

Finally, you'll begin to play. Then you and your family will thrill to the incomparable tone of an Allen in your own home—the tone professional organists prefer. And you'll be glad you waited for an Allen.

We're sorry you have to wait at all. But we have so many orders to fill we often just can't deliver an Allen the moment a customer buys one. We'd like to, but we refuse to lower our standards or eliminate custom features for the sake of faster delivery. A magnificent Allen, like any fine instrument, takes time to build. We wouldn't change that. You wouldn't want us to.

The Theatre Compact, thrilling theatre sound in small home console

For those of you still thinking about an organ for your home, may we suggest that you ask your own church organist about Allen?
It's a sure way to get an unbiased, professional opinion.
Then play and listen to an Allen yourself at your Allen Dealer's showroom.
Ask him to demonstrate the newest Allen exclusives like Presence Projectors.

We hope you won't have to wait for delivery at all.
But you'll understand why an Allen really is the one organ worth waiting for.

hands of the Heritage finisher scour, sand and massage the coarse grain. And oak is brought to ellow beauty. When a table, or any piece of furniture, takes on a dimension that only the hands of an can produce, only more money can buy it.

ight be able to find a table that ike this for around $90. But on't be buying the same table that's even close. If you're , a close look or a fingertip run st the grain will tell you so in owroom. Most times, though, ter you've bought the table... a light scratch shows up allow finish.

Heritage cocktail table costs t $170. Or $80 more than its -alike." The finish on this table t come in a one-coat kit. It was up from bleached wood, stained, fixed with a sealer, sanded, glazed and lacquered.

This was the surface the Heritage finisher shaded... highlighting the turn of the grain, adding depth to the curves of the carving, pitting and specking the surface. Another coat of lacquer, a scour with steel wool and a wax brought the wood to its bottomless glow. The hands of the Heritage finisher had developed a beauty unknown to raw oak... and unique to the grain of the table.

When wood is given new beauty like this, a table costs more money. The higher price on this table—or any other piece of furniture we make—reflects deep-seated qualities only more money can buy. Not just a finish unmatched by machine or shortcut method. But the stretching, stitching and shaping that holds the lines of a Heritage sofa. The way we'll finish a leg on a sofa... whether or not it's meant to hide behind kick pleats.

When you find work like this, you'll see the Heritage name. Hanging from this countrified Louis Quinze cocktail table. Burned inside the drawers of a Heritage chest. Nestled beneath the cushions of a monumental sofa or an appealing loveseat. Swinging from a hangtag on one of our wing chairs.

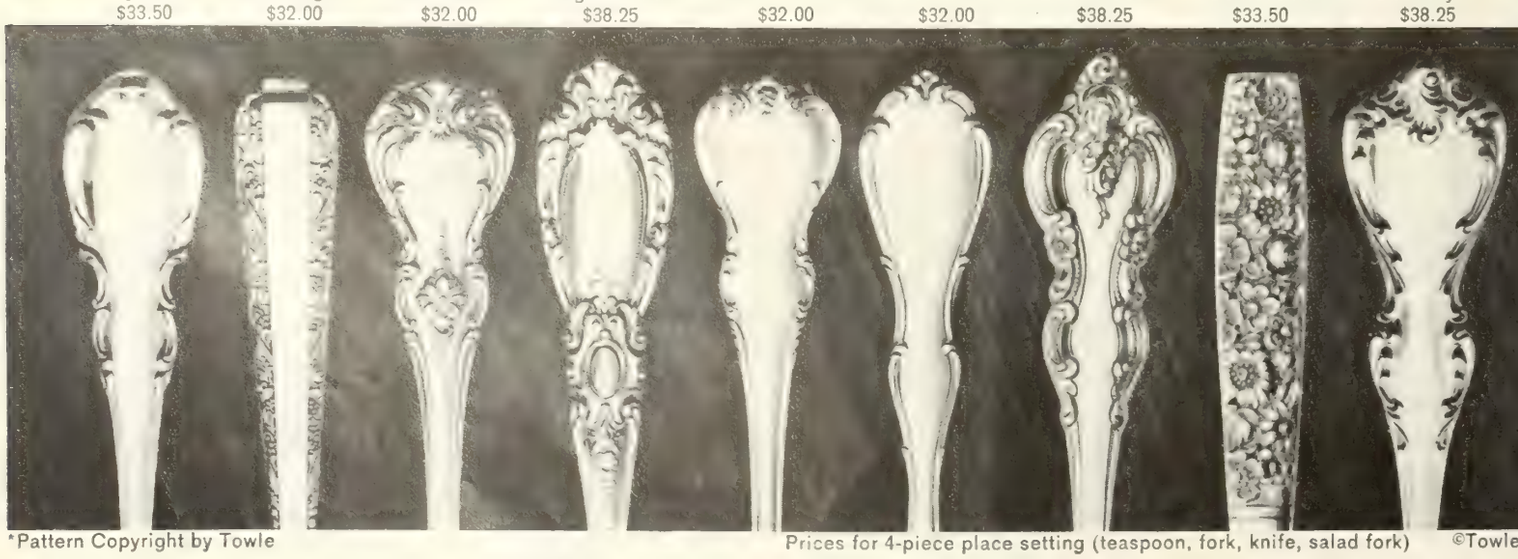
Towle made this sterling silver fork yesterday.

(No extra charge for the 164 years of craftsmanship.)



WILLIAM MOULTON IV made this tankard in almost the exact spot where Towle silversmiths work today in Newburyport, Massachusetts. He also introduced a talented young apprentice, Anthony F. Towle, who was to carry on his tradition into the next century.

You can see the Towle tradition of quality and beauty in every Towle piece. You can feel it. You can sense it. For, like its ancestors, every Towle piece is made to be admired—and used. In the dining room. In the breakfast room. You can even put Towle in your dishwasher; it's solid silver.

Take a good look at Towle before you buy. Study its elegance. Pick up a piece. Balance it. Examine its perfect design, its grace, its grandeur that could come only from the oldest silvermaking tradition in America—it dates from 1690.

But hurry. You've already missed 276 years of great silver.

[illegible] profile. His [illegible] unpossibly accented [illegible] marriage. Modom," [illegible] I have [illegible] to attempt you."

"Good morning, Salaama," I replied, bewitched to find my friend Mili. "Come in and attempt."

He paddled to the front door and marched up into the living room, trailed by his bearer lugging a sea bag. He attempted first with a mink coat but quickly agreed I was not the type.

The next try was, "Snow leopard. Born in snow, killed in snow. That is you, Modom. Fifty dollars."

I wonder now why I did not fall for such a buy, because I found the pitch of Salaama most beguiling, and the coat wasn't bad at all.

"Salaama," I asked, "you don't mean to tell me that all these furs come from Kashmir?"

"No, they don't, Modom," he said slyly. "Some of them are self-exiled and came over from their countries to liberty with us." Better than that, nobody could put it.

Abdul, too, was in business and tried to sell me a series of seven stone eggs. Each stone egg, rubbed marble smooth, had a medicinal function, and you applied it to an affected part of your body.

"Dark green is for fever and the heart," explained Abdul. "The light green takes weight off the feet. The mottled green is for not tired in walking. White is for the stomach. Black cools the eyes and tongue. Red is for headache. Cyclamen is for love and the night."

Really, he didn't ask too much. Seven times $10 to cure all the ills of your life.

To swim, we had only to dive over the rim of lotus pads around the Princess Margaret into the lake whose waters were the cleanest I have ever known. If so much as an empty cigarette pack floated on the surface, women in patrol shikaras fished it up so that no foreign matter could disturb the crystal clearness of the lake.

Sometimes we stretched out lizard-like in the sun on the upper veranda deck of the Princess Margaret and slowly picked out lotus seeds for our lunch. A little nephew of Abdul smilingly offered us a few pods. It was slow, pleasant work to open them up. The seeds tasted like fresh, ungrilled almonds.

Whenever a kingfisher flew by, a streak of pure intense blue, we thrilled with the skipped beat of pleasure. In the past, the jewelers used to fashion the soft breast feathers of the kingfisher painstakingly into small beads more blue than turquoise and now as prized as precious stones. Mesmerized, we watched the powerful jet propulsion of an eagle circle above our heads in the distilled air.

It was hard to leave such enchantment, even for a few hours, but occasionally we would take a shikara to Dal Gate where Majid would have a taxi waiting to take us sightseeing. One evening we arranged a dinner party at the Capri for Majid, Habib, and another of his friends. The friend, in turn, invited us to his club which could not have been more pukka even in the days of the British Viceroy. The reciprocal invitations could have gone on for months, but our visit had to end. The day we left, we chose to go without announcements, preferring to leave our friendships suspended rather than hammering them closed with formal good-byes.

My last tangible contact with Kashmir is a letter from A[illegible] ends with a recipe for:

"Tart for tea with oni[illegible] curry. We call this to be Fl[illegible] he wrote, "and perhaps [illegible] member you were happy [illegible] them at afternoon tea.

The notes of a happy housekeeper

BY MARY ELIZABETH FALTER

The lovely soft rains we have been having are not only good for the water supply and our autumn garden, but for our house plants as well. Every time it looks as though the rain will last awhile, I rush the house plants out onto the lawn to be gently cleaned and refreshed. I have even revived a dusty bunch of rhododendron leaves by the same system. But I have learned to restrain myself if there's any wind with the rain, as the pots will tip over and crush the plants.

I am anxious to acquire some of the newest Teflon-lined cookware. It is not only tough, and easy to clean, but rarely stains—a point I specially appreciate because we have most of our pans hanging on an open rack in the kitchen. Our newest acquisition is not hanging on the rack, however, it is sitting proudly right on the counter—a new Regal Automatic Electric Skillet with a roomy domed lid, completely lined with Teflon. I keep it out, always on the ready for all kinds of quick cooking. Last night we used it for fried chicken. The lid kept the fat from spattering as the chicken crisped, but the vent in the lid allowed the steam to escape so the chicken didn't get soggy. When clean-up time came, all I did was pour off the extra fat, wipe out the pan with paper towels, and rinse it in suds.

When old Teflon becomes stained or begins to show signs of sticking, I've discovered that a solution of Club Teflon Reconditioner in water will restore its sticklessness. You just simmer the solution for half-an-hour in the marred pan or casserole, rinse it carefully, and dry. The finish should be almost as good as new.

* * *

One of the handiest things in our kitchen is our little Swedish pot scrubber that looks like an old-fashioned bundle of twigs. It is, in fact, made of sturdy broom straws, about 6 inches long, tied tightly in the middle with heavy cord. I bought it in an esoteric kitchen shop where I was told its proper use was as a whisk for blending sauces, scrambling eggs, and the like. For us, it assumed the scrubber role more or less by accident, since it was just the right size to tuck behind the sink faucet. A quick flip of this little broom under running water quickly prepares a pan or dish for the dishwasher, and it rinses clean in seconds. I'd like to have a second one to reserve for sauces and gravies.

Dishwasher tip: I have learned always to put sharp knives in the silverware basket point down. The blades won't go far enough through the grids of the basket to let the knives slip through, and I am spared many a little jab or cut when I reach into the dishwasher to unload.

My usual attack on any new appliance is to leap in and start playing a sort of Russian roulette with all the shiny buttons and knobs, hoping for the right results as I go. Dazzled by the newness, I just can't bother to read the pedantic and often complicated literature provided by the average manufacturer. Almost anyone would admit that the prose is far from deathless, and much of it discourages the buyer by supposing he is half engineer and half home economist. Tom, however, manages to work his way through it, and I must concede that calmly and carefully

Even after 4 inspecti Irene Loin can send them back t the barrel.

We tell our first four inspectors, "Keep your eyes open. Be tough!"

But we don't bother saying anything to our fifth inspector. She's an inspector's inspector. And she could probably spot a flaw in her sleep.

Irene examines each piece of sterling, one by one. If she finds the slightest flaw (a nick maybe, or a little roughness) she sends it back.

Then it'll go through every single step again. Including the five inspections.

Any more than a slight flaw and back it goes to the barrel. The scrap silver barrel. Irene knows that every piece must be worthy of our "IS" maker's mark. That mark stands for our reputation. And we don't risk our reputation on sterling that's less than perfect. We'd rather have a full barrel.

We're introducing the new patterns you see here with a very special offer.

This month only you get, free, a pair of three-branch, 12½ in. high sterling candelabra (worth $100) with each 36-pc. service for 8. All you pay is $332 for either Snowflake or Crystal. This offer ends October 31, 1966.

reading the instructions before touching any new appliance is the right way to do things.

I learned a good lesson from the blender fiasco—it could have been averted if I had read the page in the book that gave a little list of all the things the blender would not do. It plainly states that a blender will not crush ice. mash potatoes, chop raw meat, or beat egg whites until stiff. Eventually I tried every one of these with, of course, futile results. Knowing what not to do is quite as essential as knowing what to do.

The new window shades we installed in our bedroom and the guest room last summer proved so successful we have ordered them for all the other bedrooms. They are made of tough Exlite cloth that is sunfast, stain-resistant, and fire-resistant, plus being vinyl-coated for easy cleaning. But their chief virtue is that they are milium-lined, which means they are not only lightproof, but have an insulating quality as well. During the summer the milium lining acted as a heat reflector and really did help to keep the rooms cool. In our room where we have an air-conditioner, I'm sure that with these shades drawn, the machine didn't have to run so long or so often at full blast. The milium will work the same way in winter, giving the window some insulation against extreme cold. Made by Joanna Western Mills, the shades come in a wide range of colors and patterns. One is a nice striped ticking pattern that I would like very much for Tommy's room.

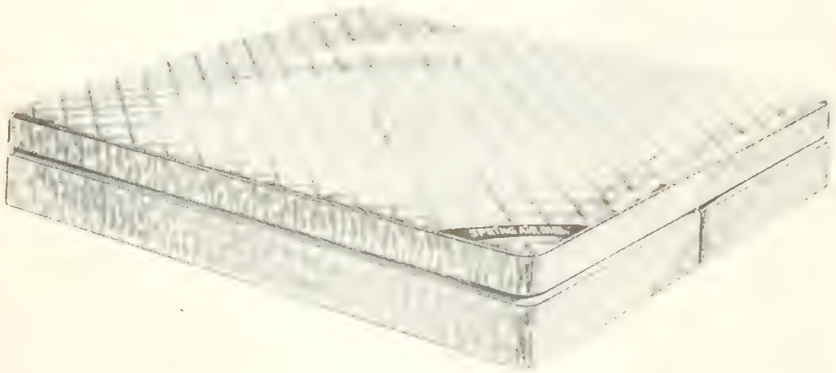
Thinking of buying a King-Size foam rubber mattress?

Here are some thoughts to sleep on

THOUGHT ONE . . . only Spring Air gives you a selection of two degrees of firmness in one mattress. Firm on one side, firmer on the other.



THOUGHT TWO . . . only Spring Air has a special "Health Center" to provide additional support from shoulder to knee where 70% of your weight rests.

THOUGHT THREE . . . the Spring Air Back Supporter is supremely comfortable. Controlled density of the foam rubber means a happy combination of comfort with support.

THOUGHT FOUR . . . you'll sleep cool on this foam rubber mattress because you don't sink in it.

THOUGHT FIVE . . . the foam rubber core is molded as a single piece for uniformity and longer life. And it's non-allergenic.

THOUGHT SIX . . . with King-Size you get 56% more sleeping area than an ordinary double bed. Naturally, you'll be more comfortable.

AFTER THOUGHT
The Spring Air King-Size Foam Rubber Mattress is no problem when it comes to going through doorways and around corners.

RCA Victor Stereo... for realism that rivals the concert hall

Cincinnati Music Hall, like a fine stringed ument, seems to mellow and become more itiful with the passing years. The venerable is marking its 88th year as host to the ld's fine music. And the Cincinnati Sym- ny, for whom the Hall is home, was selected year by the State Department as the first erican orchestra for an around-the-world tour. Whether your choice is symphony or swing, 'll enjoy it most on an RCA Victor Solid State eo. And you'll also enjoy the beauty of fine furniture craftsmanship. The magnificent Finlandia shown above combines elegant Danish Modern styling with an audiophile's dream of matched and balanced stereo components.

For instance, there's a full 300 watts of peak power at your command in the Solid State amplifier—for premium performance from either recordings or the sensitive FM-AM and FM Stereo radio. Imagine all that power, combined with an enclosed, air-tight 8-speaker sound system: two giant 15" woofers, two 7" mid-range speakers, two 3½" tweeters and two exponential horns for a silky quality of "presence."

RCA Victor's gentle Feather Action Tone Arm has a Duralife* diamond stylus. And RCA Victor Studio-Strobe assures accurate turntable speed.

Let your RCA Victor dealer prove our claim of "realism that rivals the concert hall." See him. You'll understand why more people own RCA Victor phonographs than any other kind.

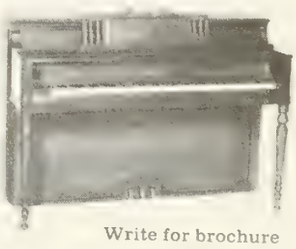
The concert hall piano for people who don't give their concerts in a concert hall.

A piano that sounds its best in a concert hall can sound wrong in a living room. There's a reason.

To keep music lovers happy in the concert hall, you need a piano that rates high in both tone and volume. But put the same piano in a living room, and it might just drive everyone out. The sound is too big.



Now take Chickering.

We have all the richness and sonority it takes to please the critical ear. It has the concert hall tone all right. Only we make the volume on strictly a living room scale. After all, you don't have to reach people in the balcony.

Our action is smooth and swift enough for professionals. Or for someone who just wants to playfully finger out Brahms' Lullaby.

You'd have to say Chickering is somewhat intimate. It's more friendly around the price tag, too.

The plain fact is, we've done more than anyone else to improve the sound and mechanics of pianos. And we've been doing it longer (144 years to be exact). So there's no reason we can't say our family piano sounds as good as anyone else's concert piano. We've simply never cared to be loud about it. That's all.

Cannon's Fantasia does for your bedroom what a mink coat does for you

Here's the most glorious decorating gesture you can make. A great sweep of bedspread breathing color, texture, grandeur. The look is handloomed. The fringe is sumptuous. The effect, breathtaking indeed. Fantasia is just one of a whole scope of decorating moods you'll find in the Royal Family Bedspread Collection. From $25 (twin size) with a beautiful air of being at least double the price. At fine department stores. Cannon Mills, Inc., N.Y. 10020

CANNON Royal Family of Home Fashions

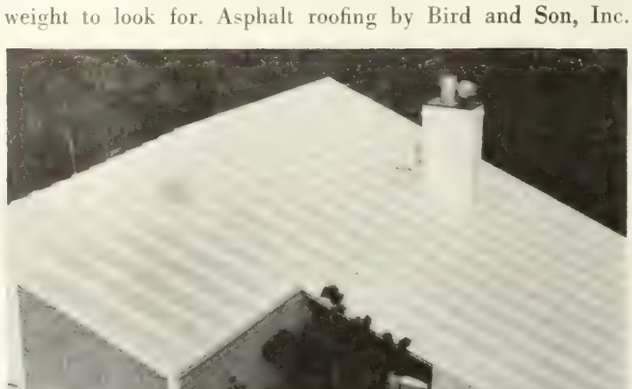
Take a close look at our imposing balustrade lamp. Every single one of its 34 inches is meticulously crafted. Finished in distressed fruitwood. Our bronze is aged and the entire lamp is hand polished. Then it is fitted with a champagne shade of silky slub texture over vinyl or an opaque black parchment. These days, it's almost impossible to find such quality at any price. We give it to you for about $150. For a handsome illustrated folio of our lamps, send 25¢ to The Stiffel Company, Chicago 60610.



NEW ROOFING WITH A TIMELESS LOOK

New materials are appearing in familiar guises and traditional materials are taking new forms

In all one-story and many two-story houses the greatest proportion of exterior material is on the roof. So if you are planning to put a new roof over your head, it would certainly pay to consider carefully both the style and quality of the products available before you make a choice. Today there is a tremendous selection of new roofing materials with interesting textures and attractive colors. Traditional roofings such as slate, terne, and wood shakes are appearing in asbestos, plastic, or asphalt versions that often look exactly like the real thing and offer certain advantages of lighter weight or greater fire resistance, or lower cost. Here are four of the new products and one old one, newly applied

Asphalt roofing is now both thicker and heavier than before, which makes it more wind-resistant and creates interesting shadow patterns as well. The heavier that asphalt roofing is, the better—290 pounds per 10-by-10-foot square is a good weight to look for. Asphalt roofing by Bird and Son, Inc.

Sheets of plywood faced with white polyvinyl fluoride plastic film make a roofing that resembles terne, but is less expensive. Triangular batten strips covered in the same plastic conceal the plywood joints. Roof installed by Emil Hanslin Associates.

HOW TO BECOME AN OPERA BUFF

BY FAUBION BOWERS

"Opera is a phase," someone has said, "through which every sensible person has to pass." Some of us, once captured, never quit the "phase." We remain fanatic opera buffs all our lives. For us, no other esthetic pleasure touches quite so many feelings. Opera has sound, sight, and meaning—rational or foolish, literal or fanciful—and its burst of melody along with its stretches of dramatic tension add up to sheerest beauty. We turn to opera again and again, in stress, in joy, in loneliness, or amid hosts of friends. Nothing, it seems, is quite so satisfying, all-around, total, and continuing.

If you live in a good-size town, or near a big city, you may see opera once a year, perhaps because someone invites you or simply because it's the thing to do. And chances are that unless you are dedicated, you are bored, for opera is a complex art. It includes not only music (vocal as well as instrumental) but drama, that is, a plot with words (almost always in a foreign language) as well as costumes, scenery, and often a ballet. All these aspects may not be on the same artistic level, although each contributes excitement to the whole. But the sum of them is enough to bewilder anyone seeing an opera for the first time, and, as everybody knows, it is only a short step from bewilderment to boredom. Unlike instrumental music, most of which you can comprehend and enjoy at first hearing (it's shorter for one thing), opera demands some foreknowledge. Even an opera sophisticate gets more out of a first-time-for-him opera if he knows something about it ahead of time.

Fortunately, boning up on opera need not be a grim matter of conscientious study—it is in fact part of the fun of seeing the opera itself. And today you can do it at home without budging from your armchair. The secret is to do it in easy stages.

Pick an opera (we'll tell you how, later), and start by reading the plot. This will take you ten minutes, but it is essential—not only because most operas are performed in foreign languages, but because it is not easy to follow the sense of words that are being sung quickly. Even when singers have excellent diction, you miss a lot. Then, too, the language of construction is not apt to be familiar prose rhythms, for opera is a marriage of poetry—syntax and sentiment—and music.

Even if you hear an opera for the first time in English, it can still be a baffling experience. Ask someone who has attended The Rake's Progress without the proper briefing. And many a tourist has tasted the disappointment of going to the opera with an Italian only to find that unless it was a staple familiar to everybody, he simply couldn't grasp the words fast enough to explain what was happening. A firm understanding of the plot will carry you through long dawdling recitatives that otherwise might seem meaningless, to the dramatic and musical high spots.

Opera tasting

Which opera should you pick? Start your exploration by investing $1.50. Buy a 50 cent paperback that gives the stories of the great operas, then, for $1, send for "The Angel World of Opera" (Angel Records, Hollywood and Vine Streets, Hollywood, Calif.).

Here is a record that generously samples nine scenes from nine different operas—Italian, French, German, and Russian—sung by some of the finest vocalists of our generation, a generation uncommonly blessed with an abundance of great singers (another reason to start your exploration of opera without delay).

Listen casually to this record. Remember it is not medicine. See if any one selection from the cross-section particularly attracts your attention. It might be Maria Callas spitting fireworks in the "Gypsy Scene" from Carmen, or Elizabeth Schwarzkopf's lament of lost love, in her voice of velvet, as the Countess from The Marriage of Figaro. On the male side, you are almost certain to be drawn to Franco Corelli's ringing resonances as the political figure in Andrea Chenier, or to the overwhelming intensity of the coronation scene from Boris Godounov where the conscience-twisted tsar is lost amid the sonorous bells of Moscow pealing from every church top.

ARMOR-GARD PLASTIC TOPS

The next step: pursue your inclination, and get a "highlights" record of the particular opera you have liked. Whereas a complete opera can demand three or four hours of listening, records composed of selections from an opera condense time into comfortable listening periods. Having read the plot, you move with it logically from peak to peak, but omit the details and the hard-to-follow filling. For the learner who wants intensive, although pleasurable, exposure, "highlights" are the answer.

Even if you go no further by way of preparation—reading the plot and listening to the highlights—you'll find that your initial hearing of any given opera will already be magnified manyfold.

Added ingredient

But full appreciation of an opera also involves appreciation of the human voice, which is, obviously, something quite different from enjoying instrumental music. There are certain delights you derive almost exclusively from opera. For instance, the techniques of the coloratura soprano. Her trills and roulades are so patently difficult, you are likely to feel you are at a sports event or in a circus arena. The bird-like or flute-like singing does in fact suggest feats of athletics or the dangers of tightrope walking. If someone should hint at the fact that you are responding to virtuosity rather than art, just remember that you are taking an all-important first step. Soon, you will proceed beyond pyrotechnics.

Today the greatest coloratura of all times—Joan Sutherland, now forty and at the pinnacle of her blazing career—may be heard on any number of brilliant records. You might start with her primer album The Art of the Prima Donna (London A 4241; 1214). It provides a panoramic view of every aspect of this type of intricate, pearl-like, incredible, and unbelievably exquisite vocalization.

For quite different types of voices, listen to Crespin or Price. Régine Crespin will appeal if you like a fullblown voice manipulated in the grand manner of tradition. Crespin Sings Verdi Arias (Angel 36311/S36311) with its sonorously rich interpretations of both the music and its poetic meaning gives abundant rewards. If you would like to let her lead you to a more complicated kind of opera, play her The Voice of Wagner (Angel 35832/S-35832). On this disk she shows another face.

Another dramatic soprano of even more scintillating skill is Leontyne Price. Listen to her Prima Donna (RCA Victor L[illegible] LSC 2898), and you will hear [illegible] soar with intelligence, individu[illegible] ity, and a voice of molten go[illegible] through a selection of the gre[illegible] emotional arias of the best ope[illegible] on the boards today. Miss Pri[illegible] whose personality is as fiery as h[illegible] art, pours all of herself into ope[illegible] The result: drama of a high ord[illegible] along with matchless singing.

If you fancy Russian opera, want a masculine voice for rel[illegible] from the tessitura of high "C-s[illegible] get Fritz Wunderlich Sings Hig[illegible] lights from Tchaikovsky's "Eug[illegible] Onegin" and "The Queen Spades" (Angel 36376/S-36376). Much as Tchaikovsky suffers fro[illegible] being too popular, his operas—[illegible] his tenderest and most perfe[illegible] works—have been happily, fro[illegible] one point of view, neglected. The[illegible] will come as a wonderful surpris[illegible]

Before long you will be read[illegible] to try an entire opera. To mak[illegible] it really easy on yourself and you[illegible] family, you might start with th[illegible] sound track of the French filn[illegible] The Umbrellas of Cherbourg, com[illegible] posed by Michel LeGrand (Con[illegible] noisseur Collection, Philips PC[illegible] 216/PCC 616). This sad-swee[illegible] touching music, so naturally writ[illegible] ten that ordinary dialogue sound[illegible] as if it had always been sung, take[illegible] you from the garage to the um[illegible] brella store to the jewelry shop, through a wedding and a street fight, into, as you may remember, the heartrending dignity of the farewell. This is thoroughly contemporary music, with the charm of sprinkled stardust and human affection. Yet it is opera, and because of this, each word is a battery of feeling charged with the electricity of life.

For something more conventional, pick one of the shorter operas. Puccini, for instance, has written some masterful one-acters, which are both simple and supreme within their brief span. If you decide that to start you would like to try your endurance on a continuous line of purest song, spun like a captivating web of melody, buy Victoria de los Angeles' recording of Sister Angelica (Angel L35718).

Or if you think you would like something earthy, and can stomach close-to-life realism, there is The Cloak (Il Tabarro, London 4151; 1151). Set on the banks of the Seine, this opera presents grimy characters crushed by poverty and entangled in a tragedy of domestic infidelity. Puccini has given us some dark and profound moments stolen straight from newspapers.

Now, try following the text as you listen to its music. Every record album contains a libretto or word-by-word story, and for maxian emotional outlet that plugs in!

We're all human. At the end of some days we're tired, tense, irritable. Other times, we're so full of life we want to "explode" with joy.

What's the best way to express either emotion? Sit down at a Conn Organ—and make music. What a wonderful, soul-satisfying way to relieve tension or let the world know everything's all right. And you can "emote" even if you can't read a note of music.

How? With Conn's remarkable new learning method, "Instant Music." In minutes you will be playing familiar tunes. All you have to know is your alphabet from "A" to "G." (It's fun, too!)

Obviously, any home-style organ will provide an emotional "release." But a Conn Organ offers more. The Conn is a professional-quality instrument—hand-crafted by the world-famous music men at C. G. Conn, Ltd., in Elkhart, Indiana.

There are eleven handsomely-crafted models to choose from. Prices start at $895 and your Conn dealer can arrange easy terms. Let him seat you at a Conn Organ where the cares and troubles of the world just melt away—into music.

THE YEAR OF THE BED

BY MARY C. BURKE

Benjamin Franklin loved a cool fresh bed so much that he recommended two beds per person, the second ready to be moved into when the first warmed up—according to researchers Gay Gaer Luce and Dr. Julius Segal, authors of the new book titled *Sleep. Winston Churchill, they say, shared the same partiality for multiple beds. Others are not so fussy.

Scientific inquiry has revealed that people can sleep anywhere, and do. Indian fakirs nestle cosily on beds of nails; cowboys nap in the saddle. But it is a moot question whether the sleep-anywhere types get the deep refreshing kind of sleep that relaxes muscles, evaporates tensions built up during the day, and leaves them, on awakening, feeling younger, vigorous, ready to face another day. This is the kind of sleep that doctors mean when they say "get plenty of rest"—not an excessive number of hours, but a reasonable period of comfortable repose. An average of six to eight hours, depending on the individual, is considered normal. (Sleep hounds who demand more are, according to psychiatrists, probably trying to escape from reality.)

The basics

What you sleep on—the mattress plays a big part in determining whether the hours you spend in bed will be spent in tossing and fretting or in actually sleeping and recharging your batteries. But the right mattress must be right for you. Some like them soft, some almost as hard as a board. Some like them bouncy, some prefer them to stay reliably put. The relative merits of an innerspring, latex foam, urethane foam, or the old-fashioned (and expensive) hair mattress can be debated endlessly. For the newest mattresses, manufacturers have tried to combine the virtues of two or more materials or construction—a padding of smooth soft foam over firm innersprings, for instance, or a padding of resinated cotton for coolth over resilient foam.

The best way to test a new mattress is to lie on it and compare it with your present mattress for comfort and support. Don't be shy about becoming part of the mattress display in the bedding department. A common sight in any bedding department is a determined customer stretched out, usually with eyes tightly closed in the vain hope that no one will [illegible] him, murmuring to the approaching salesman, "just testing."

To be comfortable in bed [illegible] means having enough room to move around. For example, a standard double bed, 54 inches wide, permits a mere 27 inches, the width of a baby's crib, to each of two sleepers. So unless you are buying a double bed as a roomy expanse for one person, consider the super-sizes. Today, these have become practically standard, and the mattress, bedding, and furniture manufacturers are collaborating to make all the basics and trappings of a bed available in queen and king sizes as well as in double and twin. You can buy extension rails to make standard bedsteads accommodate larger mattresses and there is also a conversion kit with which you can do the job yourself.

But don't expect even the best mattress to remain comfortable forever. Periodic examination should be a routine. As you make bed, keep an eye out for signs of deterioration such as loss of firmness and resiliency, visible hills and valleys, lumping, squeaking, or worn, torn, or shifting cover. It is economically sound to watch carefully for any of these signs so that you can replace the mattress before it begins to erode the quality of your sleep. The chances are good that an aching back doesn't need a doctor nearly as much as it needs a new mattress.

The proper mattress for a young child is most important for his correct growth. Never pass on a used mattress for the child's first big bed even if it looks "like new." If you are ready to discard a mattress, it is not good enough for the young sleeper. If he is uncomfortable in his first real bed he may never learn good sleep habits, or he won't know the pleasure of stretching out and relaxing.

Once you have the right mattress, you will also want properly sized pillows. As beds grew bigger so have bed pillows. You may now have your favorite filling—goose down, acrylic fiber or fiberfill in two larger sizes, 23 by 29 inches for queen-size beds and 21 by 36 inches for the king-size. One new pillow made of Fortrel fiberfill is guaranteed to be completely machine washable and may be tumble dried without any danger of lumping or matting. Mattress pads are also made to accommodate the larger size beds and may be pur
